But by this time the Indians had betaken themselves behind a slight rise in the ground, where they remained out of sight. They had evidently withdrawn for consultation or with a view to getting the strength of their new enemy. Buckers and the whites below also ceased to fire since they could do no damage. Buckers called to their commander, suggesting that it might be well to direct one of the party to crawl through the cactus to the crest; that by firing from different points at the same time the two above might further make it appear that there were not more than one person there.

It appeared to the father that whoever succeeded in separating himself from the party might have a better chance for his life, and, desiring to give this advantage to his daughter, he directed her to do as Buckers had suggested. The redskins detected her and sent a shot at her which raised the dust only a foot from her, but she succeeded in her attempt.

When Buckers saw an attractive girl who had come to fight with him for her life and the lives of all concerned a new resolve came to him that they should win. There was an eager light in the girl's eye as she asked what she should do. Buckers, who since she had been fired at in joining him had lost confidence in his ruse, told her to lie flat beside him and wait for orders.

The Indians appeared again, scattering at first in order to distract the whites, then suddenly making on converging lines for the wagon. Buckers called to those behind it to aim at the savages nearest the center, told the girl beside him to fire at those on the Indians' right, while he would cover the left and any such individuals as he thought it an advantage to put out of the fight.

This dividing up the enemy between them proved to be very effective. The savages had not covered half the distance between their starting point and the wagon when a dozen of their warriors had been dropped. They hesitated, broke and scurried for cover.

There was a shout, and a dozen cowboys came galloping toward the wagon.

Buckers turned and looked at the girl beside him; she turned and looked at him. There are moments when our emotions sweep away conventionality. These two had met for the first time half an hour before. Death had then stared them in the face. Now all were safe. Yielding to an impulse that seized upon both at once, they threw their arms about each other's neck, and the man covered the girl's face with kisses.

Buckers had not been on the crest an hour, but he had been there long enough to save the lives of the family. When his first shot cracked the savages were about to make a charge that would have been successful. He had stood them off just long enough for the cowboys to come in and make the safety of their intended victims certain.

Night was coming on, and the cowboys threw up an earthwork in a circle about the wagon and the stock, and pickets were put out for the night, but morning dawned without an attack and not a redskin was to be seen. Then under a sufficient guard the family who had so narrowly escaped death moved on.

The adventure brought a great change to Jim Buckers. For him and for the girl he loved it stood in lieu of a long courtship. When Jim told her he wished her to be his wife she could not well say him nay, for had it not been for him she would not have had a life to give any one. The family stopped at a settlement, entered land and built a home. Jim stopped, too, and never moved on. He had found an anchor, and the spot where its fluke entered the soil is now the center of a prosperous farm. He is much interested in the crops he raised, but one crop he has raised to beat all the rest—eight children, now mostly grown.

All this happened years ago, when the buffalo still roamed on the plains and the redskin was a terror to emigrants and settlers. Yet it was not so long ago after all, since it is within the memory of middle aged men.

A SUFFERER FROM KIDNEY TROUBLE FOR TWO YEARS.

When the kidneys get ill the back gives out. But the back is not to blame. The ache comes from the kidneys, which lie under the small of the back

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble.

Plasters and liniments will not cure the bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it.

Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys themselves. They are a special kidney and bladder medicine. They heal the diseased surface of the kidneys and bladder, and help them to act freely and naturally

Miss Mary A Northrop, Cole's Island, N B, writes: "I have been a sufferer from kidney trouble for two years. I tried quite a number of remedies, but they did me no good. My mother got me a box of Doan's Kidney Pills, and they did me so much good that I got the second one, and when I had taken that I was completely cured."

Doan's Kidney Pills, are the original kidney pills. See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is on every box. Price, 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MEDIC CORPS WILL GUARD SWEEPERS FROM GERMS.

This was announced by the street cleaning department. It is said that the death-rate in the department has ranged in recent years from 11 to 14 per cent. of the number employed.

In one year seven sweepers were killed in accidents and 938 were injured.

FLEES FROM WAR TO SAVE FAMILY NAME

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—Fearing he was about to be called to join the colors, which would mean if he were killed that the proud family name would be extinguished, Count George Gretchinoff is hiding somewhere in San Francisco after fleeing Russia.

Count Gretchinoff arrived on the liner Nippon Maru from Honululu, and lost no time in dropping from sight. Gretchinoff's father joined the Russian forces at the outbreak of the war, and has never been heard of. His brother also had been missing for months. The count is the last male of the family. Answering the plea of his mother, who feared the family name would be completely extinguished, he fled to Petrograd, where he was connected with the consular service.

WOMAN SUFFERAGE.

Its War Time Aspect.

London, Eng. The women of England are doing their duty. They are taking care of the wounded, or if they cannot assist in work of that kind they are adding their savings to promote the good work. They are knitting and sewing for the soldiers at the front. The suffragists have given so little trouble to the government that it will undoubtedly soften the hearts of those in Parliament, since the "militants" have turned all their energies to aid the fighting men of England, and so suffrage may soon come after this terrible war is over.

Thousands of women in Canada have overcome their sufferings, and have been cured of woman's ills by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This temperance medicine, though started nearly half a century ago, sells most widely to-day, because it is made without alcohol or narcotics. It can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid, and every woman who suffers from backache, headache, nervousness, should take this "Prescription" of Dr. Pierce. It is prepared from nature's roots and herbs and does not contain a particle of alcohol or any narcotic. It's not a secret prescription for its ingredients are printed on wrapper.

Many a woman is nervous and irritable, feels dragged down and worn out for no reason that she can think of. In ninety-nine per cent. of these cases it is the womanly organism that requires attention; the weak back, dizzy spells and black circles about the eyes, are only symptoms. Go to the source of trouble. When that is corrected the other symptoms disappear.

St. Thomas, Ont.—"I wish to say for the benefit of other women who suffer that I recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a great help. I have personally recommended the same to many who in turn have been helped a great deal by its use." Mrs. F. J. Bowman, 19 Olive St., St. Thomas, Ont.

AMERICAN WITH BRITISH KILLED IN DARDANELLES

William Chilcutt, of Iola, Victim of War—His Boon Companion Wounded.

ST LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 9.—Eugene E. Moise, a young St. Louisan who has been with the British expeditionary forces in the Dardanelles, has written a letter to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene L. Moise, telling how he was wounded in trench fighting. His letter has disclosed the fate of three young Americans who shipped to England as muleteers and then joined the Seventh Lancashire Fusiliers.

Moise reported himself as recovering from wounds. His boon companion, William Chilcutt, 17, of Iola, Kan., is dead, and Charles Martin, of Kansas City, is missing.

Moise, when writing was not aware that Chilcutt had been killed in battle. But as he had not heard of Chilcutt he carried out a plan, arranged by the three Americans, by which it was agreed that if the friends became separated, one would write to the parents of the other in an effort to learn his companion's whereabouts, or whether or not he still lived.

Moise's letter to Chilcutt's parents was written Sept. 10 from the Canadian Hospital at Cairo, Egypt, where Moise had been taken when wounded. "In our last advance," he wrote, "I saw 'Big Boy,' my pet name for your son, just before we charged the Turks' advance trench I did not see Will after that, for I was wounded shortly after we took the trench. I had a bayonet wound in my thigh, a bullet in my neck and arm and chest, and I had to be started to the beach quickly, and so did not have time to hunt 'Big Boy' up. But the last time I saw him, Will was enjoying himself wasting powder on the Turks."

Moise was wounded Aug. 8. He said he expected to be sent to London.

Chilcutt's parents have been notified of his death by the British Foreign Office. Condolences from Lord Kitchener accompanied the message.

The elder Moise says that his son, who is 22 years old, left St. Louis Feb. 22 last for New Orleans, whence he shipped to England. He says his son had returned to St Louis last January from England, after having spent a year in the English navy. Prior to the English navy service, he says his son had been four years in the American navy.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD.

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes: "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

THE EXAMINER

419 GEORGE ST.

Tsar, From Modest Headquarters Directs 1000 Mile Battle Line

PETROGAD, via London, Nov. 9.—In a white two story building in a town of perhaps 40,000 inhabitants, but resembling more nearly an overgrown village than a city, is stationed the staff which directs the defence of Russia against her enemies. The director in chief is Emperor Nicholas, and to this forlorn town, from the imperial palace of Tsarskoe Selo, he for the time being has banished himself in order that he may live in daily touch with the affairs of his armies in the field, advise with the officers and supervise the conduct of the war.

Although many hours journey by train from the nearest battle line, the Emperor and his staff are in almost instant communication by telegraph with all points along the thousand mile front, and nothing of importance occurs that is not flashed immediately to this controlling centre. It is in this building, which formerly was used for local government purposes, that the daily official communications to the world are written.

The chief of staff, General Michael Alexieff, is a modest man, about sixty years old, who shuns self-glorification. To a correspondent who asked him to relate the routine of his day's work he replied in substance that since the Emperor was commander in chief, and he merely a subordinate, nothing that he did from day to day could in his opinion be of the slightest interest to any one outside the army.

A stranger in the town in question finds little to induce him to prolong his stay. The hotels, of which there are several—the best leaving much to be desired—are pre-empted by the military, and one may canvass all without finding lodging unless he comes recommended by some one in military authority. The town is crowded with strangers, who have come from the territory overrun by the Germans. The streets until late at night are filled with streams of promenaders, civil and military.

Automobiles Seem Out of Place.

It is only at night that the place wakes up. Until nearly midday the many little shops that crowd each other along the two main thoroughfares keep their doors locked and their windows shuttered. Antiquated "Izvosschiks," as the public hacks are called, shamble out of the way of screeching high power automobiles carrying officers, the motordriven vehicles appearing incongruous in the century old setting of cobbled streets and high windowed and dingy stores.

Around the White Staff Building there is a solemn stillness. Sentries guard the entrance and open space in front, and none without official business may pass.

A civilian approaches, explains his business to one of the sentries and then waits at a distance until permission is given to enter. His reception is courteous. Everything moves with military precision within the walls. No dilitory tactics are permitted, and one is made to feel that the time of the officers is valuable.

Staff's Business Hours Long.

The correspondent had occasion to consult the same officer at headquarters at ten o'clock in the evening and ten o'clock in the morning without previous appointment, which may be taken as an indication that the staff officers' business hours are long.

The distress of the people growing out of the war is apparent on every hand. The floors of the railway waiting rooms at night serve as a sleeping place for scores of weary wayfarers. Aged men, women and children lie closely huddled, leaving a narrow aisle for the stream of traffic to and from the trains.

Further up the line the lights from camp fires disclose hundreds of persons living in wretchedness in crude board shelters, which only partly protect them from the freezing winds.

YOU'RE BILIOUS! LET "CASCARETS" LIVEN LIVER AND BOWELS

Get a 10-cent box now.

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have a bad cold.

Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills of castor oil?

Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet, liver and bowels regular, and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—never gripe or sicken.

"BOY" of 52 MAY BE SPANKED.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 9. — Judge Berlstein has decided that a father has the right to spank his son at any time regardless of age. Dennis Sullivan, fifty-two, who took exception to such treatment and struck his father, was sentenced to the Workhouse for twenty days.

"I thought dad was about to strike me," he offered in explanation.

"Dennis was right," said the father, as he took the stand. "I was about to spank him because he was not behaving right."

Senior Sullivan is ninety-one.

Cures Biliousness Prevents Brights Disease

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Long, Thrilling Chase Ends With Minelayer's Suicide

Why do we hear so little about the life nowadays in the North Sea? One cannot say much, but the story of the German mine-layer Meteor ought to be told.

It was about eight o'clock one night. We had returned to harbor the morning before after some strenuous days in the open sea, when the signalmen dashed in and pushed a signal block under the first lieutenant's nose.

The officers were just sitting down to the usual dinner of clear soup, filets of plaice, and inevitable roast beef, and sardines on toast. No. 1 turned to the engineer commander and said:

"Light cruisers raise steam with all despatch, chief, and I'll bet you 5 to 1 in bobs that it's another dud stunt. The high seas fleet has probably come out for its monthly trip round Heligoland, and in consequence I shall have to go without my dinner."

The first lieutenant, the senior engineer, and one or two other officers left the table, and very soon afterwards the sounds of running feet, ammunition barrow rumbling along the upper deck, and the vibration from the steering-engine being tested indicated that the ship was being rapidly prepared for sea.

Suddenly a head popped in through the doorway and a voice of a lieutenant cried, "I say, you fellows, I really believe there is something on this time. I have just overheard the skipper telling No. 1 that there is a Hun mine-layer out and we are going to try and cut her off."

Long Lithe Forms.

Shortly after 10 p.m., five long, lithe forms crept out of harbor and quickly worked up to the speed of an express train.

All lights went out, guns and torpedo tubes and look-outs placed.

The German armed mine-layer Meteor, disguised as an ordinary merchantman (as is now well known), with her guns and torpedo tubes carefully masked and flying the Russian colors, had succeeded in sinking one of our small examination steamers and was at that very moment on her way back to her base.

As the guns' crews kept their lookout, therefore, you can imagine how eagerly they discussed the chances of bagging her before she could reach port.

About 8 a.m.—after we had been steaming for about 12 hours—a string of flags were seen fluttering up to the masthead of one of the cruisers, and at the same moment the starboard look-out bellowed:

"Seaplane on the starboard beam, sir."

The news was received with a "very good" from the officer of the watch, who immediately pointed out the seaplane to the captain. The anti-aircraft guns were at once manned, but the seaplane was wise and kept out of range.

The squadron was now rapidly approaching the German coast, and would soon be in the zone where it was possible that the quarry might be found, but the North Sea is a large place, so that a long search is probable.

The look-out then reports Zeppelin on the port bow.

No need to man the guns for her, as it is known from experience that they keep outside the range of the guns. She or her sisters have had narrow shaves before as the result of being too inquisitive, and, anyhow, if by any chance she misjudges her distance the guns' crews are at their posts in less than five seconds.

The squadron was now only about fifteen miles from the German coast so the ships were spread to as great a distance as possible without getting out of touch with each other in order to cover a large area. Almost immediately a veil came from the fore-top:

"Smoke right ahead, sir."

Gradually two masts and then a funnel appeared, and the signalman, who had had his eye glued to a large telescope for about ten minutes, turned to the captain and said, "She has altered course, sir, and is steering in the opposite direction."

"Eh?" said the captain, picking up his binoculars and carefully examining the ship. "By Jove, so she has; I wonder what she has done that for? Surely we can't have had the luck to pick up our fellow already."

Again a hail, this time from the signalman.

"Submarine in sight on the starboard beam, sir."

The officer of the watch jumped to the voice pipe.

"Green 80, stand by, be cautioned" the guns; but careful search by everyone failed to reveal any further signs of the "U" boat. She must have dipped.

Anyway all the necessary precautions were taken and again we approached the strange steamer, which had now stopped close to several fishing craft. What was she up to?

Ready for a Broadside.

Everybody was on the "qui vive," the officers with telescopes fixed upon her and all the men standing by the guns with everything ready for a broadside, when suddenly there was a terrific explosion, and immediately we saw the stranger begin to settle down. What had happened?

No order had been received to fire and no shot had accordingly been fired. It was a mystery.

The officer of the watch ordered an extra good look-out for periscopes, but nothing appeared.

As the vessel was obviously doomed it was useless to send another hot into her—beside, we didn't know what had happened.

We were saved further anxiety, however, for suddenly another explosion rent the air and when the smoke had cleared the mysterious stranger had disappeared.

It was only upon approaching the fishing craft that the mystery was solved.

They were filled with British bluejackets who cheered lustily as one of our boats, launched to make investigations, approached and who told us that the ship that had just committed suicide was the famous German mine-layer Meteor, the captain having preferred to sink his own ship rather than let her get into English hands.

For this reason, knowing the game was up, he had taken his ship to within a few hundred yards of the fishing boats and then put off the crew of English sailors captured some days previously when that examination steamer we had been sent out to avenge had been sunk, and you can imagine how glad our fellows were at being saved from internment.

"Ah, well," said No. 1 to the chief as the ships' head turned toward home, "here's your live bob and worth it, even though she was only a mine-layer."

ELOPERS, DISGUISED, FOOL PARENTS AND WED.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 9.—Miss Lulu Sterner, known as the prettiest girl in Schuylkill Haven, and her fiancee, Russell R. Smith, succeeded in getting through a cordon of State police and county constables stationed to intercept them, and reached Elkton, Md., where they were married. The parents of both opposed the match, and even went to the extent of having trains from Pottsville bound to the Maryland border searched.

To avoid detention the couple separated and both were disguised. Smith clad in an old overcoat and wearing a pair of dark spectacles, passed right before his bride's father without being recognized.

The lid of a new tea kettle is at one side of the top and can be raised by pressing a knob with the thumb of the hand that is holding the kettle.

Thin People Gained Weight Quickly

By Following This Simple Suggestion

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First, weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take sargol one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and many thin men and women we believe can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it aims to turn the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten, into rich, ripe fat producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepare it in an easily assimilated form, which the blood can easily accept. Much of this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol works to stop the waste and do it quickly and to make the fat producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. All leading druggists in this vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back as found in each large box.

BRITAIN'S OLDEST REGIMENT.

Many correspondents have been discussing the question as to which is the oldest regiment in the British Army. That honour, says the Manchester Chronicle, rests with the Royal Scots (Lothian Regiment). Originally the "Scottish Guard" of the Kings of France, the regiment was formed in the Ninth century, and was constantly recruited from Scotland. In 1535 it was sent to England to attend the Coronation of Charles I., and revisited the country later to fight against the Parliamentary Army. In 1633 the Royal Scots were properly constituted as a regiment of the British Army, and named the First Royal Regiment. The regiment has a fine list of battle honours, and it is worthy of note, as showing their fighting qualities, that not a single reservist failed to join the colours when called upon to do so on the outbreak of the last South African War, and that throughout the campaign not a solitary officer or man surrendered to the enemy.

ADMIRATION FOR BRITISH SOLDIERS.

The greatest admiration for the British soldier is expressed. A German officer remarked that his men would rather meet any company of men than the British, because the latter keep cool, never lose their heads, never give in, and fight to the last. Men of 50 have been called up for the German Army, and the next call will be for boys of 16. No language but German is allowed in the streets. Americans are not permitted to speak their own tongue, under the penalty of fines. There is a great shortage of raw materials. Rubber has been smuggled in in the form of sausages. The scarcity is so great that no private individual in Berlin is allowed to use his automobile except a doctor. Rubber floors have been taken up, and every scrap in any simple form has been used.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed with Sulphur it Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we dont have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the nussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeths Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, it prevents dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair.

Cosmetics Not Needed: Peel the Skin Instead

One reason mercolized wax is so strongly recommended is that it really takes the place of several different cosmetics, saving time, patience and expense. It is better than any cleansing cream, better than any massage cream, and better than any rouge for accomplishing the results for which such articles are sold. As the wax actually absorbs an old, faded or discolored cuticle, a little each day, the underlying skin which gradually appears is clearer, softer, healthier-hued and more youthful than any cosmetic made complexion spreading on a thin coat of this wax at night, washing it off mornings, in a week or so produces a marvelous transformation. Just one ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will do the work. There's nothing better to remove freckles, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, blotches, pimples or blackheads.

For wrinkles and loose, saggy skin, a face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel, is the best thing that can be recommended. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties.

RECORDS SHOW WAR'S DRAIN ON YOUNG MANHOOD

LONDON, Nov. 8.—The most appalling fact deduced from a perusal of the official casualty list is the terrible drain the war is making on the young manhood of Great Britain.

During the twelve days following September 27, two days after the first phase of the long promised advance, the number of officers announced as killed, both officially and unofficially, was 779; during the same period after Neuve Chapelle the number was 564. (The total Neuve Chapelle casualties among officers and men were 12,811).

The obituary columns are rendered more tragic by the fact that most of the officers announced as killed during the great advance in the West were in their twenties. Of those who were killed after Neuve Chapelle and whose ages were given 106 were under and fifty over 30. After Sept. 27, 300 were under and 104 over. The majority were lieutenants.

At Neuve Chapelle.

Of those announced as killed during the twelve days following Neuve Chapelle, the ages were:

1 was 17	13 were 23	8 were 27
2 were 18	12 were 23	6 were 28
9 were 19	8 were 24	4 were 29
11 were 20	9 were 25	5 were 30
13 were 21	6 were 26

Of those announced during the same period after Sept. 25

1 was	17	5 were	22	24 were	27
13 were	18	16 were	23	7 were	28
21 were	19	24 were	24	18 were	29
29 were	20	31 were	25	8 were	30
37 were	21	18 were	26

Number of Obits Grows.

The following table shows how the number of obituary notices increased after the advance in France:

Sept. 27, 5	Sept. 30	Oct 1...47
Sept. 28, 8	three	Oct. 2...51
Sept 29 9	days	Oct 4...67
	after	Oct 5...89
	battle	Oct. 6...64
	began) 29	Oct. 7...63

Numerous cases occur of officers being killed on their birthdays.

Not All of Them.

The operazer was showing some visitors round the factory when the dinner bell rang, and the men stopped work and disappeared as if by magic. "Do all of them," said one of the guests smilingly, "drop their tools the instant the bell goes?" "Oh, no, not all of them," said the manager. "The more orderly ones have their tools put away before that time."

Was Troubled With BOILS ALL OVER HIS BODY.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms manifesting themselves are a breaking out on some part of the body of various sorts of bad blood troubles, such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc.

How many times have you met a friend with a handkerchief tied around his neck, and have asked him; "What is the matter with you?" "Oh! I have a boil on the back of my neck; I guess I will have to take something for my blood."

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters, and the speediest and most thorough method of expelling all the useless and corrupt matter from the blood is to use this old and well tried remedy that has been on the market for the past forty years.

Mr. W. E. Cockerill, Goldeu, B.C., writes: "I was troubled with boils all over my body, and my blood was very bad. I tried all kinds of medicines and salves, but got no relief. I had to quit work, as I could not stoop to do any thing. My boss told me to use Burdock Blood Bitters, after I had told him I had tried nearly everything else. I got one bottle of B.B.B., and before I had finished it the boils were all gone. It is the best blood cleanser I have ever taken. I have told several others who were suffering with boils, and they all say it is great medicine. I am forty-seven years of age, but I feel like sixteen since I got rid of the boils."

NEW BRITISH DIVISION HAS REACHED ALLIES IN SERBIA

British Forces Are Pushing Northward While French Are Also Advancing--Serbians Inflict Heavy Defeat on Bulgars---Repulse of German Assaults is Only News of Importance From the Western Front---British Destroyer is Wrecked.

TWO GERMAN SUBS SUNK OFF GIBRALTAR

PARIS, Nov. 10.—British troops, reinforced by a new division, eighteen thousand strong, occupies solidly the region north of Doiran, and are operating toward Strumnitza, where encounters between the British and Bulgars are already reported. The Bulgar attack in Krivolak testifies to the anxiety caused by the progress of the French troops beyond the Crena River, and their occupation of positions protecting Babuna Pass.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir Charles Munro is expected to arrive at once from Flanders to command the British forces.

ATHENS, Nov. 10.—British troops, moving to reinforce the French at Veles, have captured the Bulgar positions in the Doiran district, eight miles north the Greeco-Serbian frontier at a point where it is crossed by the railway.

The Serbians, ascending on the Bulgarians through Kutchanik defiles east of Prizrend, have also heavily defeated a Bulgar force which was advancing from Uskub against Prizrend.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—(Official).—A repulse of a German assault on the Givenchy wood, in the Artois region, was reported in to-day's official statement. "An artillery duel occurred in the vicinity of Sahure, in Champagne, and in Argonne, in the vicinities of Vauquois and Malancourt, combats with hand grenades raged throughout Tuesday night."

LONDON, Nov. 10.—One hundred shots were fired at the Italian liner Ancona by the submarine which sank her in the Mediterranean, a Rome despatch stated to-day.

MADRID, Spain, Nov. 10.—British cruisers sank two German submarines off Gibraltar to-day, reports received here declare.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The British torpedo boat Louis is stranded in the eastern Mediterranean coast, a total wreck, the Admiralty announced to-day. The crew was saved.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Nov. 10.—Fire destroyed No. 4 machine shop of the Bethlehem Steel Co. early to-day. Guns of various calibres were manufactured in the building. Munitions for the Allies and machinery worth several million dollars in the building were badly damaged.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The British steamship Clan Macalister was sunk to-day by a German submarine.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—One hundred and forty-two passengers and sailors from the torpedoed Italian liner Ancona have arrived at Ferryville, some of them so badly hurt that they had to be sent to hospitals.

The Ancona carried 422 passengers and a crew of 122. Two boats from the Ancona have landed at Cape Bon with 54 of the crew. Some were injured.

ROME, Nov. 10.—It has not yet been possible to learn whether there were any Americans among the 270 survivors of the Ancona landed at Bizerta, on the African coast. From the fact that first reports of the disaster said many of those landed are wounded, it is believed that there can have been very little, if any, warning given by the submarine.

No account has yet stated where the attack on the Ancona occurred. From the fact that survivors were landed at Bizerta, however, it is inferred that it must have been in the vicinity of the Tunisian coast. The Ancona carried a large general cargo, but being westbound, no arms or munitions, the company officials reported.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—Another serious submarine issue loomed up before the American Government to-day in the reported torpedoing of the Italian passenger liner Ancona by an Austrian undersea boat. While the report shocked officials here, the disposition was to suspend judgment until the facts are officially ascertained. Whether the Ancona was armed and attempted to escape by flight, and whether any Americans were killed were the crucial questions. The officials left no doubt, however, that this Government will not be tardy in proceeding vigorously with Austria if it develops that the Ancona was deliberately sunk.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A despatch to Lloyd's from Bizerta states that some Americans are said there to have been on board the Ancona.

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—Fresh forces of Austro-German and Bulgarian troops effected a junction to-day at Vlashkak, in the Serbian region, along the Orient railway. They are co-operating to put an end to the guerilla fighting and hasten the resumption of train operations.

Detaching forces from the army around Nish, the Bulgars pursued the Serbs southwards into Leskovac. In the Prilep region the French have suffered a repulse by the Bulgars. Strong Bulgarian forces operating in Southern Serbia made a strong drive against the French left wing on the Greek frontier, forcing it to retreat at several points. The losses on both sides were extremely heavy. Allied reinforcements are reported on their way from Salonika to Doiran and Gyengyeli.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—The British steamers Moorina and Californian have been sunk by German submarines, probably in the Mediterranean.

An up-to-date orchestra of 14 pieces, conducted by Corporal Leader, will furnish an excellent musical programme at both performances. A special feature picture, which has been secured at an extra expense, will be shown in conjunction with the big variety vaudeville acts and singing numbers. Open-air band concert in front of theatre afternoon and evening. If you cannot attend the afternoon show, be sure and come at night. Secure tickets at once from the boys in khaki. THE SOLDIERS' WIVES AND MOTHERS TO OPEN CLUB

At the concert in the Victoria Hall last night it was announced that the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club are going to establish a club for soldiers in the building at the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer Streets, opposite the Y.W.C.A. It is proposed to fit the rooms out comfortably, and to furnish it with games, reading matter, writing materials, etc. The building will be at the disposal of Peterborough's soldiers, and will be also available for any men back from the front, who may not perhaps have a home to go to. The women of the club are to be congratulated upon the magnificent work they are doing. Not satisfied with making the sacrifice of giving up their husbands and sons, they have supplied comforts for the men at the front, and now are going to help Peterborough's new soldiers. Any citizens who wish to assist in the furnishing of the club by supplying articles of furniture are asked to have them sent to the Fire Hall, Chief Howard having consented to take charge of them until the club is opened, which will be in the course of a few days.

PTE. REG. MURDUFF LAKEFIELD MEMBER OF 21st WOUNDED

Name of Well Known Lakefield Boy Appears on To-day's Casualty List---No Liquor to Be Kept in Regimental Messes---Promotions in the 93rd Battalion Announced ---To-day's Military News.

In the Canadian casualty list to-day appears the name of Pte. Reg. Murduff, one of the best known Lakefield boys in the ranks of the 21st Battalion. Pte. Murduff is officially reported wounded. He is the son of Mr. Geo. Murduff of Lakefield, who is employed in the Matthews-Blackwell Company here. Pte. Murduff enlisted in the early Resident enlistment with the Port Hope quota to the 21st Battalion at Kingston. He has a host of friends here as well as in Lakefield who will wish him a speedy recovery. Murduff formerly played hockey in the City Hockey League here with the Lakefield team.

He is reported as dangerously ill.

Headed by the band, the men of the 93rd Battalion left the armouries at 1.30 o'clock this afternoon on a route march. The school house on the Clonmore road was stated as the objective point, after which it was intended to strike east and return by way of the Lakefield road.

A company of the 93rd Battalion practiced company drill this morning under the direction of Company Sergt.-Major Hartshorn. The platoons were commanded by Lts. Stewart, Worth, Carter and Raymond.

In to-day's casualty list appears the name of Pte. Geo. Shouldice of the 36th Battalion, whose home is given as Burleigh, Ont.

Two provisional promotions in the 93rd Battalion were announced in orders yesterday. Pte. J. H. Watson, formerly of the recruiting staff, has been promoted to be provost sergeant of the battalion and Pte. Emile Baumer who has been one of the military police, has been appointed battalion pioneer sergeant. The two were among the first to join the new battalion. The provisional appointments so far in the 93rd are as follows:

Battalion Sergt-Major—T. Miller.
Battalion Quartermaster-Sergeant—R. G. Cottrell.
Orderly Room Sergeant—C. W. King.
Pioneer Sergeant—E. Baumer.
Provost Sergeant—J. H. Watson.

No. 1 Platoon, for the first time in the battalion series, failed to leave the field victors last night. They weren't beaten at that, but the best the League leaders could do was to divide two goals with No. 3 Platoon. Pte. McKinlay scored for No. 1 in the first period, and Pte. Kitchen equalized for No. 3 early in the second game of the season. Pte. A. Hardman handled the whistle.

Already the boys of the 93rd are talking of an Inter-Platoon hockey league this winter, and also of the possibility of having a regiment team in action. There is some good hockey material among the lads in khaki.

The Arrow Athletic Club have been doing their share to bring forth peace. Pte. Wm. Shepherdson went with the first Peterborough contingent. Pte. Edwards went with the 39th Battalion, C. Veenman is in England with the 8th C.M.R., C. Sharpe and Wm. Cummings are with the 33rd Battery, T. Francis, J. Simmons, C. Armstrong, C. Campbell and P. C. Schweier are here in the 93rd Battalion.

Word has been received here from the 3rd Divisional headquarters that no liquor is to be kept in the Armouries. An order that will do away with certain kinds of liquid refreshments in the officers' and sergeants' messes. Similar orders have been issued in connection with regimental messes throughout Ontario.

Battalion Quartermaster Sergeant R. G. Cottrell reported for duty with the 93rd this morning.

So far Cobourg has recruited only twelve men for the 93rd Battalion.

The transference of the Lindsay Company of the 93rd to the new 109th Battalion is expected in a day or two. Lt.-Col. Anderson, who was to have been junior major of the 93rd, will be second in command of the 109th.

Sergt.-Major Miller and Pte. Jas. Mackin of the 93rd Battalion, Ernest Griffin of the Snowden House and other former members of the Scots Guards, now living in Peterborough, will be interested in learning of the many honours won by the Guards in their fourteen months' fighting from Mons to Loos. Already the Scots Guards have won in the present war the following: Victoria Cross, 2; D. S. O., 6; Military Cross, 6; D.C.M., 2; mentioned in despatches (two twice), 23; C. M. G., 1; C. B., 1; Russian order, 1 officer; 5 N.C.O.'s and men, Legion of Honour, 2.

Have You Arranged With Billet Committee?

The Billeting Committee had another meeting yesterday evening. There are still quite a large number of billets required, and there are just ten days between now and the first session of the Conference. The arrangements in regard to billeting should be completed by next Tuesday night, when there will be another meeting of the committee. Kindly let the representative of your church know your intention to take boys to billet for this combined Sunday School and Y.M.C.A. Conference and thus save labour and anxiety.

Little Edna was trying in vain to thread her needle. "Mamma," she said finally, "I fink this needle must be asleep; I just can't get the thread in its eye at all."

BULGARIANS AND GREEKS REACH AN AGREEMENT

Athens Papers Claim Bulgaria Will Demobilize at the End of Its Serbian Campaign---Will Not Enter Monastir.

GREECE TO STAY OUT

ATHENS, Nov. 10. Bulgaria and Greece reached an agreement Tuesday which will keep Greece out of the war, according to the Athens press to-day.

The Bulgarian and Greek agreement provides that Bulgaria will demobilize at the end of its Serbian campaign and promise not to cross the Doiran-Gevgeyeli line or to enter Monastir. Should military operations against Monastir become absolutely necessary it is arranged that Germany shall conduct them without Bulgaria's participation.

ROME, Nov. 10. A decree ordering the demobilization of the Greek Army will soon be issued, according to an Athens despatch, which says only 50,000 men will be kept under arms.

PTE. REG. MURDUFF, Lakefield member of the 21st Battalion, who is to-day officially reported wounded.

SECTION FOREMEN ON G.T.R. SHOWN THEIR OWN WORK

GUESTS AT DINNER

The G.T.R. section foreman on the Peterborough division which extends from Lindsay to Belleville were given an ocular demonstration of the results of their work to-day when they, with other officials, were guests of the company on an annual inspection tour over this line. One coach of the special train which left the city at 2 o'clock this afternoon was fitted up as a miniature theatre, in the pit of which was a delicate oscillator to register the "bumps," if there were any, and so arranged that the men could easily see the movements of the indicator of the apparatus. The jaunt was really an object lesson to the men, and doubtless presented the condition of the road with a vividness and effectiveness which could not have been attained by endless circulars and talk. It is taken for granted that the oscillator showed some movement, and the foremen could see for themselves the conditions of their respective sections.

It was something of a holiday for the men, who were also the guests of the company at dinner at the Snowden House. It was stated that superintendents of the division from Chicago to Portland were on the train and among them were H. W. Coyle, J. D. McMillan, Mr. Satterd, the chief engineer, and Mr. Tom Yarrow, the superintendent of tracks in the Peterborough district. There were other officials of various departments.

A comparatively new policy of getting in touch with the ultimate workers was evidenced in this method of impressing the foreman with the results of their work and what remains to be accomplished. Cordial and open treatment of the men is part of the plan, and another attitude is the appreciation of the psychological principle that the mind generally grasps most readily the impressions which the eye receives. The oscillator told its own significant and silent story, and the condition of each section was laid bare to the assembled foremen who could compare their work, and doubtless resolve to remove irregularities in the roadbed wherever they were shown.

The response of the men to this new treatment is shown locally in the improvements and neatness of the yard. It is likely that this is a general result, the wisdom of which is so apparent that the wonder is that the scheme was not long ago adopted. The various section gangs, especially the foremen, realize that their efficiency is being tested, and a direct appeal is made to their spirit of pride in their work.

The seats in the last coach are raised one above the other as in a theatre, with accommodation for fourteen or a few more men. The idea is particularly appealing. Its beneficial results should be be gradually realized and should, in time, be apparent to the travelling public.

What Must I Pay For Glasses?

A question worth asking these hard times. Who does not know of some friends who has paid far too much for their glasses? No one will have cause to complain of the reasonable prices charged by Dr. W. H. Lacey, B.D., of the Peterborough Optical Parlours, for his glasses, whatever style, and in addition you are getting the very highest quality excelled by none and equalled by a very few. Glasses sold by us are not the expensive eye help that some people imagine. "See Us and see better." 440 George street. 'Phone 1166 or 1484. Opposite Examiner Office.

THE WEATHER

On this day last year the thermometer was down to 14 degrees, and during the afternoon about one inch of snow fell. Light falls of snow were frequent from that date onward. By the 20th of the month 4 inches lay on the ground and cutters and light sleighs were out sleighing, however, was not permanent until December 15th. On Nov. 10, 1915, the first fall of snow occurred for that winter, about one half inch falling. The previous day, Sunday, 9th was a day of very heavy rain and gales, and many disastrous wrecks occurred on the Great Lakes. There was no sleighing that winter until a few days before Christmas. We have been favoured with generally fine weather this fall and with as yet no heavy frosts. W. P.

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 10, 1915

TOO MANY REPRESENTATIVES.

The Vancouver City Council has decided to reduce the size of that body to eight. It is now sixteen, and the proposed reduction to take effect next January, will make a reduction in aldermanic salaries of $6,760. This will not be the only saving. The general expenditure will be lessened by every reduction of membership. Every member of a legislative body is an expense to the city, or province, or Dominion. In every civic or other body a member does not seem to consider himself doing his duty—to himself or his ward — or his constituency, if he doesn't do something, or get something that costs money. We do not pay our alderman any salaries, but they are responsible for a pretty large expenditure which would be less, with better value given, if the number of members were cut in half. A council of twelve or twenty finds it difficult to find itself—to settle upon some feasible policy of action, and to do something. Therefore, a council of six or ten would find themselves sooner, and sooner get to doing something. With a lessened number it would be possible to do civic business more promptly, and not have public interests made the victims of long-drawn delays and slow action. The fact cannot be denied that Canada is greatly overgoverned in the parliamentary sphere as well as the municipal sphere. With the Dominion Parliament and Senate, and the provincial legislatures, with their legislative councils, we have a much larger parliamentary representation, with our 8 millions of people, than Great Britain has with 46 millions. Is there any necessity in the public interests that demands such a top-heavy governing force?

Great Britain rubs along fairly well with one parliamentary representative to about 60,000 people, while Canada doesn't get on any better with one parliamentary representative to every 1,000 of the population. Vancouver recognizes the fact that this country is burdensomely over-governed, and, as is the proper thing with all true reform, personal and otherwise, she is beginning at home.

IMPERFECT REPENTANCE.

The Toronto News is still at the gruesome work of stirring up partizan strife. It doesn't stop short of actual misstatement in order to score a party point. Contrary to known fact it states that the meeting a which Mr. Armand Lavergne recently made a treasonable speech "was under Liberal auspices." The News knows that its statement is false to the truth. If there is any alliance between the Ishmaelitish cult of Nationalism and any party it is the party which the News discredits by its obstinate and blind partizanship. Nationalism has from the beginning been opposed to the Liberal party. It made its first headway in Canada in a concrete form in the bye-election in Drummond and Arthabasca. The Nationalist candidate was put up to strike a blow at Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and he achieved his success — became the first Nationalist member of Parliament of Canada, with the support and sympathy of the Conservative leaders of the day. The party papers rejoiced over the result as the handwriting on the wall as to Laurier and his regime; and a now member of the Borden Cabinet even sent a telegram of congratulation to the triumphant Nationalist.

So little had the Liberals to do with Nationalism, that it was regarded as a powerful instrument for smiting Liberalism in the elections of 1911, and the Conservative organization of Quebec actually financed the campaign of Nationalist candidates in Quebec, whose success in striking a blow at Laurier was practically recognized by making three of them members of the Borden Cabinet, which has still a full Nationalist representation in its membership. Mr. Bourassa, the head and front of the Nationalist cult of treason, was brought into loyal Ontario, and spoke from Conservative platforms in the interests of that party's candidates, and of course, against the Liberal candidates.

Those things are only mentioned to show the falsity of the charges of the News and its fellow extremists, that the Liberal party extends its patronage to meetings addressed by Nationalists, who still have official alliance with the Conservative party, and are represented in the cabinet of the head of the Conservative party in Canada.

It is a sign of grace that the News has at last come up to the opinion of decent Conservatives, as to the discredit of being governed by the help of a treasonable faction given place in the cabinet of a loyal Dominion; but it is a sign of disgrace, to try to unload the embarrassing burden of Nationalism upon the Liberal party. This party has no sympathy with the objects or schemes of a faction, that had its concrete origin in a hostile attempt to wreck the Liberal party or undermine the influence, and weaken the prestige of its leader.

If it were the proper thing to do at this time a stronger case could be made out to show the long-time alliance that exists between Nationalism and the News, and the party it supports with such fatal zeal. If the News repents; if it is getting ashamed of its alliance with Nationalism; it should, instead of trying to unload it upon the unwilling Liberals, advocate the removal of the strongest representatives of Nationalism from the cabinet of its party. While it backs the cabinet that contains Nationalist members it can't consistently open its mouth in condemnation. If Nationalism is hostile to Canadian interests, and repugnant to Canadian loyalty, it can easily be made harmless and reduced to a mere floating faction. Let the News remove the offending members of the Borden Cabinet and they will become homeless wanderers in the political desert. The Liberals who never had any use for them, would have nothing to do with a faction that from its ill-starred beginning was hostile to Liberalism, and the principles that Liberalism stands for. The repentance that doesn't show meet fruits is imperfect.

GO OR GIVE.

We should send to the front every man that we can induce to enlist and that we can train and equip. As for those us who cannot go, whose services would not be accepted if they were offered, and who cannot boast since we are not to be tested, we should give every dollar that we can spare beyond the decent support of our families to hospitals, to the Red Cross, to patriotic funds, to the various agencies and organizations which, in the words of Lincoln strive "to bind up the Nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle and for his widow and his orphan." Any man who makes money in these days is disgraced. Any man who seeks to be richer at the end of the war than when the war began is a traitor to those who offer their lives for his protection. —Toronto News.

A REITERATED WAR CHARGE.

The Government cannot afford to let the charge of Mr. James Acton, president of the Acton Publishing Company, of Toronto, go unchallenged. Mr. Acton declared that a large contract for uniforms was recently given to a real estate man, who sub-let the work to a foreigner at a profit of $20,000, and that a member of Parliament got him the contract.

The Hon. A. E. Kemp, M.P., chairman of the Government War Purchasing Commission, declares that "so far as the Canadian Government is concerned the charge is locked upon as an invention, pure and simple," whereupon Mr. Acton asserts that he is ready to substantiate his charge.

We hope that the Government will at once call on him to do so. If the charge is true, then there is still something radically wrong with the system of awarding contracts. If it is not true, then in justice to certain trusted men the charge should be exploded.—Montreal Herald.

STILL "CHALLENGING" THE BRITISH FLEET.

The English papers are getting considerable amusement out of the interviews with various German naval men which the New York World correspondent recently cabled from Berlin. Through these interviews, England has made the interesting discovery that for some time past Germany has been "challenging" the British Navy to come out of hiding" and fight. It is true that the New York World did not take this account from its correspondent very seriously, for it added

The ships of the German Navy were found by our correspondent as snug as bugs in rugs under the guns of Wilhelmshaven. They are protected by the mainland fortifications, by mines in the sea, and by the outlying fortress of Heligoland. They are as secure against "come-outers" as cave-dwellers, and designedly so. With nearly all its colonies in the hands of the enemy, and its great High Fleet held helplessly as a prisoner in its own harbours, Germany may fairly be asked what kind of a comic opera challenge it is awaiting.

The British are now repeating this question, and wound be only too delighted if the wonderful fleet which never yet faced a foe would come out into the North Sea and answer with its big guns.—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

Remarkable Outspoken Article in a Plea For Peace in a German Socialist Organ

BERLIN, November 10.—A remarkably outspoken article in the Vorwaerts, the organ of the German Socialist party, caused the suspension of that paper last Friday.

The article contains the boldest plea for peace ever permitted to be printed in Germany since the beginning of the war. It calls upon the German government to state definitely the object of the war, saying:

"We are told it is the others who must beg for peace, for we are victorious. But, unfortunately the others do not feel vanquished. No result is possible this way. The war goes on unendingly because both parties are anxious not to tell, or even utter, demands that are fair lest openness and frankness may be regarded as a sign of weakness.

"The sole outlook in sight, therefore, is that the war will go on until the complete exhaustion of all. If this is to be prevented the governments of the belligerents must leave the regions of generalization and seek a positive programme.

"Neither England nor France shows any desire of yielding. All talk of peace, as far at least as France and England are concerned, is absolutely without foundation. The leading statesmen of France and England are as firmly determined as is the Imperial Chancellor of Germany to continue the war until victory has crowned their arms.

"On November 2 and 3, Premier Asquith of England and Premier Briand of France explained to the representatives of their respective countries the aspect which the events of the war had in their eyes. They pointed out that the German troops have not been able for months to advance beyond the lines which they held at certain places; in fact that the Allies have driven the German troops back.

"They pointed out that the Russians are immovable, that the Dardanelles campaign, although in some respects a failure held up a large Turkish army, that in the Caucasus and Mesopotamia the Russians and the British are really dangerous, that in the Balkans, although the advance of the Germans and the Bulgarians caused some anxiety, nothing need be in despair to the allies.

WHAT GERMANS WANT TO KNOW.

"What we Germans want to know is what this victory we are expecting will be like, what objects obtained?

"Victory is a relative term. Different statesmen mean different things when they use the word. In autumn, 1914, Premier Asquith declared that England would not sheathe her sword until Belgium had been compensated for all the sacrifices she had made, until France was assured against every threat of attack, until the smaller nationalities of Europe had been assured of safe existences, and until the military domination of Prussia had been completely and finally destroyed.

"This programme is not quite clear; it contains too many phrases. One would have thought that after fifteen months of the most terrible war the world has ever seen the statesmen ought to be able to render a more precise answer to this question. One would have thought they might have been able to tell the nations why they are shedding blood, what object they have before them and what the prize is for which they are striving.

"But instead of all this we have nothing but phrases like 'Defence of the Fatherland,' 'Freedom and Justice,' and 'Kultur,' phrases which mean nothing today. They are simply words—nothing more.

"Doesn't it really appear as though these statesmen of all parties feared to betray their plans?

CONFINED TO PHRASES.

"It is not France and England alone who veil the conditions of peace, for the German government is just as reserved. Whenever it has expressed itself regarding the objects of the war it confined itself to phrases which however suitable they may be for firing enthusiasm into soldiers about to make an attack, nevertheless are wanting of the necessary clearness.

"We like to have regard for Germany's intentions. For 12 months we have been listening to what is not true. Surely we cannot be taken amiss if we express a desire to hear once what is true and what the German government really considers as its object in this war.

"This cannot go on forever, that battle after battle is fought and our troops carried to new theatres of war. People through all this complexity of the war never get to know what is happening or what we are striving to attain in order that the bells of peace may be heard."

THE HUMOUR OF THE GERMAN THREATS OF "FRIGHTFULNESS"

The German Government can be very terrible in its threats. It is a great believer in the efficiency of frightfulness. The Teuton, having absolutely no sense of humour, cannot understand the Gentile world refusing to take him seriously. To the German every threat, no matter how ridiculous, is something awful. To the Briton they are screamingly funny. The Zeppelins have done an appreciable amount of damage in England, and have murdered a large number of people, mostly women and children, and nearly all of them non-combatants. According to all German logic, the English people ought to be paralyzed with fear. But to the intense disgust of the Teuton, "they don't scare worth a cent." The Londoners, with characteristic British obstinacy, and a most offensive lack of Kultur, look forward to the next visit of a Zeppelin with keen curiosity, and seem positively disappointed when they do not come along on schedule time. There is hardly a small boy or girl in London who would not walk miles to see a Zeppelin and take chances on being blown into a better world. They look at the aerial visitor as they would look at a comet, a display of meteors or a Punch and Judy show. Frightfulness is simply thrown away upon a people so destitute of the German virtue of cowardice.

The latest awful threat is against the United States. It says: "Unless the United States takes definite action to compel England to maintain the freedom of the seas, so far as non-contraband shipments to Germany are concerned, Germany will retaliate by refusing to permit any products to be shipped out of Germany."

Isn't that carrying frightfulness to an extreme?

Unless the United States compels England to abandon the British embargo on German commerce Germany will also put an embargo on German commerce. Of course the German embargo will be a work of supererogation; the British embargo being so efficacious and complete. A German embargo on German commerce would strike anybody but a German as a great joke. What difference it would make to German commerce to have two embargoes on it instead of one, when the one is so effective is hard to see. Another think which is hard to see is how the United States could compel England to "maintain the freedom of the seas," which means, to Teutonic minds, to transfer the command of the seas to that wretched apology for a navy, now locked up in the Kiel Canal.

The freedom of the sea is in safe hands while it is under the control of the British, and it involves the freedom of the land. The nations all know it, and that is why the Germans are so anxious to bring outside pressure to bear upon Great Britain to induce our liberty-loving Empire to surrender the power which, in this very war, has protected not only the British Empire but the whole world against the hateful domination of the Teuton. The more desperate the situation of the Germans becomes the more insolent, and ridiculous are the conditions of peace upon which they insist. They want Belgium, that part of France they now occupy, Poland, a free hand to modernize Turkey (which means Germanize it), Egypt, many millions for indemnity, and above all —the freedom of the sea—in other words, the abandonment by Great Britain of the unique power which has thwarted their ambition for universal domination and the degradation of the whole human race to even lower than their own level.

Listen to the Vossische Zeitung: "Let us keep in mind for the present time that in the final settlement opinions must not be biased by any sentimental consideration whatever. We have nothing to study by our own interests, and these are identical with the interests of humanity at large. As we are the paramount race, our duty is to guide the course of humanity. To spare the nations who are inferior to ourselves would be to fail in our mission." The paramount race can learn something from the sparrows. When the birds cannot get a water bath they take a dust bath. The lords paramount have an aversion to water for any purpose whatever; they seldom bathe in it, they never drink it if they can get anything else, they do not even trust their navy on the waves—but they are going to get their lordly noses rubbed in the dust. —Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

SOME GERMAN-AMERICAN DEBTS.

A perusal of the list of New York people stranded in Europe when war suddenly destroyed credit a year ago last summer, who were helped to reach their homes with money advanced by the Government on their promise to repay it, which they have since ignored, shows a very large proportion of German names. These loans constituted debts of honour, and yet in this vicinity alone there are more than 2,000 delinquents. German-Americans who are so crazy to get away from war that they will cheat their deliverer out of the money that made their escape possible may be capable of some other eccentricities. Perhaps now that they are home we shall find them at the front of our so-called neutrality leagues, attacking the Government that rescued them.—New York World.

THE ONLY DANGER.

The only danger that is foreseen here from the President's attitude as to the United States note, is of a political kind. The presidential election in the U. S. is drawing near and in presidential campaigns everything is put into the melting pot. There are big vested interests in America, notably the Chicago meat packers, that are aggrieved by our practices based upon the order-in-council of March last.

"A series of diplomatic protests against individual instances of the general British policy might easily under the strain of a campaign in America, become undesirably exacerbated. In the meantime, it is very desirable that British newspapers should refrain from any comment of a bitter or quarrelsome kind."—Manchester Guardian.

CONVICT GIVES LAST DOLLAR TO CHARITY

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—Frank C. Marrin, alias, Judge J. Franklin Stone, whose alleged swindling operations are said to have netted him millions of dollars, contributed the last dollar in his possession to a children's charity before entering the Eastern Penitentiary to serve a sentence of four years, imposed several years ago for his connection with the $2,000,000 Storey cotton fraud.

The dollar was what was left of the $10 he received from the Auburn Prison in New York when he was released on parole after serving eight years of a thirteen years' sentence for swindling an old woman out of $71,000.

MUCH MILITARY WASTE

Editor of London Economist Propounds Poser for Premier.

LEEDS, Eng., Nov. 9.—Francis W. Hirst, editor of the Economist, speaking last night on the financial situation, severely criticized military waste. He said that if Great Britain hoped to bring Germany to terms through economic pressure she needed more than anything else wise and courageous financial leadership. He estimated that while Great Britain was spending £5,000,000 ($25,000,000) on the war daily, Germany was spending £4,000,000 ($20,000,000), and France, Russia, and Austria £2,500,000 ($12,500,000) each, and Italy £1,500,000 ($7,500,000).

He would like to ask Premier Asquith how, if he is unable to force the people to adopt a war diet or to surrender half their incomes to the Government, or if he refuses to cut down the expenditures of the War Office and of the Munitions Ministry, he is going to bank for the Entente allies?

War Tragedies Revealed Through "Personal" Column

In the great tragedy being enacted in Europe, what are the little human units doing? If you wait for the censor to lift the ban which might permit you to know you will never find out. But the most perfect of machines occasionally slips a cog, and the censorship machine seems to have done so.

Buried in the personal columns of the London newspapers are little paragraphs that have eluded the censor. They are neglected, overlooked; but in them is revealed the heart of the British nation. Stories of noble sacrifice, hero admiration, the warrior spirit, and the eternal love of woman for the fighting man are revealed. Look at this one from the London Times:

"Lady, fiance killed, will gladly marry and give up life to the care and happiness of man blinded or otherwise incapacitated by the war.—Box Y. 498, The Times."

The women cannot fight but they are doing their part in encouraging those who can. Wounded soldiers are idolised. The measure of a man's worth is his service to his country. Sympathetic women throughout the Empire seek to comfort and cheer the men, and their hearts are opened in the little personals. Here are a few, also from the London Times, that illustrate the point:

"Will lonely Colonial soldier (Gentleman) at the Front or otherwise, who wishes for Correspondence, write to advertiser (lady)?—Box L. 272, The Times."

"Lady, middle-aged, social position, would willingly Correspond with lonely Officers.—Box Y. 454 The Times."

"Would Wounded Officer, one who is lame and unable to get about much, like gay and sympathetic letters from a lady living in the country?—Box L. 200, The Times."

"Gay and sympathetic letters," the line itself is enough to cheer any worrying wounded officer. The following will show how readily the responses come:

"Box B. 701 has received over 100 Letters and regrets being unable to answer them all."

In the little birth notice below is a volume of sentiment. Baby McLaughlin was fatherless nearly four months before he was born!

"McLaughlin.—On the 8th Sept. the wife of the late Edmund C. McLaughlin, Lieut. 6th City of London Rifles (killed in action, France, 18th May); of a son."

The personal columns are literally crowded with appeals from mothers, wives, and sweethearts who want to know how their dear ones died. They are self-explanatory:

"A mother is anxious for news of the last hours of 9393, Lance-Corporal Thomas Pace, London Rifle Brigade, who died of wounds, Ypres, 84 Field Ambulance, Belgium, 4th May.—S.P., 90 Holland Road, London, W."

"If any of the survivors of the transport Royal Edward can give any information attending the circumstances of the loss of Major Cuthbert Bromley, 1st Batt. Lancashire Fusiliers, in the sinking of that ship, his mother, Lady Bromley, of Sutton Corner, Seaford, Sussex, will be deeply grateful."

In the conglomerate mass of personals for a single day we find revealed young soldiers eager to start for the Front, but without equipment, and anxious to buy revolvers and other weapons from disabled officers; one who is invalided and wants a dog for a pet; a third who is anxious to get to the Front, but has to find some one to care for his pet dog before he goes; and many other real human situations:

"Chaplain at the Front desires use of small car, also a gramophone and records for the men.—Box L. 398, The Times."

"Will any one sell cheaply Lieutenant going Front, Revolver, Periscope, Prismatic Compass, Flash Light, Mackintosh with detachable lining, Mackintosh Sheet?—Box M. 84, The Times."

"Will any kind person give, or lend for the duration of the War, a Piano for use of wounded soldiers at the Brook War Hospital, Woolwich? Tobacco, games, and books are also greatly needed."

"Will any disabled officer sell Army Revolver, Compass, and Binoculars cheap to young officer?—Box 395, Harrod's Advertising Agency, 32 Hans Crescent, N.W."

"To Any Patriot.—Will you guarantee £5 per month for the support of a subaltern's wife and little girl whilst he fights for them and you?—Box M. 94, The Times."

"Will any kind person give young officer £25 to pay pressing debt and make life worth living?—Box M. 93, The Times."

"An officer, invalided home, is desirous of becoming possessor of dog as companion; Bulldog, Airedale, or Aberdeen preferred. Guy Smith's Bookshop, Eastbourne."

"Will somebody give a kind home to a young officer's two very valuable, affectionate and gentle dogs while he is at the Front; otherwise they must be destroyed?—Box Y. 362, The Times."

All is not tragedy, however, in the lines that catch the "Personal" reader's eyes. We have, for example, glimpses of gay guardsmen who turn their thoughts from soldiering to dancing occasionally. Here's a little subaltern who would fain trip the light fantastic:

"Subaltern wants introduction to dancing set, Kensington or West; interview.—Box L. 397, The Times."

And so the heart of Britain's great middle-class stands revealed. All are anxious to serve the country; all are filled with heroism and sacrifice. And no censor can keep the little homely feelings of Britons from the news columns. They are the feelings that compel mighty enlistments and make conscription unnecessary.

No Light Matter This Sending of Gifts to Troops

HERE'S HOW TO ADDRESS BOXES.

"Don'ts" Many and Must Be Respected to Ensure Delivery.

The general public who are planning to send Christmas gifts to the soldiers are perhaps puzzled as to what would most please the gallant boys in the trenches. It is difficult to give any advice on this matter, because there are so many things one soldier would like to receive for which another would perhaps have little use.

Still, there are certain gifts which will be welcomed in any parcel sent to the trenches, and the following list of articles, drawn at random from a walk through the principal shopping centres of the city, suggest themselves:

There are unbreakable mirrors, made of highly polished steel, which are as much a boon to the soldiers in the billets as the safety razors and shaving soap and brush which would surely accompany them. Imagine the pleasure a soldier would feel were he able to sit down to his Christmas dinner with a clean shave.

Then there are khaki shirts, and other men's furnishings of different kinds, all of which would be as welcome as the cigarettes and tobacco, the candy, chewing gum, safety matches, tobacco pouches, and pipes, indelible pencils—or even fountain pens—pads of writing paper or diaries, and any of the other comforts which would lighten the burden of duty nobly undertaken and unflinchingly carried through.

A FEW ITEMS.

Bachelor's buttons, washing soap, handkerchiefs, playing cards, toothbrushes, plum cake, butter scotch and bonbons, Balaclave helmets, woollen comforters, warm socks, and a score of other things which each of these will suggest to one's mind, would all find a hearty reception when they were delivered to the men in the trenches or back in the rest billets. If the photograph of the sender was enclosed with it, or the latest photograph of the family, or even of the little baby born since daddy went away to the war—well, naturally it would make the gift still more acceptable.

CARE IN PACKING.

In sending these things, however, the greatest care must be exercised in seeing that they are all securely packed. Placing articles loosely in a cardboard box means sure disappointment for all concerned, for it probably will never reach the soldier to whom it is addressed. Goods should be packed in boxes—preferably screwed down, not nailed—or else sewed in sacking or some other strong material. Ordinary brown paper is quite as unsuitable as cardboard. This is the advice given by the Dominion Express Co., who also give other useful information about gifts.

If the parcels that are to be sent weight under 11 pounds they can be sent by the Canadian Parcel Post, and it should be addressed as follows:

Man's Regimental number, rank, and name, Squadron, Battery, or Company, Battalion, Regiment, or other unit, Canadian Contingent, British Expeditionary Force,

The name of any particular locality must not be put on the parcel, as it only leads to confusion and delay.

If the parcel weighs over 11 pounds and under 56 pounds, the same address should be put on, with the additional words:

Care Military Forwarding Officer, Southampton Docks, England.

So that a parcel weighing over 11 pounds will be addressed:

No. 4779, Private John Jones, C. Company, 1st Battalion, Canadian Contingent, British Expeditionary Force, care Military Forwarding Officer, Southampton Docks, England.

Each package must bear on the wrapper the name of the sender and his address, as well as a list of the contents.

OTHER DETAILS.

In case a man is detached from his own unit or regiment and employed in another appointment, the address should give name of his original regiment, followed by the words "attached to," giving the name of the regiment or department he is now with, as follows:

No. 2345, Corp. John Smith, 48th Highlanders, attached to 1st Divisional Staff, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

The charges for all parcels or boxes must in all cases be prepaid. Any shipment over 56 pounds will be refused, as the authorities on the other side positively decline to handle the same. Packages under 11 pounds will be turned over to the authorities at Liverpool and under 56 pounds to the authorities at Southampton, who will extra charge, but entirely at owner's risk. Delivery under these circumstances is not guaranteed, but every effort will be made to make delivery.

WHAT NOT TO DO.

Packages must not under any circumstances be addressed to the War Office, and non-single packages of 11 pounds and under must be consigned to the Southampton Docks. If such shipments are received there they will be treated as gifts for the troops generally and be distributed accordingly. Small parcels may, however, be addressed under cover of a larger parcel between 11 and 56 pounds weight, via Southampton, provided they are all addressed to individuals in the same unit and the covering parcel addressed to the officer commanding that unit.

Goods of a parishable nature, such as fresh fruit, vegetables, chicken, etc., will not be accepted, and cakes, jam, etc., should be packed in tins, not glass. Nothing likely to cause damage can be accepted. Safety matches can only be sent packed in sealed tins.

Anyone wishing to send gifts for the troops generally should address them simply as:

Gifts for Canadian Expeditionary Force, care of Military Forwarding Officer, Southampton Docks, England.

FOR THE CAMPS.

Shipments for members of the Canadian forces located at Salisbury Plain, Shorncliffe, or other camps in England, should be addressed as follows:

1, Man's number; 2, Name; 3, Regiment; 5, Canadian Expeditionary Force; 5, Name of place at which stationed.

A large number of men have been transferred from one regiment or battalion to another; delay will be avoided by giving the name of their present regiment or battalion when known.

At Salisbury Plain there are about six different camps, and some of the men are also billeted at private dwelling-houses in the vicinity. It is important, therefore, that the exact address be given when known.

It is not always possible to effect direct delivery direct to the consignee. The military authorities in many cases take charge of the shipments and arrange distribution to the men at the different camps.

Above all, don't delay in forwarding gifts. The sooner they are sent now, the greater the likelihood of their reaching the men.

Hastings Methodist Church Anniversary

Women of the Village Are Now Cooking and Selling for Soldiers

HASTINGS, Nov. 10.—The anniversary services in connection with the Methodist Church were duly celebrated on Sunday last. The pulpit was ably filled at both services by Rev. Mr. DeMille of Havelock, while the choir gave special music in keeping with the occasion. On Monday evening a fowl supper was served in the town hall and scored another success for the Ladies' Aid, under whose auspices it was prepared. A large crowd was in attendance and most favourable comments were to be heard from every quarter regarding the quantity and quality of the eatables. The tables, dressed in beautiful linen, and tastefully decorated with flowers, looked very inviting and were waited on by many willing hands who did their utmost to satisfy the most fastidious. After supper the large audience repaired to the body of the Church, where Rev. Mr. Bamforth of Colborne, gave his popular talk "Four Months in a Mining Camp." The choir rendered some stirring patriotic songs which were much enjoyed. The several committees in charge deserve credit for the success of the undertaking. The proceeds amounted to somewhere in the neighborhood of the $200 mark.

The members of the I.O.D.E. are making a new venture in the shape of a weekly sale of home-made cooking, vegetables etc. to raise funds for comforts for the soldier boys at the front.

VIENNA TAILORS ARE IN DISTRESS

Cloth For Making Men's and Women's Suits is Hard to Get and High

BERNE, Nov. 10.—Such is the distress prevailing among the Viennese tailors and dressmakers that the employers have presented a memorial to the government to make it less difficult for them to obtain material used in their trade.

At present only military cloth may be manufactured, except with a special permit, which is difficult to procure, while the cost of material, especially ladies' cloth, is so great that it is impossible for dressmakers to supply costumes at prices which the costumers can afford. Apart from the ten thousand employers in the tailoring trade all their dependents and assisants must be considered.

Despite government assurances that the Austrian harvest has been excellent and despite the promise that prices will be reduced, regulations have just been issued that the use of bread cards will be much more strictly enforced than ever. Formerly only sellers were punished for selling an undue quantity of flour or bread, but now purchasers are also punished for buying too much, and even a person eating a roll in a coffee house without having a piece detached from his or her bread card is now liable to punishment. The prices in Viennese coffee houses and restaurants again have been raised, and it is now admitted that the Austro-Hungarian potato crop is insufficient for for the country's needs, and that potatoes must be imported from Germany.

An appeal signed by the Burgomaster and Chief of Police of Munich, jointly with the medical profession urges Bavarians, especially the upper classes, to limit their consumption of meat, because lately the numbers of pigs and cattle have largely diminished, and also owing to the necessity of supplying the army with meat. The signatories say they have pledged themselves to the utmost economy in the use of all foodstuffs, to eat only just what is necessary and only four meat meals weekly. They ask all the well to do classes in Bavaria t oact likewise.

The chappies told him that a big, burly man in the smoking-room was deaf and dumb and Jack walked over to him with a sweet smile and told him he was a silly fool." "Well?" "The man wasn't deaf and dumb, and the 'silly fool' was Jack."

Kidney Trouble?

The waste material which the Kidneys are intended to remove from the blood, if allowed to accumulate in the system, poison the blood and thus produce deleterious effects.

If from over-work, exposure to cold, or some local injury, the kidneys become congested or inflamed and cannot perform their functions, the system becomes filled with uric poisons.

Whenever a dull, heavy pain is felt over the region of the kidneys for any length of time, accompanied by a sallow complexion, loss of appetite, decrease of weight, and a puffy condition under the eyes and in the ankles, a chronic inflammation of the kidneys must be suspected, and if not relieved promptly chronic Bright's Disease will certainly develop.

Abbey's Effervescent Salt, sold everywhere at 25c and 60c which is a Diuretic as well as an Aperient, will carry out of the system the poisonous material which the kidneys cannot get rid of, and will relieve the congestion of the kidneys.

The Board of Health Recognizes Need of Enforced Cleanliness

Discusses Various Menaces to the public Health and Will Support System of Dry Closets as Followed in Other Cities—Will Compel Gradual Use of Sewer Where This Service is Supplied.

ACCOUNTS PASSED

Compulsory cleanliness was the subject of a general discussion during yesterday's Board of Health meeting, and as a commentary on the times, several recommendations presented by Sanitary Inspector Spence were considered too drastic. He was asked to go over them again with the object of making them applicable in easy instalments and to begin with the lightest treatment of the conditions requiring attention. One recommendation was that stables, etc., should be situated at least 25 feet from any dwelling.

Mayor Buller agreed that a man should not be allowed to have a stable under the same roof with his dwelling. But it was the Mayor's opinion that a stable was a preventive of disease if it was kept right and that hostlers were invariably healthy. A stable should be well drained and kept clean.

Dr. Amys stated that flies spread disease from manure which in that respect is a source of danger.

Mr. Spence said he had received complaints from Peck, Kerr and McElderry about a nearby stable.

Mayor Buller: They can't move that livery for Peck, Kerr and McElderry. But it was stated that where a sewer is convenient it would be best to have stables drained into it. It is not likely that this will be put into force, but it is a suggestion that meets the favour of the Board.

Dr. Amys said that it was necessary to legislate for people who do not know how to live and he told of a man on Pearl avenue who had hens, etc., in a cellar under his kitchen. But this was mild compared with people who admit the poultry into the kitchen, and it was actually said, into the "parlour." The members really meant instances of hens being housed in one of the rooms of a dwelling occupied by a family.

There is no objection to a citizen keeping hens if he has ample grounds for them, but in congested districts where houses are comparatively crowded they are looked upon as a nuisance to the public health and a nuisance to other citizens. The same applies to the location of stables.

Dirty Homes.

The discussion included reference to dirty homes, and one case was mentioned of a family that had received from a charitably inclined women flannels and other clothing which when used was simply thrown in a heap and left in one room of the house.

Mayor Buller remarked that charity overlaps to a great extent and in this respect the church people are, to a large extent, to blame. Good people with the best of intentions assist families which should be attended to directly through the Charity Board.

Another subject touched upon was the necessity of landlords being compelled to put houses in proper condition.

The Board desires to gradually enforce sewer connections in districts already served by the sewerage system. Two houses in the north end were particularly mentioned, and as the Medical Officer of Health has full powers in this respect he was authorized to demand connection in those two instances.

Outside Closets.

Sanitary Inspector Spence reported on the system of dry earth closets which he believes should be adopted when there are no sewer connections. There are 1400 outside closets in the city, and the scavengers' returns for the past year show that only 984 were cleaned out. Brantford has the dry earth system and monthly cleaning is done by the city at a cost of $1.80 a year. The Inspector proposes a similar scheme for Peterborough at a cost of $1.50 a year. Pits would have to be filled up and boxes used with dry earth or ashes. It would be cheaper for the citizens concerned and would be a further protection against typhoid.

The chairman, Mr. George Dugan, and the members of the Board are in full accord with Mr. Spence's suggestion, and at the next meeting it is expected he will have a complete report to present.

An effort will be made to secure a notice of every tuberculosis case reported at the City Clerk's office in order that they may be followed up and the houses thoroughly disinfected.

Asked if he had any other reports to make of his recent visit to Western Ontario cities, Mr. Spence replied that it had been brought home to him that his salary was about half that paid by Brantford and other places. Peterborough had not even provided the uniform promised.

"The Old and the New Woman" Subject of a Lecture

By Rev. H. B. Kenny at St. James' Church Last Evening—The Musical Programme

A lecture brim full of wit and humour was given at St. James' Church last evening by Rev. H. B. Kenny, of Cobourg, on the subject of "The Old and the New Woman." The church was well filled with an audience that thoroughly enjoyed the splendid programme. The pastor, Rev. Mr. Greatrix, was in the chair and introduced the speaker. A musical programme of much excellence was a pleasing feature. Vocal solos were given by Messrs. E. Hodston, and Smith, also a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Lock.

At the conclusion of the evening, dainty refreshments were served.

BREAKING INTO JAIL BAD AS BREAKING OUT

REDWOOD CITY, Cal., Nov. 10.—Trying to break into a jail is no worse than trying to break out of it, according to Judge Buck, of the Superior Court.

James Smith, a youth, who escaped from the county jail with Louis Markim, the streetcar bandit, and Walter Henderson who tried to break into the Daly City jail to liberate his three companions, were both up for sentences before Judge Buck, who placed them both on a year's probation. They had pleaded guilty.

The Better Foods Better Homes course is proving exceedingly attractive and popular and the best women of the city are attending every day. To-morrow night the men are invited.

Meets Local Needs.

The practical methods being taught at every session in regard to economy are making this subject more attractive than was deemed possible. It is not merely home economics work that Mrs. Brown-Lewers teaches. It is woman's work undertaken in behalf of better home life. This opportunity offered to the housewives of this city for improving themselves along home-making lines, is meeting with the hearty co-operation and support of the very best women in Peterborough, who realize the keeping of a home as a great vocation calling for woman's best intellectual and spiritual efforts. A change of conditions that amounts to an upheaval in many homes, has been made necessary in the last few months in Canada, and to meet these conditions, a study of the latest economical developments relating to the home, has become a necessity. It is just this kind of instruction that Mrs. Brown-Lewers is giving here and her understanding of the needs and her manner of meeting them, is marvelous and gratifying.

Is Not Food Faddist.

While Mrs. Brown-Lewers is proving herself a food and cookery expert, she is not in any sense of the word a food faddist. Her aim is to teach women something of the importance of a knowledge of food values and proper proportions and economical management and to show them that it is their duty to provide nourishing as well as enjoyable foods for their families. She not only points out this duty, but shows how it may be performed. In order to help women to cook more easily and scientifically, she gives them the benefit of her own domestic science training and all who attend her classes are exceedingly grateful and report that her course is helpful in the extreme.

Lectures To-morrow Night.

Especial attention will be given to the subject of household finances in the lecture to-morrow night on "The Woman who Spends." A very interesting cookery programme has also been arranged which includes the unusual item of baked ice cream. This will be prepared and served to the members of her classes in Conservatory of Music to-night.

The lecture Friday will be on "Motherhood and the Development of the Child." She is especially qualified to speak on the subject of feeding and training children by reason of her own motherhood and her training as a nurse, and considers this the best lecture of the entire course. Every mother in Peterborough is invited to hear this talk.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr Hughson Johnstone, painter and decorator, 510 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Rob Roy Campbellford, Ont.—Now Rob Roy, as your ceiling is completed, and your walls are a steel grey, proceed as follows. Make some black paint with lamp black thinned with oil and turps equal parts, with an old brush lay some quite heavily on a board, then with a fine grained sponge dip it on the board and with it, carefully tap the wall, getting the black as evenly distributed as possible to imitate grey granite. When you have gone over all your walls, and the paint is thoroughly hard, lay it out in blocks the size will depend upon the dimensions of your room. Make them break evenly in the corners, and at top and bottom. Get a straight edge about three feet long and with a grease crayon or piece of heel ball, mark out your granite blocks; don't make them square, oblong is better. Now for your woodwork. Paint it a little lighter than a chocolate colour, not too shiny, oil makes it shiny, turpentine dulls. When this is hard get some dark oak graining colour and try to imitate oak or ash. With patience you will make a fair job. When this is dry apply a coat of flattine, when you will have an entirely original den, one in which you will be able to concentrate your mind on your studies, as you could not in a more cheerfully decorated room. With simple furniture of mission character you will have indeed a den in the truest sense of the word.

Housemaid, West End.—Please tell me how to clean black stains out of a hardwood floor. They are either ink stains or tobacco stains.

Ans.—First remove the polish with some fine sandpaper. When you have got down to the raw wood, touch the spots with oxalic acid which has been dissolved in hot water, after which sandpaper again and repeat until the stain disappears. Then renew the polish, if any.

Whitewash, Emsmere, Ont.—How do you make whitewash?

Ans.—I make it the most suitable way for the conditions under which it is to be used. There are very many methods. If it is for the inside of a barn or a cellar for instance, get some unslacked lime, much or little according to the work in hand, place it on a barrel, pour lots of water over it, about three times its bulk, cover the top of the barrel with a piece of old carpet or a bag. When it is boiling hot, which will be in a short while, pour in a peck of coarse salt to a half barrel, or pail in a quart of raw linseed oil, which ever is most convenient.

Mrs. W. J., East City.—I would consider it a favour if through your "column" you will give me a recipe for to frost my window glass.

Ans.—A very simple method is to dissolve epsom salts in vinegar and flow it on the glass with a soft sponge. With a little practice most beautiful patterns will result. Or to imitate ground glass, which is also called frosting, paint the glass with white paint, spreading it very evenly, and then with a pad of cotton batting, over which cheese cloth has been drawn, pat the paint all over until the brush marks are entirely removed.

Enjoyable Programme Given Under Auspices of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers Club in Aid of the Band Fund.

ATTENDANCE WAS LARGE

The concert in Victoria Hall, last night, under the auspices of the Soldiers' Wives and Mothers' Club, in aid of the 93rd Band Funds, was a pronounced success in every way. There was a large attendance and the programme was greatly enjoyed. An auction sale of a quilt, centre piece and cushion, donated to the Club, added to the financial success of the evening.

Chief Howard made a very effective chairman. On the platform were five Peterborough soldiers who have been invalided home recently: Sergt. Jack Cooper of the 4th Battery, C.F.A.; Trooper Percy Parrington, and Chas. Stenson of the 2nd Battalion, and Pte. M. Mowry of the 21st Battalion Adj. McElhiney and Ald. G. Walter Green also occupied seats on the platform.

The 93rd Band took a prominent part in the programme, playing selections from the two light operas "Pinafore" and "The Gaiety Girl," in sparkling style. A march and the trombone rag "Trombonium" were also snappily given and the Band continues to show steady improvement in its work.

A medley of patriotic airs played on the violin, by Mrs. Foster, with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Fenwick, was greatly enjoyed, as was the encore number "The Canary."

Mrs. Thomas gave two spirited recitations, containing a stirring appeal for recruits, and Master Percy Luther dropped his recruiting efforts for the time being, and contributed two humorous recitations to the programme.

A flag drill by two dozen little girls winding up with "Tipperary" and "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" was a feature.

Enjoyable solos were given by Mr Chas. Coleman, Mrs. Ward, Miss D. Fenwick and Mrs. Scullie, and just before the close the Women's National Anthem was sung by Misses Saunders and Fenwick.

Pte. Charles Stenson, called on to speak for the boys back from the front, paid a warm tribute to the work being done by the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club. Not content with sending their loved ones to the front, he said they were doing their bit at home as well.

The auction sale conducted by Adjt. McElhiney, was one of the most amusing features of the evening.

Following is the programme:

March—93rd Band.
Solo, "The Man They Left Behind"—Mr. Charles Coleman
Recitation, "Miss Jones' Burglar"—Master Percy Luther.
Violin solo, "Patriotic Medley"—Mrs. Foster; piano accompanist, Mrs. Fenwick.

Hospitals Not Convalescent Homes For Indigent Patients

Since the city pays for indigent patients in the city hospitals Mayor Buller suggested at the Board of Health meeting, yesterday, that other provision for their periods of convalescence might be considered with profit to the citizens. It would be cheaper to remove them to their own homes and engage a woman at $5 a week to attend them than continue paying one dollar a day to the hospitals. Mayor Buller suggested the co-operation of the Medical Officer of Health in this respect, and said that in his regular visits to the hospitals he could keep in touch with the indigent cases and would know when they could be removed. The Mayor's idea is to keep the city's hospital bill as light as possible and at the same time give the indigent persons all necessary attention.

Voice of The People

IMPROVED HIGHWAYS.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—As a ratepayer of the Township of Smith, I think it due the Council to refer to that body, as a result of their efforts to improve the highways.

Some two or three years ago the Council effected an agreement with the City Council to improve the boundaries between their respective municipalities, and I might say that the Council are to be congratulated on securing the services of Mr. Harry Milburn to oversee Wolsley street improvements, which is a credit to Mr. Milburn.

I am sure the ratepayers on said street will recognize the arrangement of the Council and feel more kindly toward the city for having acquiesced.

Yours respectfully,

1d-1w Ratepayer.

ASSEMBLY HALL

"Acceptable words" were given in the Assembly Hall last night. The subject of reconciliation was taken up in a three-fold aspect. Romans, 5:10 gives the means and need for men to be reconciled. It was stated that Satan himself was the originator of sin. The "anointed cherub" of Ezekiel, 28, "perfect in beauty" joined in the fair scene of Job., 38, when the foundations of the earth were laid and "the morning stars sang together and "all the sons of God shouted for joy," not one discordant voice was heard, but God was "all in all." But between that harmonious scene and the chaotic state of Genesis, 2:1, aspiring to equality with God, "iniquity was found in him" and he was "cast down from his excellency" and became the fallen creature of Genesis, 3, and by his subtility caused "death to pass upon all men." Hence the need of reconciliation. God which has provided by the death of His Son, in 2 Cor., 5:19, as to the ministry of reconciliation. God not only provides the means but "beseeches men to be reconciled to Himself." The extent of reconciliation is mentioned in Colossians, 1:20, as affecting "things in heaven and things on earth." Speaking of "subjection" in Philippians, 2:10, "things under the earth" are included. This means that glorified sinners in heaven saved sinners on earth and lost souls in hell are all brought into subjection and to confess that "Jesus Christ is Lord," to the glory of God the Father." While sinners in hell and brought into subjection to God, they never will be reconciled to Himself.

1st Vice-President—Miss Atchison.
Corresponding-Secretary — Miss Dodds.
Recording-Secretary — Miss Record.
Treasurer—Miss Anderson.

Mrs. Whalley, President of the W.C.T.U. agreed to meet with the Y's and help them get started.

The first meeting of the Union will be held at the George St. Methodist Parsonage, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 10th, at 8 o'clock, to which all young people are urged to be present.

A violin solo by Clifton Carruthers, accompanied by Miss Eva Stewart on the piano, was very much enjoyed, also an instrumental by Miss Jean Anderson.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Carruthers for her kindness in opening her home, after which refreshments were served, which brought to a close a very enjoyable evening.

"VOICE FROM PAST" SAVES SLAYER'S LIFE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 10 — "A voice from the past," to use the terms of the district attorney spoke and saved the life of Pat Lamay, found guilty of the murder of his wife, Delia. The jury returned a verdict of murder in the first degree and fixed the penalty at life imprisonment. Lamay seemed almost happy. His seven children seated in court smiled.

It was Police Detective Cline who testified that as Pat's wife lay dying in the Receiving Hospital, Lamay was brought to her side. She said, testified Cline:

"Yes, Pat shot me, but he's not responsible."

Thus, Deputy District Attorney Helms told the jury a few hours later, was the "voice from the past."

WILL BE EXAMINED BY DOCTORS AS TO HIS SANITY

Charles Brewer Appeared Before Magistrate Dumble in the Police Court This Morning—Case Was Adjourned

Charles Brewer, who attempted suicide after having, it is alleged, attempted to murder his wife on the night of October 15th, appeared before Magistrate Dumble at the police court this morning. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared on behalf of the accused, and pleaded not guilty to the charge of attempted murder. Crown Attorney Hatton was present for the Crown.

Before proceeding with the evidence Mr. Gordon stated that, according to Dr. Amys, the accused was suffering from hardening of the arteries and as a result at times suffered mental derangement. His sons offered to take him away with them to the States, where he would receive the care his condition needed.

Magistrate Dumble decided to hear some of the witnesses and Mrs. Brewer was called. After hearing her story His Worship adjourned the case until four o'clock this afternoon. In the meantime Drs. Amys and Hammond will examine Mr. Brewer as to his sanity.

Mrs. Margaret Brewer, wife of the accused, stated that she had been married forty years. She had nine children living and five dead. For the past four years and a half she and her husband had resided alone. She owned three houses, living in one and renting two. The prisoner and the witness had always lived agreeably until last winter. He had la grippe then and since that time there hasn't been any peace, she said. "He was an honest and hard-working man. He drank sometimes and has at different times come home the worse of liquor. Last summer he made charges against her which were untrue. He threatened to "knock her brains out." He would often accuse her of telling lies to him. She didn't think the man was in his right mind for some months past. On the occasion of the assault on October 15th he knocked her down and struck her with the stove lifter. She cried for help and a neighbour rapping on the window attracted his attention and undoubtedly prevented serious injuy being done her. She went out but soon returned, finding him with his throat cut and bleeding badly.

D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins its engagement at the Grand on Monday, Nov. 15, for three days, with matinee Tuesday and Wednesday, at 2:30. Nothing like this wonderful attraction has ever been seen upon the local boards. And it is given here exactly as it is being presented in New York City, where the big drama has broken every record in the stage history of the first city in the country. In addition, the piece has piled up record engagements in Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Toronto and Montreal.

It covers a wide range of American history and touches only the highest points of interest in the great events that led up to and terminated the Civil War. The force that slavery played in producing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition. While the basic theme is historical in its foundation its intent is the fundamental one of true drama. The forces which make for these results have been marshalled upon a larger scale than was ever dreamed of before. Where directors of vast spectacle have dealt with hundreds in the past, Griffith employs thousands. 18,000 people fill his stage, which has a vast territory for its background. 3,000 horses pass before your view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The derisive battles of the Civil War are reproduced in faithful detail and you see these conflicts fought again just as they were waged 50 years ago. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity to the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of 10 square miles, and upon these planes and trenches 10,000 soldiers clash in a mimic warfare that is as real as if you were an eyewitness of the actual occurrence. Holding the great effects in tether is a story as tender and true as love and romance can be pictured. There are tears and smiles, noble sacrifices and heroic deeds of personal valor. Youthful dreams of love's fruition are rent asunder by the demons of war; home ties snap before the call to arms and suffering such as cannot be imagined is depicted in the crude manner that history is made when men surrender reason to passion and engage in a deadlock of armed resistance.

You see the war start after being shown the causes which precipitated it. You see the great generals of the contending sections playing their desperate games of human pawns moved into the field of slaughter. Then comes the agreement for peace and Lincoln sets about his superhuman task of healing the wounds by the application of that great love which made him the towering figure of his age. A fanatic's bullet stills the heart which beat so evenly for all humanity. The south is thrown back into a worse fate than war. Their lands are overrun by a hungry horde of vengeful politicians and grafters. The poor negro is cajoled into a false understanding of liberty, and in his ignorance is led into excesses by these scalawags of fortune. Out of it comes the ghostly garbed crusaders of a terrible era to once more set things aright and return the lands and liberties of peace to their rightful owners, and over the land's miserere sounds the chorus of brotherly love in an allegorical dream which visions the re-union of the divided sections and the welding of that national spirit which has made this nation so great after its baptism in its own blood.

A wonderful score of operatic reaches accompanies the narrative. It is all done upon a most stupendous scale. No detail has been overlooked. The drama is outlined and told in the most graphic form that has yet been devised by the brain of man for such a purpose. No wonder this work is epoch-making. It has set up new standards which it will be difficult to equal for many a year to come.

Fish Sores Are Being Studied

Members of Board of Health Have Asked Department for Opinion

There have been some fish caught in local waters during the past summer bearing cuts or sores, the cause of which puzzled veteran fishermen. Mr. George Duncan, chairman of the Board of Health, has handed a number of them and interesting Dr. Amys, the M.O.H., the latter forwarded on to the Naval Department, Ottawa, for their examination. Dr. Amys has received a reply that the disease is being carefully studied and a report will be forwarded when it is prepared. This letter remarked that the sores might be one of three.

(a) A skin disease sometimes called fish leprosy which is due to a minute protozoan parasite, belonging to the sporozoan, especially one species called Myxobolus, which I think Dr. Gurley describes in the U. S. Fishery Commission's report in 1893.

(b) Inquirers due to bites of other fish or other animals causing sores and inflamed growths.

(c) The attachment of lamper-eels (lampreys, and large leeches which cause sores upon the skin and lead to various external diseases.

SMALL FIRE IN EAST CITY AT MIDNIGHT

It was to the house of a fellow-employee that the firemen were called last night. Mr. Albert Tennyson, foreman of the Department, had received a telephone message from his wife at 11:40, that there was an odour of smoke in the house and asking him to come home to 499 Rogers Street. A few minutes later he sent in an alarm from Box 54. The blaze was between the brick and plaster, in the kitchen and necessitated the removal of considerable plaster. The damage amounted to about $50.

An Examiner reporter was opposite the Lock Works when the alarm was sounded. Out of curiosity he ran to the corner and was cheering Aylmer Street to the Fire Hall just as the doors swung open and the first team turned into the street. It was rapid work with no audience to applaud. The men were far off in dreamland when the first gong flashed them into action and down the brass pole. On the waggons the men finished their own quick hitching.

A DOUBTER.

"Early to bed and early to rise, you know," the ready made philosopher.

"Yes," replied Mr. Grump. "But I don't observe that this rule gives the man who drives a milk waggon any particular advantage."

ARMS PLANT IS HIDDEN IN SING SING, SAYS REPORT

ALBANY, Nov. 9.—In Sing Sing Prison, presumably hidden away by some plotter among the much-trusted convicts, is said to be a plant of pistols and ammunition. Search has been made, but nothing has been found. This dangerous situation within the prison is disclosed in testimony in Dr. Rudolf Diedling's report to the Prison Commission.

The evidence given by Deputy Warden Elihu Church tells of concealment in the prison of revolvers and boxes of cartridges. Church subsequently fell under the warden's displeasure and was dismissed.

Church testifies that a letter was written to Governor Whitman to about the following effect:

"Send a trusted man to Sing Sing Prison at once. Fail in this and you will regret it all your life. I knew you in Vanderveer's office."

Stirred by the warning, the Governor sent his private secretary, William A. Orr, to Sing Sing.

The convict who had sent the letter told Orr a big prison break was evidently brewing—that he had seen six revolvers and three boxes of cartridges in a certain cell.

This statement was corroborated by another inmate. No one around the prison seemed to doubt the gun-plant was there, but a search failed to reveal it.

WEDDED POOR MAN EDUCATED HIM WANTS DIVORCE

Says He Was Model Husband While She Paid For Legal Training.

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Lawrence Potter, attorney, is in Vera Cruz. His wife, Ella M. Fletcher Potter, is in Aurora with her four children, waiting for her divorce suit to come to trial. This is 1915

Once upon a time Lawrence Potter was driving a grocery wagon in Aurora and Ella Fletcher drove past him in her family carriage and had pity on him. That was in 1904.

Pity grew grew into affection, and that led to marriage, and that led her to take him from the grocery wagon and provide for him for years while he studied law at the Chicago Law School, a branch of the Northwestern University. During that time, says Mrs. Potter, her husband was all that a husband could be, except that, instead of supporting his wife, he was supported by her.

When he was graduated and became associated with Quinn O'Brien here and began to do well, she says, he was nothing that a husband should be, except the father of her four children and the man she had married.

Mrs. Potter says she entailed her estate in Aurora to provide for his education, and when she had exhausted its revenue for the periods after he was prospering he refused to contribute to the needs of the family. Once, when she and the children were without food, says Mrs. Potter, she appealed to him, recalled the unusual sacrifices she had made for him and pointed out that she and their babies were starving, Potter said:

"A little starving will do you good."

In October, 1914, says Mrs. Potter, and also charges so in her bill for divorce and custody of the children, Potter went to Mexico representing a mahogany timber syndicate. Since then she has not heard from him in any form.

Mrs. Potter declares her mother, at whose home in Aurora she and the children have taken temporary refuge, is ill in a hospital as the result of nervous shocks over what she terms "my husband's ungentlemanly conduct towards his financial backer and his principal creditor, as well as his wife and the mother of his children."

2000 War Books Shown in London

LONDON.—An intimate idea of the grist of war literature put upon the market in Britain since the beginning of the European conflict was given this week at an exhibition conducted by the Library Association of Great Britain at Caxton Hall.

After a painstaking weeding out of the flood of literary product so that the chaff was thrown aside, 2,000 books by British, French, and American authors were selected as being fit for recognition in the exhibit. These were picked from an aggregate of 2,250 books now on the market here.

The works not approved by the Library Association are those of authors who, unknown to fame, have merely written something with the apparent hope of a sale on the market for literature with a war flavour, or products that from a literary or historic standpoint have failed to impress the critics.

Although Great Britain has plenty of war literature, the correspondent was informed at the exhibition that Germany has an even greater output. So far as the Library Association's figures go, 6,500 works have been turned out from the presses in Germany, and the market is reported as being glutted with literature that, in every instance, has been censored.

While the German Government has been strict in imposing its influence on every scrap of literature that is allowed to leave the presses, in Great Britain there has been no censorship of that character. Authors have the widest latitude. But despite that the trend of all the war product found in the market here is approximately the same. That is, without official restriction by the Government and with opportunity for the fullest scope of attack or criticism, the books turned out breathe an identical spirit of loyalty to country and lofty patriotism.

In the war exhibit the literary product is divided into these classifications:

1. Per-war history; books dealing with the events leading up to the conflict.

2. History of the outbreak of the war and of the earliest engagements, including the invasion of Belgium and France.

3. History of the early stages of war and up to very recent events.

4. Especially selected books dealing with the countries affected by the war.

5. After-war forecasts: What the religious aspect will be when the war is over; what the economic conditions of Europe and the world are likely to be.

In the first few months of the war, British, French and American authors began immediately to write of the causes of the conflict, of the crisis that came before the outbreak, and of the start of the engagements. Within three months after he war had begun no fewer than 250 books were on the stalls dealing with these phases of the conflict.

With this first flush of production came an array of books containing official reports—the White, Blue, Red, Gray and Orange Books with them—all giving accurate histories of the negotiations that had gone on among the Governments. These were put out in various forms, some with comment, others with explanatory data.

All these works formed a valuable part of the exhibit. Many were in most attractive binding, a few having striking colour plates or engravings. Of the works having the official documents telling the events antedating the war there were at least seventy-five at the exhibit.

The dates of publication of the books show that, after the first three months, the war literary product increased rapidly, so that by the time that six months had passed, 1,100 works were on sale—that is, 1,100 of the works picked out by the Library Association as worth while.

To attempt to give the names of authors would be merely to print names familiar for years to English, French or American readers of contemporaneous literature. Sir Gilbert Parker, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, Professor Roland G. Usher, Theodore Roosevelt, Anatole France, and Bernhardi are among the leaders.

The works occupied some forty shelves at the exhibit, and in the course of the week they were inspected by approximately 2,500 persons. Besides the books there were maps of various kinds—a host of them—all showing the war zone. Again, there were artistic colour drawings revealing the ravages of the war, most of these by French artists.

No attempt was made by the projecters of the exhibit to calculate accurately the tremendous circulation assigned by the 2,000 works. Many of them have gone well over the 100,000 mark, while hundreds of others are said to have reached 50,000.

One feature of the war book outpush commented upon at the exhibit was the lack of intimate narratives of famous battles. The trained onlooker, the war correspondent, has hardly a showing in the product now on the market. The reason for this is to be found in the rigid restriction of activities of war correspondents in the field. None has been able to get anywhere within adequate proximity of a battle so as to write a detailed narrative. Only "Eye-Witness," that Governmental functionary, has received any such privilege, and the "Eye-Witness" reports always have been carefully censored.

"Eye-Witness" has, perforce, a conspicuous niche in the war literature.

TO BURY ENEMY IN TRENCHES WITH NEW FRENCH GUN

PARIS, Nov 10.—The great French advance which is to clear the German invaders out of Belgium and France, will be pressed home just as soon as the army is sufficiently equipped with the new gun about which there has been so much talk of late in military circles. It is understood that nearly the number required are now in readiness, and when these big guns are brought to the front they are expected to make short work of the German trenches.

Special interest in the character of these new guns, which has not yet been officially disclosed, was aroused by the announcement made here regarding the diving projectile which is said to have done so much towards clearing the seas of the German submarines. According to announcements the new "Conan fuse," as it is called is the most prevalent asset of the British Admiralty to-day. The outstanding features of the fuse are described as follows: It was invented three years ago by an Irishman named Walter Conan, whose home is in Dublin. It can be affixed to a shell fired from a gun or howitzer or to a bomb dropped from an aeroplane. In striking the water the projectile of which the Conan apparatus forms part, dives and explodes at any predetermined depth up to 30 feet below the surface. The shock of its explosion under water is sufficient to sink a submarine, usually by making it turn turtle.

It is understood that a similar apparatus has been adapted and attached to the projectiles used by the new large guns. They will be used against the German trenches, and instead of the difficult task of turning the soldiers out of these retreats, it is expected that the French will dispose of the invaders by burying large bodies of them in their own trenches.

Modest Suitor—I have only $5,000 a year, sir, but I think I can support your daughter on that.

Father (enthusiastically)—Support her, my dear boy. Why, you can support her entire family on it.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

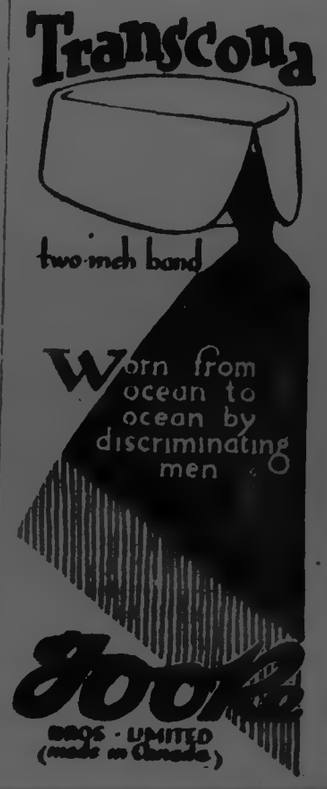
THE KAISER IS THE ACE

And His Generals Are the Knaves in German Decks of Cards.

Germans now play skat and other favourite card games with pictures of von Hindenburg and other popular leaders in the war instead of the conventional kings, queens, and knaves, says an article in the Berliner Tageblatt of Oct 2. The writer of the article, after calling attention to the widespread popularity of such decks of cards, suggests that German be substituted for French in the expressions used in card games, eliminating words like "carreau, coeur, pique" and "trefle."

The new war card have a picture of the Kaiser instead of the usual ace, while the four kings are the kings of Bavaria, Saxony and Wurtemberg and the Grand Duke of Baden. The knaves are represented by German leaders, and even cards like ten have pictures of notables in the war. Among the most widely pictures now found in card games are Count Zeppelin, Admiral von Tirpitz, Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg, Captain Weddingen, Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, General von Lauenburg, and General von Kluck.



French Manufacturer With Contract To Make Shrapnel For the Allies Schemes to Have Germans Do the Work

In a certain Connecticut manufacturing centre there is a comparatively small machine shop, the chief business which until recently was the production of automobile parts. The factory is owned by a Frenchman and a contract to manufacture shrapnel for the Allies has kept the plant busy night and day for several months and afforded employment to numerous thoroughly pro-Ally machinists.

Near by is a factory recently built and equipped by a wealthy German, who, were if possible, would be glad to manufacture war munitions for the Teutonic allies but not for their opponents, and, failing in this, is anxious to get almost any kind of work to keep his plant going. Realizing that the little plant near by owned by the Frenchman was kept busy night and day, but not being aware of the nature of the work, he called on his competitor, who to all outward appearances was as nearly neutral as could be.

The Frenchman showed the Germanic neighbor through the plant and stack after stack of steel bars, like rollers, were observed by the German, who asked what they were for.

"Why, haven't you heard of the moving platforms the government is going to install alongside of the Panama Canal, so that, (in the event of landslides, they can put vessels on the platforms and transport them from ocean to ocean?" queried the chman, adding that millions of these bars, cut dow, would be used.

The German was greatly interested and inquired who was placing the orders, and whether there was any chance of his getting a sub-contract. When told that it was "A" government order and that he, the Frenchman, would give the German a sub-contract for as much as he could deliver, the latter was highly elated, and after getting further particulars, decided to prepare his plant for the work.

The first move of the German was to look for a suitable foreman, and it so happened that he hit upon about the only person who was in a position to stop the German in his money making venture and anxious to do so. About two weeks earlier one of the men who worked in the little shop, where everything was active, was discharged for good and sufficient reasons, and this was the man the German encountered in his search for a foreman.

When told of the project by the German the man explained that the the bars were being converted into shrapnel for the Allies to kill Germans. The owner of the inactive factory was nearly killed by the shock, so great was his rage on learning that the Frenchman had "put one over on him."

Later the Frenchman in telling of the affair said:—"it was supremely funny to thing of a German being so anxious to help the Allies kill other Germans by supplying the necessary shrapnel that I could not resist letting him go ahead. As it was, the joke nearly killed one German by apoplexy and now, when he sees me on the street, he crosses to the other side."

TRENCH SECRETS HAVE BEEN LAID BARE AS THE LEAVES FALL

Pont-a-Mousson, France, Nov. 9. — The autumn frosts, causing the leaves to change colour and fall, reveal many a secret formerly hidden in the deep forests on the ridge above Pont-a-Mousson, writes a correspondent. The small strip of neutral territory between the first line trenches of the hostile forces dwindles to 500 yards at the bottom of the slope to about 25 yards at the top of the ridge. This part of the front has not changed since September, 1914.

Last spring I saw the trees bud and become green, spreading canopies in front of the German fortifications. Now the curtain is being torn away by the breeze, which is causing the multicoloured leaves to flutter to earth.

Trenches Like Village Streets.

This morning I closely inspected the region from my window. In the foreground were trenches paralleling each other and slanting across the hill-side. Unmistakable yellow earth marks the trenches and particularly the small forts placed at frequent intervals. Communicating corridors join the three lines, weaving in and out between the bunches of undergrowth. Viewed from an aeroplane, the entire system of lanes and passages must seem like the streets and avenues of a village.

The first German trench is on top of the ridge, running northerly a few hundred yards and descending the slope obliquely. Not a nose is visible in it. As in a mole's trench, the occupants are kept out of sight, but undoubtedly they are watching carefully behind loopholes.

Suddenly I heard the familiar whipsnap report of a French "75" 6 inch projectile as it sped through the air. A puff of smoke obliterated part of a German parapet and the sound of a dull explosion returned on the breeze. When the smoke cleared away I could see a certain amount of disorder on the German trench top. More projectiles were fired at several points in the same region, but the Germans did not respond.

This afternoon the Germans are trying to blow a certain French battery out of existence. More than a year ago they made similar attempts but the French artillerists appear to remain exactly in the same position. To-day's first projectiles tore big holes in the fields; then the range was shortened and "kettles" were piled on the hillside. Six German albatross aircraft regulated the fire.

Finance and Firing Mixed.

Watching at the window with me was a French adjutant, who displayed a casual interest in the scene, but was more interested in discussing the financial aspect of the war. The "kettles" fell incessantly and between the ripping rush of the projectiles and their earsplitting concussions the adjutant kept up a running fire of remarks.

"Yes," he said, "we obtained a big credit in the United States. We can perhaps obtain a second and a third, but we cannot continue this indefinitely. It is impossible for us to export as our factories are busy with war material. Look! Three in succession failed to explode—defective fuses. We ought to economize. We have been extravagant in this war. At first we did not count the cost, but now finances are becoming an important factor — perhaps the deciding factor of the war.

Less Extravagant Than Formerly.

"See that big biplane near the battery? It has evidently signaled something, for the range is being changed. Yes, there are many ways by which we could get the same results by spending less money. Our organization is extravagant, but it is improving. See that shrapnel shell? The German observers evidently thing those shells are better than the black powder shells and are giving them the range mark."

The Germans ceased firing after throwing away fully 300 six inch shells — a costly afternoons work. If this continues the hillside after the war can be profitably mined for metal.

JEWS ASSAIL GERMANY AS LEADER OF ANTI-SEMITISM

The Paris Temps of September 20 prints the following appeal, prepared and signed by the Central Consistory of French Jews, to Jews living in neutral countries:—

"We Jews, who during centuries have been victims of injustice and of disregard of right, have more reason than all others to condemn, in the name of the eternal laws proclaimed by the prophets, the violence done to our country.

"The reality of war has been imposed upon peaceful France. In order to remain faithful to her ideal of peace and of the development of democracy she has undergone the repeated threats and provocations of an implacable foe who was preparing to strike her name from the list of great nations. Brutally attacked, France struggles to-day for her existence and for her liberty, as well as for the liberty of the people who struggle by her side.

"Jews of neutral countries, could you witness without sadness and anguish the weakening of a moral force from which you experienced such great benefits? You know that it is to the France of the eighteenth sentury that we owe the overthrow of the barriers raised and maintained against the Jews by centuries of oppression. It is by her example and under the guidance of her genius that other nations have, little by little, conferred upon the Jews the right of a man and a citizen.

"International customs forbid you from taking part in France's defence. The recognition, however, that you owe her and that you certainly must vow to grant her imposes upon you the duty of spreading the truth about her cause, about the origin and character of this atrocious war, and of protesting against the calculated lies and denouncing the violations of the laws of war committed by a foe for whom force alone establishes and marks the boundaries of right.

"Remember what the year 1870 cost Judaism. For the principles of emancipation and of fraternity that the French Revolution had spread victorious Germany aspired to substitute a doctrine of hatred and brutality; her universities erected, in the guise of a science which was sophistry, a theory of races which led to anti-Semitism; that the German, as sole authentic heir of Arian blood, should with all his might preserve its purity; that the Jew was the ancient intruder whom it was necessary to keep out at all cost. From its native heath anti-Semitism burst forth into the world. In the West it succumbed. In the East it succeeded at first in implanting itself, but already reassuring signs reveal the coming of new times; the victory of the great liberal Powers of the West, joined with Russia for the defence of right, cannot fail to effect the emancipation of brothers in Russia.

"The French Revolution liberated the Jews of the West; the victory of the Allies will free the Jews of the rest of Europe. It would be foolhardy to expect their liberation by a victory (which, fortunately, is impossible) of the united forces of oppression, of anti-Semitic Pan-Germanism and Prussian militarism.

"Sons of the ancient Jewish faith, we await with confidence the triumph of justice."

SEES WIDER SPHERE FOR KITCHENER

If He Leaves Cabinet, Says Garvin, It Will Be to Meet Big Allied Need

LONDON, Nov. 8. — J. L. Garvin, writing in The Observer says:

"If Lord Kitchener withdraws from the War Office it will be for several obvious reasons, because the main part of the work he came to do there is done with historic success, because there are other spheres, and above all, because the struggle has entered upon an entirely new phase. That phase involves a complete reorganization of the whole conduct of the war by all the Allies working for the first time on a fundamental plan which will henceforth be carried out with unflagging vigor and an unwavering determination.

"Though we shall not be past the pinch for weeks and perhaps months yet this is for all permanent purposes the best and surest factor in favor of the Allies that has emerged from the war since last Spring. This fundamental plan and decisive agreement mean a resolute adoption of means to conquer. To that purpose and to no other, all the changes conform, and to think that Kitchener will play a lesser part, because he may play another part, would be entirely misunderstanding the past necessities of the struggle and its future requirements.

"We assert without hesitation that public opinion at home will now safely adapt itself, not only without shock, not only without surprising, or misgiving, but with intelligence, confidence, and approval of the situation which will exist if Kitchener fills, as we expect, a different roll in connection with the present far-reaching arrangements for the future of the war.

"The Balkan crisis and the whole view of next year's struggle, which it opened up, proved that there must be a division of functions. The responsibility for the war plans had to be radically divided from the responsibility for the maintenance and recruiting of the armies. We needed on the military side, a new General Staff, composed of the ablest, strongest and freshest minds, whom we could find among our soldiers, and especially by giving some of our younger soldiers something like the same chance which at an equal age men have in the Navy.

"That the General Staff would have to give it thorough, concentrated, and undivided attention to the study of the strategical safeguards and opportunities, to the provision of contingencies, offensive and defensive—in a word, to the preparation of the war plans, and even the creation of a General Staff for the military side of the work, can only be part of a further reaching change. The General Staff, in these conditions, must necessarily have independent access to the inner Cabinet, forming a real war executive within the national Ministry.

"It is clear at a glance that these new arrangements are as important as the creation of the Ministry of Munitions. They are purposes which would have to be carried out for the proper organization of the Government of a country in war. Whoever was Secretary of War, there is the obvious result. There would be left only a residue, though a great residue, of the functions which, by insular tradition in the days of our small armies, belonged to the Ministry of War, when Kitchener was first invited to fill that post. In these circumstances he might well prefer another post, and though he has not resigned, it would not be surprising if, in order that his services might now be more advantageously employed for the empire, he did resign.

"But public opinion at home must know and the army abroad must know that in any case everything will be done to make the war go better, and nothing will be done to make it go worse. Our allies will thoroughly understand the same thing.

"In some quarters the suggestion is made that Kitchener should become for the purposes of the war a Military Viceroy, whose supervision would stretch over Egypt, Mesopotamia, and India alike. Future conditions in all that region must become more and more interpendent. The suggestion is grandiose and needs by no means to be thought impracticable. Kitchener spent forty years of his life almost wholly in the East before he was called home to organize the new armies.

"He knows the East as a continental soldier knows Europe. Its problems are and may be such that there he may himself hold his true sphere to lie without derogation to himself and with signal advantage to the empire."

EDUCATES HIS STENOGRAPHER AND THEN WEDS HER

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 10—How George Woodruff, president of the Illinois Banker's Association, literally "made himself a wife" is being told in Joliet. It is a story strikingly similar to Bernard Shaw's play. "Pygmalion." Woodruff looked with the eyes of vision upon a steaographer saw what she might become with proper education, gave her the education and then married her.

To-day Mrs. George Woodruff, who used to be Louise Lentz, is honeymooning towards Central America. When she comes back she and Woodruff will live in a $50,000 villa, with $50,000 worth of wedding presents in it, and she will be the queen of Joliet society—in fact she is that already, as was proved at her wedding.

Woodruff is president of the First National Bank of Joliet. He is a millionaire—of the thinking kind. One day, in 1912, he wanted to dictate some letters, and his own stenographer was absent. So he "borrowed" one from the Oliver Realty Company, which has offices in the bank building. The stenographer proved to be Miss Lentz.

Sends Girl to School.

She was a good stenographer—and Woodruff, immediately noticed many other qualities in her. He decided that it must be a mere accident of fortune that kept her out of the best drawing rooms.

Tactfully, Woodruff went to work. He selected a girl's finishing school in New York. Then he picked out a wealthy woman in New York, a friend of his, to take Miss Lentz as a protege. Woodruff paid the bills, through the New York woman.

Miss Lentz finished her course. Then she studied art and music in Chicago, living at the Young Women's Christain Association. By this time, it is supposed, there was an understanding between Woodruff and his "Galatea." He came frequently to Chicago to see her, took her to dinners and theatres, watched her progress, and was pleased.

She Realizes Visions.

Then, six weeks ago, the engagement was announced. The girl who had been a good stenographer had now become the women that Woodruff had seen in his vision. He brought her back to Joliet and "society" welcomed her with eagerness. She stepped ahead of the daughters of the oldest families and, as George Woodruff's financee, became the leader.

In three years she has learned all the "little extras" in the line of society graces Palm Beach and Paris are familiar to her. She talks wittily on all the approved subjects. She can handle a reception or a large dinner party as perfectly as the veteran hostesses. And in addition she has the "native qualities" that are not always found in girls born to positions like the one she has achieved.

She is an orphan, her nearest living relative being a grandfather, David H. Lentz, of Chicago. It was he who gave her away at the wedding.

COULD MAKE 666 APPLY TO ANYONE SAYS DR. SYMONDS

MONTREAL, Nov. 10.—"What is the prophecy and prophetic writings bearing on the present war?" was the subject of the Rev. Dr. Symonds' sermon at Christ Church Cathedral last Sunday night.

"There is a danger," he said, "to take the words of the Bible nowadays, and distort them to suit any meaning whatever. This is simply an expression in crude form of the yearning for occult knowledge, knowledge without examination. 'Our Lord Himself deprecated this unseemly desire for signs.

"How are we to interpret these books? Are we to apply the prophecies to Napoleon Bonaparte or the Kaiser? We must remember that the writers were endeavoring to help their people. Would they be likely to foretell great disasters and thus to make the prospect more gloomy than ever to the poor people. The modern interpreter can make any figure mentioned in the Bible by a little judicious juggling, apply to any present circumstances.

Number of Beast.

"Take the number of the beast 666, in the Book of Revelation. Letters used to be used for figures. Doctor Salmon says that this 666 has respectively been proved conclusively to mean Nero, Caligula, Trajan, Julian, the Apostate, Pope Benedict IX., Mahomet Luther, Calvin, Pisa, Napoleon, and finally the Kaiser.

"Doctor Salmon, who has written an interesting work on this subject says that by proper use of Roman figures he could at the time when Parnell was the great agitator in favor of Home Rule, have made this beast and his number point undeniably to Parnell, and eventually to the system of boycotting."

HIS PLEA FOR MERCY.

(From the Philadelphia Ledger.)

"Young man," said the magistrate severely, "the assault you have committed upon your wife was most brutal. Do you know of any reason why I should not send you to prison?"

"If you do, your Honour," replied the prisoner at the bar hopefully, "it will break up our honeymoon."

First Soldier (in the trenches): I was really intended for the church. In fact, I was on the point of being ordained last August.

Second Soldier: What stopped you?

First Soldier: This d——d war.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Prompt passage is expected of 400,000,000 pounds credit which Premier Asquith will ask Parliament to approve this afternoon. This will bring the total war credits thus far up to 1,900,000,000 pounds.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—The value of Canada's alien enemy interned is estimated to date at $1,500,000. This is the estimated value of the work of clearing land in which the German and Austrians have been engaged throughout the summer. A hundred German internes from Newfoundland have been added to the number of Canada's war prisoners recently.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Indications that ex-Premier Venizelos and his Parliamentary followers of the Greek pro-war party are negotiating with the Government with a view of averting Parliament's dissolution by King Constantine were reported to-day. By dissolving Parliament, the pro-war element maintains Constantine would be acting unconstitutionally, and there have been threats of a revolution if he should take such a step. It is thought likely he will come to terms with Venizelos if he can.

HOW GERMANS MAKE BOTH ENDS MEET

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—Some interesting light on the subject of household expenses in Germany during war times is shed by the latest weekly report published by the American Association of Commerce and Trade, Berlin, which has reached this city. It comments as follows:

"The most amazing question in Germany to-day is now, besides the war, the cunning of the household and its expenses. An investigation of the cost of maintenance in a family establishment is recorded in the following paragraphs, with special reference to the home of a business man who has gone to the front. The place is Berlin. The case is, perhaps, typical, and illustrates the situation confronting a family of moderate means and good education.

"The husband has been at the front for the last five months, and in times of peace acts as a manufacturers' agent, with an average monthly income of 600 marks, which, at the present customs value of the mark in American money, 23.82 cents, is about $145. The children, numbering six, are 17, 14, 9, 8, 6, and 3 years old. Savings have not been made. The wife, having been employed as bookkeeper prior to her marriage, is now employed with a large business house in a similar capacity.

"The oldest daughter is employed in a candy factory, while the other children, excepting the two youngest, go to school. The second daughter, 14 years of age, besides going to school, takes care of the house and her younger sisters and also attends to the cooking. The house itself is kept very clean, and gives the impression of a well ordered household. The family budget is as follows:

INCOME
Monthly salary of wife	$30 00
Monthly salary of daughter	15 60
War relief	19 20
Total	$64 80

EXPENSES.
Rent for four rooms and kitchen	$21 60
Food, four meals daily, averaging [illegible] weekly	29 12
Light and [illegible]	3 60
Clothing [illegible]	6 00
Laundry	1 46
Insurance	2 40
Total	$64 80

"The housewife explains the budget as follows: "When my husband went to the front and I had to depend entirely on my earnings and the help of my older daughter, I made my plans accordingly for the dividing of my expenditures, a plan which was strictly carried out, and which proved to be perfectly satisfactory. I thought it impractical and unwise to rent a smaller apartment, because firstly, I would have to crowd my children into a smaller space, and secondly, the cost of moving, now and once more after the war, seemed an unnecessary expense.

"The rent of our apartment is $30 per month in times of peace, and my landlord was very accommodating in allowing me a reduction of $6.40 on the monthly rent. I am following these principles for the food of my family:

"For breakfast we have cocoa prepared with skim milk; for the second breakfast sandwiches with cottage cheese or home-made plum jam. At noon we have a wholesome meal cooked with the help of our fireless cooker. Our last week's daily bills of fare were:

"Sunday noon—rice soup, stewed beef with potatoes, apple pudding. Sunday night—potato salad with hot sausages; Monday noon—barley broth, carrots with potatoes, rice with prunes; Monday night—liver sausages, sandwiches; Tuesday noon—vegetable soup, herring with potatoes. Tuesday night—oatmeal, sandwiches; Wednesday noon—fruit soup, potato pancake; Wednesday night — flour soup, sandwiches, plum sauce.

"Thursday noon—fruit soup (the leavings from Wednesday noon), and stewed rabbit; Thursday night—oatmeal; Friday noon—vegetable soup, whitefish in beer; Friday night—herring with potatoes; Saturday noon—bread soup, turnips with ox liver; Saturday night—buckwheat groats.

"The cost of this fare, according to my notebook, amounts (roughly) to Sunday, $1.23; Monday, 95 cents; Tuesday, 76 cents; Wednesday, 92 cents; Thursday, $1; Friday, $1.04; Saturday, 70 cents; total, $6.68. This was a rather cheap week, the cost remaining below the average. For compensation I prepared in the following week a supply of lard—I cook with margarine and filled up our supply of briquets.

"Expenses for clothing and laundry must necessarily be curtailed considerably, because living expenses require the greater portion of our income. And yet we must not sidestep from our devised plan of living, in order to prevent getting into debts and irregularities.

"The surplus of my monthly statement is but theoretical, because there is always a little extra expense which cannot be avoided, and at the end of the month our finances are, as we say, burned out."

GERMANS MAKE CARB FROM PINE NEEDLES.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9. — The dearth of wool in Germany and the difficulty of importing it will not seriously hamper the Teutons during the cold winter months, since a new texture has been found that has qualities of blankets, according to William C. Rausen, official of a local woollen house, who has just returned from the theatre of war. It is called, in the German tongue, "Waldvolle," meaning "forest wool."

"By means of this material thousands of Germans will be saved from death by exposure," he declares. "It is of fairly fine texture and has most of the good qualities of pure wool except in that it is rougher. It comes originally from pine needles, I am told, which are rendered into a fibrous form by the use of soda. How it is done is known only to the Germans. It is particularly durable and serves fairly well when made into overcoats."

Evade Ban on Liquor

Russians Buy at Drug Stores Substitutes for Vodka - But Not Much

PETROGRAD, Nov. 1.—After more than a year's trial of the anti-liquor decree it appears that some American prohibition history is being repeated in Russia. A memorial to the City Council of Petrograd sets forth that the Union of Drug Clerks find the demand for eau de cologne and a variety of bitters has been growing steadily.

It is estimated that the 180 licensed drug stores in the city have sold the equivalent of 216,000 gallons of pure alcohol since the anti-liquor edict took effect at the beginning of the war. While some of this is legitimate drug business, it is asserted that the trade mainly consists of sales to persons who use these alcoholic preparations in beverages. Further, it is asserted, the druggists have begun the sale of substitutes consisting of alcohol that has been allowed to stand upon aromatic seeds, roots and leaves, or which has been more simply compounded with aniline ingredients. The drug store trade, in fact, seems to be carried on without any false pretense as to the purpose for which these substitutes are offered for sale.

Of still greater proportions than the sale of the drug preparations mentioned has been the use of denatured alcohol as a beverage, and the rectification of denatured alcohol into a palatable, if not a wholesome, substitute for vodka. The effort to render fuel alcohol repellant to the taste does not seem to have succeeded. Equally fruitless has been the campaign of education undertaken by the Government finally has been forced to adopt restrictive measures. In view of the temperance program adopted at the outbreak of the war, fuel alcohol may now be sold only to persons having license from the police. The relative scarcity of wood and coal has forced many householders and merchants and manufacturers to rely upon alcohol heaters for warmth. It is impossible to deny the requests of legitimate purchasers, and it is difficult to draw the line between them and secret rectifiers.

Nevertheless there is now comparably less drunkenness in Russia than there was before the war.

"EAT AND LAUGH" CODE OF TRIBE JUST FOUND

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—By poking around a whole winter in an 80-below zero climate, 700 miles from the nearest Russian exile camp, in the wilds of northern Siberia, an expedition of the University of Pennsylvania Museum has discovered the right way to live.

The Tungus, a hitherto unknown tribe of wigwam dwellers, raw meat eaters and joke crackers, whose present code of living is of the problem.

True happiness, the Tungus convinced the explorers, lead via the gullet into the stomach, and after the stomach is stuffed until primitive vest buttons pop, the next rule in the happiness code is to work the diaphragm in a huge laugh, the hugeness of which determines all further social status in the community.

Simple Recipe for Happiness.

The happiness recipe, along with other interesting facts about this lost tribe, reached here from London where the expedition is now preparing a detailed report of its Siberian trip.

"Eat much, laugh much," is the Tungus code, says the report, which further explains, "they are enormous eaters and full of jokes." The tribe laughed and stuffed food at all functions, including weddings, prizefights and wigwam pole dedications. Girls who could eat the most and laugh the hardest were considered the most eligible for marriage.

The Tungus religion is nil, save that they believe in certain good and evil spirits to be propitiated. Trading reindeers and white fox hides is the principal occupation, and in bartering anything, from a Siberian ice plant to the tribal crown, the report declares, they outpoint the New England Yankee in a hundred different ways. The delight of the Tungus is getting the better of a trade, according to the report, "is the finest experience of his life."

Medicines Novelty to Tribe.

Until the arrival of the museum explorers the eat-and-laugh code had cured ills from the day of the first tribesman. Then medicine of the visitors made a hit, and one woman swallowed enough poison to kill an elephant, but with no more suffering than if she had drunk so much water.

No young Shakespears or new Longfellows were discovered, as the Tungus code of living makes no provision for public schools, and consequently reading and writing with them are among the lost arts.

The expedition's guess that it was met with kindness and curiosity. The report made scientific study of beliefs, and obtained many ethnological specimens covering all the Tungus arts and trades. U. Hall head of the museum's post, which accompanied the Siberian expedition.

SEES HIS HEART CUT OPEN.

British Soldier Watches Surgeons Remove Bullet from Ventricle.

LONDON, Nov 10—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—The removal of a bullet from one of the chambers of the heart, under the influence of only a local anaesthetic, and with the patient watching the operation, is described by an army surgeon in The British Medical Journal.

The point of chief interest elicited by the surgeon was the insensitiveness of the heart to direct stimulation. The organ was handled freely, opened with a knife, probed with heavy forceps, and closed with a row of stitches, without affecting its contractions or causing the patient the slighest pain or discomfort.

"The operation was performed under a local anaesthetic," writes the surgeon, "eucaine with adrenalin being used. The heart was exposed. No wound could be seen, but on examination by the surgeon's finger the bullet was felt at the back of the heart, either in the muscle or in the chamber of the right ventricle. It was noticed that manipulation of the heart caused the patient no pain or discomfort of any kind, though the organ occasionally missed a beat, and this in spite of the fact that the anaesthetic had been injected only into the skin and muscles of the chest wall. The patient, of course, was conscious throughout.

"The bullet was grasped, and was then felt to be inside the chamber, so an incision half an inch long was made in the heart wall and the bullet removed by forceps."

GERMANS TO WORK KRAGUYEVAC ARSENAL

BERLIN, Nov 8.—The Overseas News Agency gives out the following for publication.

"According to The Cologne Gazette, the Serbians when leaving Kraguyevac felt certain that they would soon return. They therefore left the arsenal, ammunition, war material, and metals almost untouched. Only in the war material factories were the belts cut and small parts of the machines taken. The factories, therefore, will be easy to restore to their former working capacity.

"The value of the metals, oil, and rubber alone found in Kraguyevac is estimated at from 80,000,000 to 50,000,000 marks, (87,500,000 to $12,500,000.) The large halls of the factories were crowded with French, American, and German machines.

"All the sheds and the storehouses were filled with heaps of brass, lead, loaded cartridges, grenades, and bronze cannon barrels from guns of ancient construction. The factories had been in operation in full blast until the last moment, and everywhere were finished cartridges and grenades.

"The Serbians before leaving threw gunpowder around the houses, so the Germans avoided explosions by flooding the ground.

"Besides Kraguyevac, the Serbians had war material factories only at Prot, Nish, and Krusevac.

"The people of Kraguyevac, weary of war, have manifested only peaceful sentiments, and have asked that soldiers be quartered in the houses for protection against the lawless elements."

How to Prevent Acid Stomachs and Food Fermentation

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is excessive acid in the stomach, aggravated by food fermentation. Hyperacidity irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full, bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements acid and wind. In all such cases and they comprise over 90 per cent of all stomach difficulties the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid, and stop the fermentation by taking one a little warm or cold water immediately after eating from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valuable properties. F. J. G.

300,000 Men Have Already Been Landed at Salonica As Serbia Bravely Resists

The Ever Growing Strength of the French and British Forces in the Southern Part of the Balkan Region is Already Beginning to Tell.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Newspapers of Berlin, as quoted by the correspondent at Copenhagen of the Exchange Telegraph Company, says that the Allies already have landed 300,000 men at Salonika.

Every day, every hour adds to the peril of the Serbian armies, which are fighting desperately to hold back the Austro-Germans, pressing them from the north, and the Bulgarians, invading their country from the east, until the assistance their allies are sending can reach them.

The Bulgarians have extended their grip on the Belgrade-Salonika Railway north and south of Nish and have occupied Leskovac, south of the captured capital, and Aleksinae, to the north. At the latter point they are in close touch with the German army, which, after occupying Krusevac, extended its left wing as far as Djunis, on the left bank of the Bulgar Morava.

The Austro-Germans, advancing southward, are making progress except in the west, where they are being held by the Montenegrins. The invading forces are now reaching the most difficult part of Serbia, the mountainous regions, where the natives, knowing every hill and gully, can offer the strongest resistance. The Austrians and Germans, however, are plentifully supplied with mountain guns, with which they expect to drive the defenders from their fastnesses.

In the south the ever growing strength of the French and British forces is beginning to tell. They are carrying on an energetic offensive against the Bulgars, and have managed to keep the railway clear so far as barring the Bulgars' route to Monastir.

While it will be some time before the Germans can sufficiently repair the northern end of the railway for the transport of troops and munitions, their successes have enabled them to send supplies to the Bulgarians and Turks by the Danube as far as Nikopolis, from which point they can be sent by rail to Sofia and Constantinople.

There is no change in the attitude of Greece, although it is considered significant that at the moment Bulgaria has again protested against the hospitality accorded the allied troops at Salonika the Greek government has applied to the Allies for financial assistance, an application which is receiving favourable consideration.

The Greek government has also renewed to the Allies an expression of its firm determination to maintain neutrality and of its sincere good will toward the Entent Powers.

The campaigns on the other fronts continue without any important changes. The Russians are still attacking in the north and south, and are beginning to feel Germany in the centre, which, it is believed, has been weakened for the purpose of strengthening the two wings. No big movement is expected, however, until the condition of the ground improves.

In the west and on the Italian front there has been considerable fighting.

E. S. Willard, English Actor, is Dead

Has Toured Canada Many Times in Different Plays

LONDON, Nov 11.—E. S. Willard, the actor, died Tuesday after a prolonged illness due to a nervous breakdown.

Edward Smith Willard was born in Birmingham, Eng., on January 9, 1853, and made his first appearance on the stage at the Theatre Royal in Yarmouth, 1869, as Second Officer in "Lady of Lyons." He supported Sothern in Garrick and filled other engagements in the vicinity of London in 1871. Willard became famous as the Shylock in "The Silver King." He made his first appearance in America at Palmer's Theatre in New York in "The Middleman" twenty-five years ago. He performed frequently in Toronto, his favourite plays being "The Middleman," "David Garrick" and "The Professor's Love Story."

ROUMANIA'S SYMPATHY FOR THE ALLIES

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Members of the Roumanian parliament, who are being interviewed by Premier Bratiano, to obtain their views upon the international situation, have been told that the hypothesis of action against Russia need not be considered, says the Bucharest correspondent of the Petit Parisien.

"The prohibition of the transit of communication to Bulgaria," the Prime Minister is quoted as having said, "proves our sympathy for the Entente. I repudiate any policy which expects profits without corresponding sacrifices, but neither will I make sacrifices without the probability of success."

ITALIANS STORMED THE SUMMIT

A Brilliant Feat of Arms by the Italians

ROME, Nov. 10, via Paris, Nov. 11.—The following official statement was issued yesterday at the headquarters of the Italian general staff:

"Continually increasing activity of artillery and aeroplanes on both sides is reported along the Trentino frontier. On the night of the 8th, in the upper Cordevale, the enemy tried with strong forces to recapture the summit of Col di Lana. After repulsing a violent attack our men assumed the offensive, and, harrying the flying enemy, reached and stormed the summit of Monte Sois, which rises 7,700 feet to the north of Col di Lana.

"In Carnia there was an intense artillery action. Our guns dispersed enemy groups in the Kader (Gail) Valley and on Monte Ledin, and bombarded the Saifnitz railroad station at the head of the Fella Valley. On a height west of Gorizia on the night of the 7th, after an intense artillery preparation and volleys of bombs, strong infantry columns attacked our positions, but were repulsed, leaving the ground covered with corpses.

"One of our dirigibles on Monday night, after rising above a dense bank of clouds, crossed the Isonzo zone and Vipacco, and then bombarded entrenchments in the vicinity of Savogna. The dirigible was discovered by the enemy's searchlights, but eluded the fire of anti-aircraft guns."

Russians Capture Village in the Dvinsk Sector

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11.—The War Office reports: "In the Dvinsk region we captured, after a stubborn fight with the bayonet, the village of Ujenichki, on the western shore of Lake Sventen, taking 100 prisoners. Near Komarow, north of Kolki, the enemy thrice attacked and thrice was repulsed. Our artillery set fire to enemy ammunition magazines at Berestiany, south of Kolki."

CASHES CHECK AFTER KEEPING IT 14 YEARS

MILTON, Del., Nov. 9.—After carrying a check for fourteen years G. G. Torbert finally cashed it. Torbert explained the delay by saying he had never needed the money and was in no hurry to get it.

The check was drawn on the New York City Commission Merchants' Bank by George Allison, Jr., and dated July 19, 1901. It was presented at the Sussex Trust Company by Torbert, who seemed to consider but little the risk he had taken in holding it so long.

Constipation Very Prevalent

The great number of advertisements of laxatives, cathartics and pills that are to be found in the newspapers are an indication of the prevalence of constipation. There are several reasons for this national complaint, the main one being that people eat too liberally of fancy foods and highly refined cereals. A change to a plainer diet, consisting of a liberal amount of whole wheat and rye (unbolted flour) and wheat bran all of which are combined in Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal, would relieve constipation without the use of drugs and would be very beneficial to the health. Ask your doctor if this is so. Do not use Roman Meal porridge. It spoils it. Read directions on package.

Soldier of Fortune — by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1913, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"No! you are not—is that what you conception of me? Let me tell you differently. I will never accept money from you. Just as soon as this city wakes up I am going to start forth again and seek work. I have regained my courage, and I am no longer afraid. All I needed was to know that I was not all alone. I can fight for the rest."

"Mrs. Bernard," I began quietly, realizing her spirit, "you have given a wrong meaning to my words. I respect you, believe in you and merely desire to help you to the best of my ability. Sit down here and let us face this thing squarely together. We mustn't act like children or close our eyes to facts. For instance, we have both been up all night. That isn't specially new for me, but it is to you, and the exposure and strain show. You are not fit to go out hunting employment.

"A thousand dollars!" she exclaimed, bewildered.

"Haverly has no choice," hitterly. "The fact that I am tired does not matter."

"Oh, but it does! Now I am not quite so badly off as you suppose. All I ask is a chance to think, to arrange some plan. Won't you all quietly there until I puzzle it out?"

For a few moments as we sat in silence the obvious way out never once occurred to me. Somehow the memory of my own position had become blotted out in contemplation of the serious predicament of my companion. How could I assist her in spite of her pride and her determination to continue the struggle alone? I could not take her to my boarding house, which was exclusively for men nor did I have any acquaintance able to furnish her employment. I shoved my hands deep into my pockets, and my fingers touched the two bills handed me by Vail. For an instant I failed to realize their significance, and then the recollection of my own engagement came swiftly back. At first the memory was a disgust. The very presence of the girl and her fate or struggle made me realize the sordidness of this plot in which I was involved. Somehow it struck me then as a dirty, underhanded scheme. Yet, as I reviewed the details, this conception largely vanished. The feeling of resentment died away, but I doubted if she could be made to look at it in the same light. I glanced across to where she sat, the gray dawn giving me clear view. Her head rested back upon one arm, and she was asleep.

We remained undisturbed, our settee removed from the main pathway, along which a few early workmen passed. She was the very one to act the part of Philip Henley's wife, if she would consent. Her refinement, the clear innocence of her face, would be convincing, and I began already to long for her company. Yet she would have to be told every detail, convinced the apparent fraud was justifiable. I rather dreaded the look in her eyes when she first heard the proposal and her questioning me. While I still hesitated, fearful of refusal, the sun shining upon her face awoke her suddenly. She straightened up instantly, but her eyes smiled as they met mine.

"I was asleep," she said in surprise. "For how long?"

"Nearly two hours."

"And you have sat there quietly all that time?"

"That is nothing. I was tired, but not sleepy. Besides, I had so much to think about."

"You mean regarding what you shall do with me," and she arose to her feet. "It is time now I did something for myself."

"Wait, please," and I extended my hand, almost forcing her back upon the settee. "Let me say a word first before you decide to go. All I told you last night about myself is true, with one exception. I have money and profitable work in view. See!" and I held before her the two bills.

"A thousand dollars!" she exclaimed bewildered. "You! Why, what does it all mean?"

"Yes, and $9,000 more promised when I complete work that ought not to require to exceed two months. I was not without money in the restaurant, only I could not ask the cashier to change so large a bill. Sit down again, please, and let me tell you the story."

She did so almost reluctantly, as though doubting my sanity, but I could note a change in the expression of her face as I proceeded. I told it slowly, carefully, pausing to explain each detail to her questioning, yet was not interrupted more than once or twice. Somehow, as I thus repeated the proposed scheme to another, it did not appear quite as easy or honorable as when I faced it alone.

"That's the whole story," I ended, rather lamely. "What do you think of it?"

"I—I hardly know," with slow hesitation. "It is very strange."

She pressed one hand to her forehead, her eyes on the ground. I watched her, an unasked question trembling on my lips. Suddenly she looked up again, her cheeks flushed.

"You were going to suggest that I go with you, were you not?" she asked swiftly. "That I play the wife's part? Why didn't you ask it?"

"Because I lacked courage," I replied frankly yet leaning eagerly toward her. "I was afraid you would take such a proposition wrongly."

"And you see nothing wrong in carrying out your part? You mean to go to Carrollton with some one—a woman?"

"I—I agreed to the terms—yes."

She drew a long breath, her eyes upon mine.

"Then I will go also," she said soberly and held out her hand.

"You mean that?"

"Yes—why not? Surely it is as right for me as for you. You wished me to say yes, did you not?"

My face must have answered, as my lips failed, but she went on swiftly:

"Then I will go; only remember it is acting, a mere play in which I have a certain part to perform. We are to be friends throughout it all—actors on the stage. There must be no misunderstanding about this."

I had recovered my voice now, realizing all she meant and anxious to reassure her.

"Certainly. There will be no mistake, Mrs. Bernard. That was why I hesitated to ask you, for fear you might misinterpret my purpose."

"We go tonight? I shall need clothing."

"Of course. That was what this money was advanced for, to outfit us. How much will you need?"

She thought a moment, a little line of perplexity between her eyes, finally naming a sum which surprised me.

"Not more than that?" I exclaimed. "Surely that is not enough."

"Oh, yes, it is," laughing. "There will be no dressing. All I need do is appear neat."

We sat there and talked it over, deciding exactly our course of action. At 9 o'clock I left her, hunted up the nearest bank and got change for my bill. Then I gave her the amount asked, and we separated, to meet again late that afternoon at the depot. I felt no doubt as to her being there on time. My day was a busy one, as I had to visit my boarding house, buy needful clothing and arrange for transportation.

At the very moment specified I called up Vail on the phone, and he responded instantly, the very tone of his voice evidencing the relief he felt at hearing from me.

"Began to think I had skipped with the thousand?" I asked. "Well, I haven't, for the other nine looks too good. I've found the right woman to go along with me."

"Good! Who is she?"

"Oh, never mind her name. She is all right. A friend of mine."

"Not likely any one I know. Where are you?"

I told him, and he agreed to send over certain papers to me by messenger. These arrived promptly, and I studied them carefully until nearly train time, getting all the facts firmly implanted in my mind. Mrs. Bernard and I met beneath the grim shadow of the train shed.

At first, as she came toward me through the crowd near the gate, holding out a neatly gloved hand, I could scarcely realize that this well dressed, soft voiced lady was the former homeless creature.

"So you did not even know me," she said pleasantly. "Oh, but you did not. You were passing by when I spoke. Don't apologize, for really I take it as the highest compliment. You are wonderfully improved yourself. Is this our train?"

"Yes," and I took up the grip she designated as hers. "Let us get settled and into the diner, for I am hungry as a wolf."

I had procured opposite sections, and before retiring we studied the papers, together with Vail's letter of instructions, and thus came to a complete understanding. She was quick witted and spoke frankly, and yet when I finally lay down in my berth I felt less well acquainted with her than before. Somehow, in a manner inexplainable, a vague barrier had arisen between us. I could not trace it to any word or action on her part, and yet I felt held away as by an invisible hand. MOTHER OF SCHOOL GIRL

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Daughter's Health.

Plover, Iowa.—"From a small child my 13 year old daughter had female weakness. I spoke to three doctors about it and they did not help her any. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had been of great benefit to me, so I decided to have her give it a trial. She has taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound according to directions on the bottle and she is cured of this trouble. She was all run down when she started taking the Compound and her periods did not come right. She was so poorly and weak that I often had to help her dress herself, but now she is regular and in splendid health."—Mrs. MARTIN BERLVIN, Plover, Iowa.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy.

If you are ill do not drag along and continue to suffer day in and day out but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a woman's remedy for woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

"Oh, pshaw," I muttered, turning toward the silent girl. "We will risk the ghost if you'll drive us out. Put in the grips."

He climbed into his place, but with no special alacrity, but whipped his team into a swift trot, evidently anxious to complete the trip as early as possible.

"Pete," I asked, "who is out there now?"

The negro turned so I could see the whites of his eyes.

"At de Henley plantation, sah? Why, I reckon de oberseer an' de housekeeper—both white folks. I done don't know just who dey am for shure, cause dey don't stay long no more. I reckon dey can't abide dat ghost, sah, an' de field hands dey won't stay on de place at all after dark."

"The overseer and housekeeper, then, are newly employed?"

"Dem am de fac'n, sah. Deh sin't been dar no time at all, an' I reckon as how dey won't stay long, though de niggers say de oberseer am a bad man."

Here was a pleasant situation surely. While the conditions were favorable enough so far as our purpose was concerned, yet I fervently wished we had postponed our arrival until daylight. While the negro's ghost had no terrors for me—indeed, merely afforded amusement—I realized my companion was not so indifferent. She pressed closer to me in the narrow seat, her eyes on the dusky shadows. Soon it became quite dark. I endeavored to laugh away her fears, but got little response. The road was a lonely one, although apparently well traveled, bordered by rail fences and deserted looking fields.

Suddenly the negro pulled up before a high hedge, and I perceived the white glimmer of a gate opposite us, the black shadow of trees beyond.

We had no sooner alighted and paid Pete than he wheeled his team and departed, whipping the horses into a run. I felt her hand grip my sleeve and glanced aside into her face.

"Frightened?" I asked, endeavoring to speak easily. "Don't let that fellow bother you; surely you do not believe in spooks?"

"No," her voice trembling, "but it is all so desolate. I—I wish we had waited until daylight."

"Well, frankly, so do I," I responded, "but come on," and I picked up the suit cases. "We will probably be laughing at ourselves in five minutes. You will have to unlatch the gate."

It was held in place by a sagging rope, but opened noiselessly, and we advanced on to a brick walk, so little used as to be half hidden by weeds growing in the crevices. The moon dimly revealed rank vegetation on either side, while ahead beneath the tree shadows the darkness was profound. There was no sound, no faintest gleam of light, to indicate the house, and I was compelled to advance cautiously to keep to the path, which apparently wound about in the form of a letter "S." We were at the foot of the front steps, the building itself looming black before us almost before we realized its nearness.

Could Not Stand

The Least Excitement.

Was So Weak and Run Down.

Many women become run down and worn out by their household cares and duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with shattered nerves and weak hearts.

When the heart becomes weak, and the nerves unstrung, it is impossible for a woman to look after her household or social duties. The least little exertion or excitement leaves her in an exhausted condition, and not fit to do anything.

On the first sign of any weakness of the heart or nerves, you will be wise if you start to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

This remedy will act directly on the disordered heart making it beat strong and regular, and will also invigorate and strengthen the nerves so as to make them steady and firm.

Mrs. J. A. Williams, Tillsonburg, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I suffered greatly with my nerves. I was so weak and run down, I could not stand the least excitement of any kind. I believe your Heart and Nerve Pills to be a valuable remedy for all sufferers from nervous trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the original remedy for all heart and nerve troubles. Price 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The War Office memorandum gives the following figures of garments bought: Socks, 36,000,000; undershirts, 3,900,000; drawers, 15,200,000; jerseys, 5,000,000; comforters, 6,800,000; body belts, 3,750,000; worsted gloves, 2,600,000; blankets, 12,200,000.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Emotional Miss Tully.

I met Miss Tully in a boarding house. She was supposed to earn her own living, but no one in the house knew her occupation. She usually went out about 9 o'clock in the morning and remained most of the day, but there was nothing regular either about her going or her staying. Sometimes she would remain in the house for several days at a time, and sometimes when she went out in the morning would return before noon and not go out again.

There was a good deal about Miss Tully that fascinated me. She was never for a long period in the same mood. One day she would be lively as a cricket, the next in the depths of despair. Then she would be opulent to fits of anger, when no one dared to approach her. Any sensible person may judge from this that Miss Tully was not likely to make a good wife, but I have noticed in young men a disposition to neglect the girls who are especially fitted to make homes comfortable for those who are so constituted as to make a husband's life a burden. At any rate, I became fascinated with Miss Tully's moods. At our first meeting there was a sudden gladness about her that was simply delicious. A few days later she met me with an important look on her face that completely upset the recovery in my bones. The next week my pity was excited by a melancholy that was no less becoming than her sprightliness or her regal dignity.

It was not long before I was madly in love. But, realising the folly of making a life partner of a girl who was not only changeable as the wind, but whom I knew nothing about—indeed, whose mode of support was a mystery—I fought against my passion. All to no purpose. I was caught in a mesh and unable to extricate myself.

One evening Miss Tully and I were sitting in the drawing room—the boarders, seeing my infatuation, had by this time come to give up the apartment to us—side by side on a sofa. It was in the spring of the year, and Miss Tully was like the season, light hearted, exuberant in spirits and, it seemed to me, willing to listen to love's young dream. Little by little I turned my words upon that dream, which by this time had enthralled me. Miss Tully saw my drift and seemed to yield to a pleased languor, listening eagerly to what I said. I poured into her ear all a lover could say, leading up to a proposal, when she stopped me and said contritedly:

"Say it all again."

I confess I was puzzled—indeed, a trifle put out. To repeat my gloying words was not to my mind. Fortunately my embarrassment was relieved by a maid entering with a note for Miss Tully. She opened and read it. From that moment she was changed. Her light heartedness disappeared and with it her apparent interest in what I had been saying to her. Smarting under this sudden indifference, I left her.

The next evening at dinner I noticed that Miss Tully appeared to have something on her mind of an exasperating nature. Her teeth were set, and her eyes were filled with flashes, coming at long intervals, like heat lightning on a summer night. After dinner I was going up to my room when she passed me in the hall, gave me a glance I did not understand, and went into the drawing room. I followed. We were alone there, and, turning on me like a fury, she began to accuse me of some unexpressed crime, working herself into a very demon. In vain I begged her to tell me what I had done. Without heeding me she talked on, or, rather, stormed on, till at last, seeing no prospect of an end to what was like a storm swaying to the east, to the west, anywhere, everywhere in accordance with its unbridled passion, I left the room.

The next morning I made an effort to escape from this mad creature. I took an early train. For a week I remained away, then, professing to myself to feel confident of my ability to resist the fascination, returned to the house and Miss Tully.

At our first meeting I saw upon her face the most engaging sadness. She gave me a reproachful look, which I took to express pain that I had kept away from her. I longed to take her in my arms; but, with a muffled moan, she went up to her room.

I saw nothing of her for a week. Then she was plain Miss Tully, neither happy nor miserable nor angry. She gave me a smile, put out her hand to me and, intimating that she had something to say to me, led the way into the drawing room.

"I owe you an explanation," she said, "and I am going to reveal to you that which no one else in this house knows. I am an artists' model. I never pose, however, except in proper clothing and only for artists who wish to catch an expression of some one of the passions. They have found me very versatile in this respect, and I have been successful. The secret of my success is that I can at any time work myself into any required mood, and this gives the artist the expression which comes from the model really feeling what is expressed. Excuse me for the experiment in no other way. When you began to talk to me the other evening I was preparing myself to sit for a while. While you were talking I received a note that the artist would instead work on a picture representing a tragedy. On your return I was to pose for Mary Magdalene."

I won Miss Tully for my wife, but I have never quite forgiven her for utilizing my forenoon professionally.

Simple Way to Have Beautifully Wavy Hair

Lustrous, fluffy, wavy hair plays an important part in the scheme of beauty. A heated iron should not be used to give the desired wavy effect for it destroys the life matre, and fluffiness of the hair. It is far better to use plain liquid silmerine, which curls the hair more effectually, more lastingly, and at the same time keeps it beautifully soft, "light" and glossy. It is beneficial instead of harmful, and it is such a simple thing to apply the liquid before retiring, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose, drawing this down the hair from root to tip. Very different from the tiresome, fussy, odorous curling iron method.

Pure silmerine in a liquid form may be found in any drug store and a few ounces will last a very long time. It is neither sticky or greasy and leaves no sediment, spots or streaks. The hair will be quite manageable, no matter what the style of coiffure.

PRISONERS AS SHIELDS.

Russia Says Letters Found on Germans Admit This Practice.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 9.—What purport to be extracts from two letters found on the bodies of German soldiers on the field of battle have been published by the Imperial Commission of Inquiry into the Conduct of the War. The first reads:

"In this case, when the advance becomes too hard, we take Russian prisoners and drive them before us against their fellow-countrymen. Thus they at least in some measure diminish our losses."

The second reputed quotation follows:

"We don't know what to do with prisoners. Henceforth we shall drive every Russian who surrenders before the line of our fortifications to be shot."

The Commission announces that the letters will be photographed and translated into the leading languages of the world to be sent broadcast.

She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Fesirs, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Ideal Weather and a Large Market—Fowl Continues Plentiful—Apples Command High Prices—Comparison in Prices

Market Features.

Creamery butter up one cent.
Dairy butter shows a weakening.
Eggs remain firm.
Oats, up two cents.
Millfeeds, down a little.
Flour down 25 cents.
Hog market declines.
Currants and raisins maintain their stiff prices.

Dairy and Poultry.

Butter, dairy, lb.	30 to 33c
Butter, creamery,	35c
Eggs, new laid, doz.	34 to 35c
Cheese, lb.	30c.
Turkeys, lb.	18c. to 20c.
Geese	15c.
Ducks	15c.
Chickens	15c

Eggs showed a stiffening in price while butter had a tendency to weaken. Now that the factories are closed we may look for a further glut of the market and a corresponding decline.

Chickens sold from $1.10 to $1.30 per pair, but averaged 15 cents a pound. Geese were of a fair quality. One weighing 10 1-2 lbs. sold for $1.30. Turkeys were scarce. One monster bird weighing 20 lbs., was held at $4.00.

Eggs, at Toronto, 40c.; at New York 60c.

Grains, Hay.

Snow apples, $5.50 per barrel at Toronto, and $7 at Winnipeg.

Potatoes maintained their usual high price on the local market, but at outside points ther was a slight decline, due to everybody getting stocked up when the run was on, and the big demand has fallen off; and farmers are rushing forward their supplies to take advantage of the high prices, which has a tendency to weaken the market. However, we must not lose sight of the fact that potatoes were a decidely poor crop throughout the country, owing to the blight, and it will not be long before the demand is as strong as ever and prices advance again.

Meats and Hogs.

Bacon, per lb.	28c to 30c.
Ham	30c.
Cooked hams	35c.
Pork	15c. to 16c.

Wool (no market).
Sheepskins, each	$1.25 to $1.50

Red clover, cwt.	$27.00
Alsike, cwt.	$25.00
Alfalfa, cwt.	$27.00
Timothy, cwt.	$12.00

Shelled walnuts, lb.	50c.
Currants, lb.	13c.
Raisins, lb.	18c.
Yarn, (wool) lb.	85

Sugar is well worth watching. New York prices showed an advance, but Toronto and Montreal markets did not follow. There is a heavy Cuban crop but is not due here till January, and January is a long way off. Until this arrives we may look for higher quotations.

With further reference to the high price of currants, the present quotations are unheard of before in Canada, and it means that we will have to pay pretty stiff prices for the ingredients of our Christmas cakes, and there is no guarantee that they will not advance. The same thing applies more or less to raisins both seeded and seedless.

Comparison in Prices.

With this time the last two years:

JAPAN RUSHES MUNITIONS.

TSURUGA, Japan, Nov. 1.— This, the Japanese base for the Russian fleet operating between Vladivostok and Japan, has suddenly become a great shipping centre for arms and ammunition. Two vessels pass every week between Tsuruga and Vladivostok, and this service has been supplanted by a number of small coaling ships.

The docks at Tsuruga and platforms of the railway station are now stacked high with gun carriages and ammunition cases. Temporary shelters have been thrown up and canvas is used for covering supplies which cannot be placed under a roof. Most of the war supplies are handled by Japanese women dock labourers. Although the women are less than five feet tall, their hard work has given them great muscular development.

Tsuruga has fewer than 1,000 inhabitants. The protected inner port is small and hills rise abruptly from the shore line, limiting the space available for trackage and docks. Hitherto the demands upon warehouse and dock facilities have been slight. Consequently there was no preparation made for the deluge of Japanese materials the railway is unloading here for shipment to Vladivostok. Tsuruga is thoroughly connected by rail with the arms and ammunition centres of Japan and is bearing its share of the extra burden. Yokohama and other ports are not able to accept.

Shimonoseki is also receiving much war material from Japanese factories for shipment to Fusan by steamer and then over the Korean railway to Harbin and the Trans-Siberian Railway. The chief duty of the minor ports is to handle copper, lead, shells, cartridges, and guns manufactured in Japan. At Yokohama, Kobeb, and Naga-saki foreign war supplies, chiefly from America, are received from ships which do not call at Vladivostok, and forwarded by steamers calling at the Siberian seaport. Steamers arriving at Yokohama from American Pacific ports almost invariably land many shells for large guns. The handling of such freight on ships not provided with magazines causes some apprehension among passengers familiar with the risk incurred by carrying such freight.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup Easily and Cheaply Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2½ ounces of Pinex and make it into 16 ounces of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2½ ounces Pinex (50 cents worth) into a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you 16 ounces—a family supply—of a most effective remedy, at a saving of 02. A day's use will usually overcome a severe cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex. Keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste. Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Eczema Was Cured Twelve Years Ago

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my [illegible] and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house, and find it invaluable for chafing, chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." —(Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

KEEPING OF APPLES

CONNOISSEUR TELLS HOW TO PACK FRUIT.

"Wrap Every Blessed One, or Put Them in Barrels Between Layers of Sawdust or Paper."

How to keep apples, is a seasonable query. To be sure innumerable apples, rd, green or streaked, reach their ultimate destiny daily and are eaten. But really every day is "apple day" at the rate of seven a week until the end of April. And how to preserve the apple supply through all the vicissitudes that cut short the career of the average apple in its prime comes as a preliminary to laying in the winter supply.

According to one who knows, who first hand has experienced every whim of the fruit that made Western New York famous, the trick is easy. "Select sound apples," is the first direction of this apple connoisseur. "An invalid apples are no good when it comes to the matter of apple longevity.

"Now, anybody knows that the one malady that besets apples of whatever size and colour and kind, is rot. There are different kinds of rot, like soft rot and dry rot, but whatever the kind, the effect is the same, the apples are spoiled.

"The apples obtained, get a barrel or tight box or whatever kind of a package that is to be used and early in November or so as soon as the weather gets cool, proceed to pack them away. Now this is the secret of it all. Inasmuch as infection comes from the outside, the thing to do is to isolate each apple from its neighbour and everything else for that matter. It is not practical to hermatically seal up each apple but a reasonable approach can be obtained by first covering the bottom of the barrel or box with an inch course of dry sawdust. On this put the first layer of apples being careful not to bruise them. Fill in the interstices with more sawdust, a layer of sawdust and continuing covering over the tops of the tier with a layer of sawdust and continuing this operation until the apples or the space in the barrel is exhausted. That is all there is to this simplest of apple storage, except to be sure to keep them in a cool place, far away from furnace and preferably where the temperature is just above freezing.

"Some apple eaters though will demur at the little trouble of getting a bushel or two of sawdust. The next best means is to take old newspapers. Put a thick layer in the bottom of the barrel or box, lay on a course of apples, put on another course of papers, letting them turn up at the edges each time so as to form a lining against the sides of the package, and continue the operation until the winter supply of apples is all out of sight in the home-made storage.

"If the apple epicure is willing to take a little more time and wrap each apple separately the way oranges come wrapped in tissue paper, except that the covering should be much thicker, virtually as good results can be obtained as by the sawdust method. I have some apples of a late variety that I wrapped up last November, and now after a year, they are as firm and sound as the day they were taken from the orchard. To be sure there is nothing practical in keeping apples a year or more, but it shows what can be done with a little care. There is this further advantage in packing in sawdust or papers, that the apples retain their flavour and crispness. Everybody knows how soon apples wilt and become insipid when just piled in a box or crate in a corner of the cellar and allowed to shrivel and rot at their earliest convenience."

GERMAN PORK PRICES FALL.

BERLIN, Nov. 9.—So many hogs were hurried into Berlin stockyards for sale the last day before the maximum price order became effective that prices dropped from $7.50 to $10 a hundredweight from those which have been prevailing, and in some cases were under the maximum which has been established.

MEAT CAUSE OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headaches, dizziness, your stomach sours, or if bad you have rheumatic twinges or if bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in the urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN

LONDON, Nov. 9.—Discussing Russia's recovery and her share in the Balkan campaign, the distinguished military critic Waclaw Czerniewski, writes to the Pall Mall Gazette:

The recent victories of the Russian army in Eastern Galicia are of great significance, as they clearly demonstrate the entire change in the military situation on the whole Russian front. As far back even as last year, while I was in the Russian firing line, I everywhere heard among Russian officers a regret that the Grand Duke Nicholas intended to carry on his campaign on the left bank of the Vistula.

"The German army was able there to develop an enormous mobility. Russia possesses more men and more resources than Germany, but she is inferior in regard to munitions and lacks the ability to effect sudden changes in the disposing of her armies. The German army was able to deal a blow in the weakest spot, thus compelling the recall of Russian troops from their intended objectives, and giving to the German General Staff the opportunity of starting a new offensive against localities so depleted. By these tactics the German army compelled the Russians to retreat, for they were always threatening them with an enveloping movement.

"The German press repeatedly states that Germany will not make Napoleon's blunder. Not to make Napoleon's blunder means not to penetrate into Russia, but this mistake Germany has already committed. They have overrun a country where they have lost their advantages. They have to struggle now, not only with the Russian Army and with the Lithuanian climate, but also with the Lithuanian roads. I know from my own experience that there is no possibility in Lithuania of using motor vehicles. There are places which could be reached only on horseback or by the very narrow and specially adapted carts.

"In these circumstances Russia has gained the superiority. The Russian army lacks motor vehicles but it has at its disposal an enormous number of horses. In consequence of this the Russians are able to turn from the defensive to the offensive. Now is this all Russia has gained the necessary time to develop her production of munitions. Huge factories near Ekaterinoslav, in the south at Tula in the centre, and at Petrograd, in the north of Russia, work day and night to supply the munitions for the army, while time after time [illegible] munitions is arriving [illegible] Tsaritsa Station [illegible] Petrograd. [illegible] is given, all can help to Russia [illegible] of the second reserve to arms [illegible] Russia and [illegible] of [illegible] that one is enabled not to meet the Germans successfully, but to send more men to the Caucasus, [illegible] Duke [illegible] and [illegible] be defeated [illegible] operations with the object [illegible] ing Serbia.

"What [illegible] present Russian [illegible] daunted [illegible] and it is [illegible] them, the [illegible] [illegible] Russian [illegible] That [illegible] determined [illegible] Russia [illegible] real importance [illegible] Russian troops [illegible] and at the [illegible] [illegible] off at the [illegible]

GREAT BRITAIN'S NEW WAR COMMITTEE TO BE COMPOSED OF FIVE MEMBERS

Asquith, Balfour, Bonar Law, McKenna and Lloyd George Are the "Big Five" Who Will Carry on Empire's War Affairs--Artillery Fighting on the Western Front--Little News of Importance From the Balkans To-day.

UNITED STATES ANGRY OVER THE ANCONA AFFAIR

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The new British Cabinet War Committee's full personnel was announced to-day by Premier Asquith in the House of Commons.

It will consist of Premier Asquith, First Lord of the Admiralty Balfour, the Colonial Secretary Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer McKenna, and Munitions Minister Lloyd George.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The American press to-day expresses great indignation over the Ancona affair, and calls upon Washington to "wake up." "The Ancona infamy is bue one in the grand scheme. Germany assumes that this government can be kept asleep. Why not? The Lusitania is forgotten and filed away in Mr. Lansing's pigeonholes. The tide of popular wrath is rising with each unspeakable outrage. Surely there is a limit if not to official, to public patience. A government which shuts its eyes to the murder of its citizens cannot permanently expect to escape trouble and exposure. To have permitted the Lusitania massacre to stand all these months has been for Mr. Wilson a political blunder which will in the end ruin him," said the Herald.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 11.—The withdrawal of first and second French infantry regiments and the 16th British from the Gallipoli Peninsula is reported to-day by the Berliner Tageblatt on the strength of information from Budapest.

Ontario has not been slow to recognize the deeds of the heroic Belgian people for Premier Hearst on behalf of the Provincial Government has granted $10,000 from the war fund to the Belgian Relief Committee.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—News from the Serbian front is vague, but it is declared to be untrue that the Germans are occupying the entire line from Kralievo to Kragujevatz and Petrovac. Important Serbian forces arriving from Mitrovitza have reached Kutchanik defile where they occupied the railway station to which the Bulgarians bound from Uskup to Prisrend had advanced. Operations extending to northwestern front now are the key to the situation, as the Serbian troops sent from the north to Krusevo and Monastir will pass there. The Serbian Government has been removed to Krusevo east of Prilep. Despatches from Salonika deny positively that Veles has been occupied by the French.

GENEVA, Nov. 11.—Despatches received from Athens say the Greek General staff has decided to put into training all citizens who have not done military service. The effect of this action, it is said, will be to raise the strength of the Greek army to half a million officers and men.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 11.—Considerable loss of life among the crew of the German protected cruiser Frauenlos, torpedoed by a British submarine, was reported here to-day. Details are lacking.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Greece, after all, may go to Serbia's aid against Bulgarians, according to a delayed message from Athens to-day. The arrival at Salonika of so many more British troops as to convince the Greek Government of the Allies' determination to fight the Ausro-Germans and Bulgarians effectively is given as the reason for this change in the outlook.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—Formal authority has been given by the Department of Militia for the raising of new regiments in North Waterloo and Wellington counties, Onterio. The North Waterloo regiment will be commanded by Col. Lochead, and the Wellington regiment by Col. Craig. Col. Mersereau will raise an additional New Brunswick regiment in the northern part of that province.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—A despatch from Tunis says: "Commander of the Ancona who reached here Thursday, declares the submarine gave his vessel no signal to stop. The first sign of the presence of the submarine was shells from a distance of five miles which grazed the steamer. The Ancona stopped dead."

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 11.—Cannonade of terrific intensity heard near Fehmernbell in the Baltic Sea it is beleived to have been the result of a British submarine attack on a German squadron. Fehmern Channel is the entrance to the Kiel Bay, and submarines may have actually attempted to attack the great German fleet in the Kiel Canal.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Sir Edward Grey wanted to resign as Foreign Secretary when Lord Haldane was eliminated from the British Cabinet, he told the House of Commons this afternoon. He would have done so, he added, if it had not been for the war crisis: "I regret," said the Foreign Secretary, "that no opportunity has arisen to utilize his lordship's services in the Foreign Office. I considered his retirement from the Cabinet a great loss to the public."

PARIS (Official) Nov. 11.—Sharp artillery duels are occurring from time to time to-day at intervals along the Franco-German war front. Comparatively, however, the last few hours have been quiet.

MALTA, Nov. 11.—Scenes of wild panic p receded the sinking of the Italian liner Ancona. Men fought over the blood-spattered decks for places in the lifeboats. Shrieking, terror-stricken women leaped into the sea, some with children in their arms. Passengers badly wounded by the submarine's shrapnel and unable to move went down with the steamer as she disappeared beneath the waves. A dozen leaped into the water from the deck of the sinking liner. Others went to their graves when the boats capsized as they struck the water. Women and children, crying for help, were sucked down in the whirlpool that engulfed the big steamer. The latest reports indicate that about 176 persons perished. Only eleven Americans were aboard. Mrs. Cecile Greil was the only native-born American citizen, it was stated. The others were ten Italians who had become naturalized American citizens.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—The Morning Post says: A correspondent sends us a story told by the Captain of a French cruiser which well illustrates the important part being played by many noble women in the war. The Captain says his vessel was instrumental in saving a number of lives when a British transport was torpedoed ome time ago in the Aegean Sea. On board were thirty-six nursing Sisters, of whom a number were drowned. When the French boats came on the scene the nurses called out with one accord: 'Fighting men first." Such an instance of devotion to the flag surely deserves to live in British history.

A casualty list issued last night shows that ten women nurses of the New Zealand nursing service were lost when the transport Marquette was torpedoed and sunk in the Aegean Sea lost month. Nearly 100 of the personnel of the Marquette, in all, were unaccounted for, the Admiralty stated, when the sinking of the transport was announced on October 26. The Morning Post's story quoted above evidently deals with the sinking of this vessel.

GEORGIAN BELIEVES HE IS RAIN MAKER

Lyons, Ga., Nov. 11.—Colquitt Chambers believes he is a rain maker. Lately he killed a large black snake and hung it up in a bush. A shower came up and gave him a wetting before he could reach shelter. A day or two later he mowed some hay and this brought another shower.

Now people in every section are killing snakes and hanging them up and mowing hay to bring rain.

SLEEPING QUARTERS ARRANGED FOR MEN OF 93rd BATTALION

Question of Where the Different Platoons Are to Be Quartered Arranged This Morning and Men Will Be in Barracks in a Short Time--Another Big Squad Inoculated This Morning--To-day's Military News.

Tentative plans were made this morning for the sleeping quarters of the men of the 93rd. The men of A company will be housed in the rooms at the north-west corner of the armouries, which will also accommodate a portion of B company. The bunks in part of the artillery quarters and in the company rooms will be available for the balance of B company. The band will occupy quarters in the east end of the armouries. It is not known yet when the men will take up their quarters in the barracks.

The teeth of the men of the 93rd Battalion are being overhauled by Dr. Morrison, who has been appointed to look after the dental work for the battalion. Every day a squad of men is paraded to Dr Morrison for an examination.

Through a misplaced line in last night's military news in the Examiner the relatives of Pte. Reg. Murduff, the Lakefield boy reported, may have been caused needless worry. The line in question, "He is reported dangerously ill" referred to Pte. Geo. Shouldice of Burleigh, mentioned further down in the column and had no connection with the Murduff paragraph. Pte. Murduff is a son of Mr. Geo. Murduff, of Lakefield, and a brother of Mr. Robert Murduff of the Matthews-Blackwell Co.

The band of the 93rd introduced another new marching song during yesterday's route. "My Little Girl," the number is called, the chorus is catchy and easily sung. It was quickly picked up by the lads in khaki. The words are as follows:

My little girl—you know I love you,
And I long for you each day,
My little girl—I'm dreaming of you
Tho' many miles away.
I see the lane—down in the wildwood,
Where you promised to be true
My little girl, I know you're waiting,
And I'm coming back to you.

The 93rd Battalion spent yesterday afternoon in a route march, during which they invaded a portion of Smith township. The route lay along the Chemong road for some three miles as far as the school house and from there the battalion made its way east until the Lakefield road was reached, and then returned to the armouries via the Lakefield road, Water and George street. The band and the drummer boys provided plenty of music en route and the lads in khaki were given frequent opportunity to show their vocal ability. They reached the armouries shortly after 4 o'clock and to demonstrate that they weren't tired, there was a hot game of football under way five minutes after the parade was dismissed.

Pte. Wm. Ebbs of No. 1 platoon, A company, has been detailed for duty with the military police, replacing Sergt. E. Baumer, who has been promoted pioneer sergeant and transferred to the headquarters staff.

Sergt. R. Naples of the 93rd Band has received word that his brother, Pte. Joseph Naples of the 2nd Scots Guards, has been wounded and gassed in the recent fighting in France. Pte. Naples was first hit with a bullet and then received a dose of gas from a shell which burst near him. He, like his brother in the Peterborough band, is a crack shot.

There are now four Indians in the ranks of the 93rd Battalion and all are favourites with their companions. The quartette consists of Bandsman Jos. Blaker and Pte. Henry Muskrat from Rice Lake, and Ptes. Samson Taylor and Wm. Johnston from Chemong. Pte. Taylor plays on the 93rd soccer team and adds to his other accomplishments by being a clever step dancer. He will be seen in action at the Battalion minstrels. Pte. Muskrat will be remembered by sporting fans as a contestant in the Examiner road races a few years ago.

Pte. Alex. Gillespie, son of Mr. James Gillespie, Hunter street east, has been home on a short visit to his parents for a couple of days and left again this afternoon for Guelph where he is a member of the 2nd Pioneer Battalion. Pte. Gillespie, who has been prospecting in Northern Ontario for the past few years, is one of two hundred men who came down from the north to enlist. They include high salaried men who have given up responsible positions to go forward in the cause of their King and country. The battalion is going to Montreal the end of this week, where it is expected they will only be for a short time before proceeding overseas. Pte. Gillespie's many friends in Peterborough will wish him good luck and a safe return.

The members of C company of the 57th Regiment who are now wearing the uniforms of the 93rd battalion O.E.F., are arranging to have a photograph taken. C company has contributed nearly 100 men for the overseas forces of which about fifteen are members of the 93rd. They include Company Sergeant Hattshorn, Company Quartermaster Sergeant Williams and Sergt. Jack Knowles of A company 93rd.

Majors Cameron and Eastwood had a busy time at the armouries this morning when some sixty-five members of the 93rd Battalion received their first injection of typhoid inoculation.

Here is how the sleeping accommodation at the armouries will be divided:

Nos. 1 and 2 platoons of A company will sleep in the old band room.

Nos. 3 and 4 platoons of A company will occupy the artillery store room at the north-west corner.

The battalion cooks will occupy the sergeants' room.

The staff sergeants will be quartered in the Bugle Band room.

B company will sleep in the artillery gun shed.

The lecture room at the east end of the armouries will be the quarters of the band.

As announced some days ago by the Examiner it is not the intention to appoint a medical officer for the 93rd Battalion until next spring and Majors Eastwood and Cameron, A.M.C. of Peterborough have been appointed to look after the health of the men and the examination of recruits while the 93rd remain in Peterborough. Both officers will therefore be required to appear in uniform from now on until a battalion medical officer is appointed or until the battalion leaves Peterborough.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—Gen. Sir Sam Hughes expects that Toronto will raise twenty battalions before spring. He stated to-day that he believed this could be done easily.

Preliminary Hearing of Sandford Lindsay

Commenced Before His Worship Magistrate Rumble This Morning—Evidence of Drs. Sutton and Holdcroft Was Taken Before the Adjournment.

SEPTIC POISONING CAUSED DEATH

Sandford Lindsay of Dummer Township, with his wife beside him, appeared before County Police Magistrate Langley this morning. Lindsay and his wife, it will be remembered, were arrested a fortnight ago, on a series of charges arising from the death of their fourteen-year-old daughter, Lilian May Lindsay, are held on three counges, namely, that on Friday, September 17th, he did murder Lilian May Linsday, that at divers times throughout the year 1915 he did have criminal relations with the said Lily May Lindsay, and that he caused the death of the unborn child of the girl. It was on the second charge, that of preliminary hearing, was commenced this morning. The evidence of Drs. Sutton of Norwood and Holdcroft of Havelock was all that was heard.

The Doctors' Evidence.

Dr. Sutton of Norwood was the first witness sworn. He knew the accused and was called in his professional capacity to attend Lillian May Lindsay, daughter of the accused, on the 13th and 14th days of September. When he arrived he was told that a baby had been born to the girl several hours before. He made an examination of the patient, at which the mother was present. He asked to see the child, but was not shown it. However he was satisfied that there had been a delivery of one child. He couldn't say how long elapsed between the delivery of the child and his examination, but it would be the same day. The accused was not present in the room. The girl's temperature was 100. Under ordinary circumstances it would not have been so. Witness concluded that there was peritonitis. Upon further examination he found a depression. Dr. Sutton did not see her after death. The depression was caused by some instrument. He didn't believe it possible that it was caused by any instrument that he used.

He had no conversation with the accused beaten on the cause of death. He saw Lindsay outside the house the first day he called. He told the prisoner that the main thing to fear was inflamation. The father said a home boy by the name of King was responsible for the trouble.

"It was within ten hours and not beyond 24 hours from the time witness said, in answer to Mr. Gordon of the birth of the child until he saw her. The forceps used in the operation did not cause the depression. He had great difficulty in making the examination owing to the condition of the girl. On the second day he didn't notice the depression, as he didn't look particularly for it. Some instrument of some kind caused it. He admitted that it was possible for the deceased young woman to have done it herself. He could not say what kind of instrument was used to bring it about. He viewed the state of pregnancy had existed from four or five months.

To the Crown Attorney he stated that he was not sure that an abortion had been performed.

Dr. Holdcroft of Havelock on being sworn, stated that he made the post mortem examination on the late Lily May Lindsay assisted by Dr. Blair. He found gas in the tissues, which, upon further examination, he stated that the abdominal organs of the deceased were in a state of putrefaction. The post mortem examination was made on the verandah of the house. He saw a woman there who he learned was Mr. Lindsay. He did not see Lindsay. There was a tear made on the upper left side of the uterus. As a result of that an injury to sound expert septic peritonitis, which would cause death. Such injuries do not always cause death. He knew of no case where it had not. The chance of recovery depended altogether on the virulence of the poison. If possible probe the wound in the uterus was self-inflicted. The puncture was made by an instrument at least two inches of an inch in size. He could hardly understand how the patient could bear the severe pain that such an action would cause. He would judge it was a dull instrument that was used.

To Mr. Gordon he admitted that there was a possibility that such a thing could have been done by the girl herself.

HEAVY RECRUITING IN PETERBORO' IS OFFICIALLY NOTED

Canadian Patriotic Fund Bulletin Recognizes the Loyal Response of Residents of This City

SIX PER CENT. ENLISTED

The official monthly bulletin of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, published in Ottawa, pays a tribute, in the October issue, just received, to Peterborough's loyalty. The reference is as follows:

"At present the number of men under arms and serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Force equals about two per cent. of the population of Canada. This, it is generally conceded, is less than it should be.

In Peterborough, however, the need of the Empire seems already to have been fully realized. Thirteen hundred men, residents of that city, have enlisted, or about six per cent. of the population.

Is there any other city in Canada especially in Eastern Canada, that can equal or better that record?"

This recognition by the Canadian Patriotic Fund will be fully appreciated by the citizens of Peterborough. At the same time it is stated here that the figures for recruiting in this city and district are nearer fifteen hundred. However, thirteen hundred represents the recruits who resided in Peterborough City.

What Must I Pay For Glasses?

A question worth asking these hard times. Who does not know of some friends who has paid far too much for their glasses? No one will have cause to complain of the reasonable prices charged by Dr. W. H. Lacey, B.D., of the Peterborough Optical Parlours, for his glasses, whatever style, and in addition you are getting the very highest quality excelled by none, and equalled by a very few. Glasses sold by us are not the expensive ones but that some people imagine "See Us and See Better." 440 George street 'Phone 1160 or 1484. Opposite Examiner Office.

OPEN MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE OF WOMEN'S COUNCIL

There will be an open meeting of the Executive Committee of the Woman's Council on Friday afternoon Nov. 12th, at 3.30, in the Teachers' Room of the Public Library. Reports of the autumn meeting in Toronto will be given and nominations for the officers for the coming year will be made. A large attendance is requested.

DESERTED HUSBAND GETS STRANGE REVENGE

READING, Pa., Nov. 10.—Word is said to be a husband's revenge on learning who resulted in the arrest here of Mrs. Christian Mursiffa, twenty-seven, by Federal Immigration Inspectors. She was locked up to await the arrival of a Philadelphia police matron to take her to that city and will likely be deported to Italy as an undesirable alien.

It is alleged that the woman, tired of her husband and transferred her affections to a younger and handsomer man. Not having lived in America three years, she is still amenable to certain immigration rules. It is said that the husband, whom she deserted, finding himself unable to win her back notified the immigration authorities.

The Drama entitled "The Last Loaf," which was given under auspices of Charlotte Street Ladies' Aid Society recently, is to be repeated, by request, on Tuesday Evening, Nov. 23rd, in the Lecture Room of the Church. Admission 25c.

A PARADOX AND NO PARADOX.

Applying the word "commencement" to the closing exercises of a school like the Collegiate Institute does not constitute the paradox it seems to do. Literally or, rather, verbally, it is a paradox; but in a higher and real sense "commencement" is an apt word. The occasion marks the end of a term, but it also marks the beginning of a new era for most or many of the participants, whose academic career, as implied in attendance at the Institute, closes. It is to many of them the beginning of practical life in the world for which they have been preparing in an educational way; and rightly regarded the occasion signalizes the commencement of the most real culture, self-culture. At the Institute the pupils have not reached any finality of scholastic attainment. They have simply learned how to learn; have been taught how to teach themselves—to study, to begin to complete the never-ending process of education. The most valuable part of a collegiate or university education is not the heterogeneous knowledge amassed, but the acquirement of the science of study, to be applied as an art in after life by whom would be really educated. The man or woman who regards the end of a college or university course as an end, and proceeds to forget what few facts have been picked up, has wasted his or her time; for they have only completed the kindergarten course of study compared with the boundless possibilities of education and application of knowledge that have their real commencement only in the closing of their collegiate or university career.

IDEAL AND FORCE.

Great Britain has enlisted an army of more than three million men by voluntary enlistment. Could any other country have secured the same number of soldiers, or a similar ratio to population as Britain has done? Could Germany have done the same—have raised, four and a third millions by voluntary enlistment? Very probably and almost certainly not. Britain could not have got one-half the number she has got for a war of aggression—a war of spoliation—a war of injustice and gigantic wrong. The German people would not have come forward to offer themselves as pawns in the game played in the interests of the war lords. Germany's great armies are levies, not offerings If the German people with all their love of the Vaterland, had been asked to fight for their own enslavement—subjugation to the yoke of the oligarchy—they would not have responded as the British people have done. The latter volunteer to fight for the triumph of democracy—for the rights of the people—for the liberties that divine and human justice demands for every subject or citizen of every country. The Germans cannot understand the spirit of voluntary service for high ideals. They can less understand British subjects volunteering by millions to fight for an idea — for the quixotic purpose of vindicating the national honour, to keep the pledged word of the nation. The glory of British freedom is that it makes men of men—men with a volition of their own—not mere machines to be set in motion by the resistless lever of force. Voluntary enlistment for military service is an unintelligible and unthinkable, for drill-sergeant ridden Germans, as compulsory military service would be to free Britons at home, or in any part of the Empire

BIG RESULTS FROM LITTLE THINGS.

"Save and serve" is the motto of a Toronto newspaper, the Mail and Empire. The spirit of this slogan is admirable; and at this time it should be laid heavily to heart. Premier Asquith has told us in plain terms of the necessity of national and individual economy, in order to keep the effectiveness of service up to the requisite standard. By saving we are able the better to serve. We don't yet quite realize in this country, and in this community, the necessity of saving; nor do we realize the benefits to ourselves and the community of forming the habit of saving. This need not, and should not, be mere stinginess; it should be the practice of economy; of self-denial in the matter of mere luxuries — in eating, drinking, dressing, and pleasure seeking—so that we may have the more for necessary and high uses.

We have not yet arrived at the point of making savings — "economies" the French call them. We devote a great deal of money to teaching the children in our schools, how to make money; to fit them to make their way in the world of action. We do not, however, practically teach them how to make the best use of money, the most important part; for money derives its greatest value from the use that is made of it. At one time, about ten years ago, the Peterborough Board of Education, was perilously near adopting the Penny Savings Bank system in our schools; but in spite of the efforts of some public-spirited and clear-seeing members, the proposal was sidetracked, and the opportunity was neglected of applying in a practical way the theoretical teaching we give in our schools. If, at that time, the system had been adopted, there would have been to the credit of the children in the aggregate thousands of dollars that was, no doubt, absolutely frittered away in frivolous and unprofitable ways. Better than that a great deal; we should have had formed habits of thrift that would have made better men and women of the children who have since grown to, or approached the status of, manhood and womanhood. We should have had a generation of men and women who would, in the main, have had thrifty habits; would have had contracted the habit of saving, and would have learned to apply the first lesson in the proper use of money, avoidance of wasting it upon unprofitable things. Many of us would have found easier the practice of saving which the conditions of to-day force upon us.

Now we must save in order to serve; and the way in which trifling savings can be made to accomplish important results, is demonstrated amongst us. A striking example of this is the amount raised for the Red Cross Fund by the "One-Cent-a-Day Club" of the Ashburnham Red Cross Society. During the month of October, the amount, contributed in this way, was $69.19, making a total since the organization of the club of $335.92. This may be a small amount compared with the millions raised for the truly noble work of the Red Cross; but it would be considered something handsome if some individual had contributed that amount in a lump sum.

A very important point is that, that we have a sum of $335 available for helping comfort, and relieve our wounded soldiers, which but for the agency of the club would have been frittered away upon possibly, injurious trifles. Nobody had to pinch, but some had in order to give, to practice true economy — saving to have to give, and learn practice of one of the highest virtues, self-denial. Considering the excellent work of the One-Cent-a-Day Club, it is desirable that its membership be extended to the whole city, or similar organizations established. This would help many who only can, or only could thus, give to the Red Cross Fund, to do a part. Thus would be fostered the spirit of universal cooperation which is needed, in other ways as well as in money matters, to enable everybody to do his or her share in doing the city's and country's share of helping to wage our righteous side of this great war.

NOT A "LIAR" BUT A GOOD TORY

Discussing the charge of Men's Wear that a real estate agent in Toronto got a contract for military clothing through the influence of a member of parliament, farmed it out to a firm of foreigners, and made a rake-off of $20,000, The Toronto News says: "any liar can launch a slander against the Government and any wildly partisan sheet can give it circulation. Mr. James Acton, proprietor of Men's Wear, must feel flattered. He launched the story. Nobody ever heard of him before as a liar or a wild partisan. He is one of the most reputable business men in the city, and has usually been reckoned as a somewhat more consistent Tory than The News." The Globe.

SIX OUT OF SEVEN.

A Catholic family at West Tytherley, Hants, England, has six of its seven sons in the army—four of them being engaged in the actual fighting at the front. The parents, Mr and Mrs Patrick Cummins, recently received a letter of congratulation from His Majesty King George.—Catholic Register.

DUTY OF PROVIDING EMPLOYMENT FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS

"Not for a thousand years will we be able to pay the deep debt of gratitude which the people of Canada owe to our boys at the front, and the municipalities should do everything they can for the returned soldiers. Toronto is giving the preference to soldiers when filling vacancies, and we have placed many in positions already." So wrote Mayor Church of Toronto, and President of the Union of Canadian Municipalities, in a letter to us recently and these sentiments are those of every civic chief in the country, and what is more, from expressions received here and published in the local press, they are following the example of the Queen City, and acting in a very tangible manner. But when the war is over thousands of men will return—alas many of them wounded—looking for work, and then will come the test of our gratefulness. It was urged at the Niagara meeting of the U. C. M. that the returned soldiers should not be disbanded unless they have positions to go to, but governments are not of that kind—being eager to get rid of the responsibility of paying and feeding large bodies of men—unless forced by circumstances, as in the case of the United States, after the Civil War—and it does seem to us that something of a similar procedure might have to take place in this country. A hundred thousand men suddenly thrown on an already impoverished labour market is no joke, and it is probable that the government had this in mind when it called the recent conference of provincial Premiers to discuss a programme evidently drawn up by Senator Lougheed.

While wishing all success to the scheme, and this journal is prepared to give all the information at its disposal, we cannot help but wish that there had been better machinery to cope with the situation—such as national labour exchanges, as they have in England, and which have proved so successful. There is still time to organize a complete chain of exchanges if the Government is really in earnest.

There is no doubt that in the placing of returned soldiers there will be much heartburning amongst those displaced to make room for the boys, for Canada's market for labour, as already mentioned, is a very limited one. But this is the price the "stay at homes" must pay, and if dismissals are to take place, we have no compunction in saying they should be those young, able-bodied men who will have shirked their duty when called to serve their country in its hour of need. Every soldier boy at the front must be made to feel that on his return to civilian life a job is waiting for him.

Mayor Church's words should be placarded in every workshop and acted upon by every employer of labour. —Canadian Municipal Journal.

HOW AUSTRALIAN CAN DIE

(London Daily Mirror, Oct 23)

With what heroism Australian gunners die is told, says the Central News correspondent at Perth, West Australia, in the following letter home from Corporal H. R. McLarty, of the West Australian artillery, now at the Dardanelles It has sent a wave of patriotic pride and enthusiasm right through the colony.

Corporal McLarty writes:—

This is how the men in this battery (the 8th) die. When the smoke from the bursting shells had cleared away Watts ran up to see the damage. He found Mick Taylor crawling about the ground, covered with blood and dazed.

Bill said, "Are you badly hurt, Mick?" "No, Bill," he replied, "I am only scratched. Look after Doug. and Stan."

We found later that she was wounded in fourteen places.

Bill Wallis then picked up Doug. Lennard. The poor lad had one arm off, one leg shattered at the thigh and internal wounds.

He said: I'm done. Look after Dick and Stan. Don't mind me."

Carter was leaning on the gun. He had a fearful wound in the side. He said, "I'm sorry I'm moaning. I know it will upset the others, but I can't help it, I can't help it." He died, poor chap, almost immediately. His last words were, "Did they get the gun?"

Doug. was in fearful agony, but kept saying, "I'm dying, but please God I'll die game." He lingered for two hours, and it was a terribly pitiful thing to watch.

His last words were: "I died at the gun, didn't I?" And so he went, dear lad, the most gallant the most unselfish little soldier God ever made. He has taught us all how to die.

Mick may pull through—fourteen wounds!

The general spoke to us all. He saids "Dear lads, I have heard of nothing grander than the way your comrades died. I am proud of your battery."

GERMANY SPARRING FOR TIME.

The Imperial German Department of War Psychology may have blundered often in its prognosis of outside sentiment, but it perfectly knows the reactions of its own people. The German mind is no more to be neglected than the German stomach. It requires to be nourished. The dramatic interest in war must be sustained. The eye of popular imagination must not be allowed to roll at will about the horizon, as it does in England. Hope must be focused. War, as a moving picture, must preoccupy the mind outwardly and save it from falling in upon itself. When the drama takes a wrong turn, or when it ceases altogether, another film must be snapped on in the place of the one that has turned out to be disappointing.

Thus, the mass imagination of Germany has been officially fixed, now upon this picture and then upon that. The first film was the capture of Paris, unfinished. The next was the crushing of the Slav, unfinished. Another was the mastery of the sea by submarines, unfinished. The picture now running is the union of Europe and Asia through a Turko-German corridor. The enthusiasm of the people for it is in proportion to their previous disappointments. It is extravagant That is what an Imperial Department of War Psychology is for. The failure on the west, the failure on the east, the failure under sea—these are all put out of mind by the glamour of success in this new direction. "The present main theatre of war in Serbia," writes Major Moraht in the Berliner Tageblatt, "is witnessing a chain of successes which our armies, with Austria-Hungary's and Bulgaria's, are winning daily without a single reverse." Our armies, with Austria-Hungary's and Bulgaria's, against Serbia alone! But in glamour there is no perspective. "The meeting of the Teutonic and Bulgarian forces," says Wilhelm Conrad Gomoll in the Cologne Gazette, "was a moment of world historical significance. We had reaped the fruits of long, hard work. The victory of our own and the Bulgarian offensives against Serbia had been achieved." Is that a victory to boast of?

If the German imagination were not preoccupied with pictures and phrases the truth might be perceived that although Germany might lose the whole war in this Balkan adventure she cannot win it there. In Russia she has lost momentum and has a dangerous line to defend. On Aug. 9, the German armies took Mitau, twenty-five miles from the important Baltic port of Riga, the fall of which then seemed foregone and imminent. It has not fallen yet. Five weeks ago the Russian Army eluded the triangular trap prepared for it at Vilna, and fell back upon Dvinsk. That was, perhaps, to Germany the most terrible disappointment of the war so far. Her armies proceeded then to take Dvinsk, which commands the railroads to both Riga ad nPetrograd, and they are taking it still. That is on the east. On the west, what was gained by the September drive of the Anglo-French forces has not been recovered. In the meantime, control of the Baltic sea appears to have been lost. English submarines now occupy it and are destroying the only commerce that survived between Germany and the world, namely, that with the Scandinavian countries.

Those are pictures to brood upon. The German mind must be saved from that. The Balkan campaign is a wonderful distraction. It is a high piece of strategy also. The Allies, to resist it, have to put forth an amount of energy vastly greater than the Germans put into their offensive. To transport an army around Europe by sea, land it on the Balkan peninsula, move it many miles through difficult territory and by single railway lines, to meet an enemy that has only to cross the Danube River into Serbia—that demands more than man for man and involves great risks on the part of the Allies. Therefore the Germans were tactically very shrewd to open a theatre in which their advantages were so great. But those are not the tactics of the Germany that began the war. It is the strategy of a fighter who spars for time, after having failed in three main attempts to destroy his enemy. The Allies could lose the Balkans without losing the war. This only the Imperial Government knows in Germany. Proof that it knows is that it talks obliquely of peace. — New York Times.

STREET IMPROVEMENT BY TREES.

We congratulate the City of Maisonneuve on the determination of its council to beautify the streets by the embellishment of the sidewalks with grass plots and trees. In its public buildings, roads and sidewalks, Maisonneuve has been fortunate, they being equal in beauty of architecture and solidity of structure, to anything in Canada, and the addition of a little greenery cannot help but give just the touch of completeness so restful to the eye. The Council proposes to do a little educational work in the form of campaigns amongst the school children and citizens generally, though why the necessity of educating anyone to appreciate nature is beyond one, but still the necessity is there—and must be considered in any scheme of street embellishment.—Municipal Journal.

HUNTER'S GUN PROVES STORY OF WHITE CROW

Harbor Springs, Mich., Nov 11 Frank Bradfield, a local hunter, killed a white crow north of this village recently The bird, which is now being mounted by a Petoskey taxidermist, is all white except its head and the tips of its wings, and is considered a rare freak of nature.

John C Wright, the Harbor Springs author, says it is the same crow he reported he saw several weeks ago, at which time he was pooh-poohed by the state press as a "nature faker."

Reeve Fleming Enlists.

ST. CATHARINES, Nov. 10.—Among the first volunteers for the new Lincoln and Welland Battalion is Reeve Hamilton Fleming of North Grimsby, and an early probability for the Wardenship of Lincoln county, who has accepted a commission. He was through the South Africa war, in which he was wounded.

WINDSOR, Nov. 10—Private George Ruthven of the 33rd Battalion, C. E. F., in training at London, Ont., secured leave of absence on Monday night to go to Detroit to marry Lillian Turrell, a domestic. Last night, shortly before the marriage, he was arrested for a breach of parole, and must now serve five and a half years in the Detroit House of Correction, the balance of a ten-year term imposed upon him some five years ago for theft. On being paroled Ruthven crossed to Windsor and enlisted. The Detroit authorities will allow him to get married, but declare that he must serve out his term.

Lieut. C. R. Widdifield has returned from duty at Cobourg in connection with D company of the 83rd, and is on duty with A company at the armouries.

Among the new recruits in the 83rd Battalion is Pte. E. G. Hardie of Peterborough, well known as a soccer player, and a member of the Knox church team several years ago. Pte. Hardie has had training in a British regiment.

HIS INDIAN BRIDE QUITS AND GOES BACK TO NATURE

She Tires of Big City After Chasing Husband with Spear and Tomahawk.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—"Then," said Harry Campbell, "she beat it."

"Why?" asked Judge Arnold.

"Couldn't stand it here," he said tersely. "Wanted to be back with her tribe."

"Tribe?" questioned the court.

"My wife's an Indian—a Siwash, a redskin."

"Oh!" said the Judge, and sat back in his chair.

"I was an Indian agent at Yakima reservation in Washington when I met my wife. The 'Big Chief'—her fahter—was dead. She was a smart girl, too. Graduated from Haskell Indian College. Went under the name of Blanche Courvilee. Well, we came to Chicago to live and I rented a place near the park so she could feel sort of close to nature—so she could go over to the park and look at the animals and green grass. You know what I mean.

She Doesn't Like City.

"Well, she came back one day and there was a glitter in her eye that I didn't like. I have seen it in Indians before on the reservation. She said 'lao aloa'—I've forgotten the rest of it."

"Tell the judge what it means," interrupted Charles E. Erbstein, attorney.

"Well," she kind of grunted it. Means she didn't like it here in Chicago. She speaks perfect English, but when she gets peevish she falls back into Indian lingo. She went into the next room and began crooning an Indian war song and beating a tom-tom sort of a drum that she brought with her"—

"Yes?" chorused the Court and Erbstein.

He Flees from Spear.

"Then I told her to quit making a racket and she kept howling 'Whooooo-ooo-ee' and keeping time with the tom-tom. I asked her again and she ups and at me with a flint hatchet and a spear that her great-great grandfather had used. Of course, she being a woman—and an Indian—I didn't attempt to stop her, so I waltzed around the room. She waltzed around after me"—

"You mean you ran around the room," corrected the Court.

"She ran after me," continued Campbell, "so I got to the door and slid out."

"While I was going down the stairs I still heard her yelling.

"I am tired of this big city life!" she shrieked. "Oh, give me the land and the skies and the stars and the winds and the birds and the grasses and the free open spaces. Oh, give me—

"By that time I was near the corner and thought a drink wouldn't be a bad thing"——

"That's enough," said the judge. "Where is your wife now?"

"Back on the reservation," said Campbell.

"Write up the evidence," directed Judge Arnold.

BABIES ARE BORN AMID FLYING SHELLS

PARIS, Nov. 11.—For more than a year now Rheims has been under bombardment, any day, any hour, any minute a shell may fall at any spot, bringing destruction and possibly death. Yet ordinary life continues, shops are open, mothers sit outside their houses and sew and children play around.

The work of the Maternity Hospital has never been allowed to be interrupted as was shown by a report read to the Academy of Medicine, by Dr Henrot, who has had charge of it since the war began.

"The maternity department was situated in a separate wing of the civil hospital. The hospital suffered greatly from bombardment, but the maternity ward was not touched." It was, however, a necessary precaution to remove the inmates to the cellars as soon as a shell or two announced the beginning of a bombardment, which generally lasted half an hour in the morning and the same in the afternoon. Those unable to walk were carried from the maternity ward to the cellars and later back again. This work was done by the head midwife, Mlle. Benoit, and her pupils, girls of 18.

Nurses are Heroines.

"Too high praise cannot be given them for the courage they showed in never failing a single day in their duty, but carried out this arduous task at all times of the day and night. One night 2,000 shells were fired on the city between 9 in the evening and 5 next morning.

"The women who arrived at the Maternity Hospital were not only poor women of Rheims, but many refugees from the Ardennes Department, all of whom did not reach the hospital, many dying on the road, in the train, at the station, in the street, sometimes as they reached our threshold.

"In the cellars, beside the wine casks, the women who had just become mothers lay on a bed of sacking, sometimes, when there were many, even on the floor. Mattresses touched one another and I had to put one foot on the mattress to feel a pulse or examine a patient. The young pupils in midwifery had to kneel down to do anything to their patients, and yet, although these women had suffered all sorts of privations, were often tired out by long voyages, the general health has remained excellent. During August, September, October and November not a case of infectious malady has occurred, and only two women have died.

"One day I saw a remarkably fine baby being brought into the ward, and asked who was the mother. I was told that a splinter of a shell had struck the mother and laid open her side. The baby was taken out in perfect health, an unprecedented example of a Caesarian operation."

A WEAK HEART.

When the heart is weak or irregular in action, when the blood is thin and watery, remember the blood forming qualities of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and by its use flood the system with rich, red vitalizing blood. This is nature's way of curing weakness and disease. It is the only way to ensure lasting benefits.

SMUGGLER HIDES

Stuffed Puppy That Barks When Squeezed Dissected by Custom House Men.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9—A little toy dog that would emit a bark like a grunt when pressed stood on the table in the office of Justus Wardell, surveyor of the port, surrounded by a collection of cultivated pearls. The tip of his stubby tail was missing, as was the end of his nose, both of which had been cut away by custom inspectors.

The dog was only one of many clever contrivances used by N Nakane, wealthy pearl merchant of Tokio, who was arrested recently when he made a declaration at custom house saying that he carried only $400 worth of pearls. An investigation of his baggage by Customs Inspector Brosman revealed pearls valued at more than $5,000 and resulted in the Japanese confessing that he had attempted to smuggle the pearls into the country.

Nakane arrived in San Francisco aboard the Tenyo Maru and declared to the customs inspector that he had $400 worth of pearls in a small jewel case. An examination of the case showed that it had a false bottom and pearls valued at $1,000 were revealed with the destruction of the case. This was the first lot to be discovered. While the jewel case was being taken apart, Nakane drew from his pocket a dainty Japanese tobacco box and proceeded to roll a cigarette.

The beauty of the box attracted the attention of Wardell, who asked to see it at closer range. The box, when examined, revealed another $1,000 worth of the precious gems. Nakane removed his coat to assist in the work of unpacking his cases. Again Wardell was attracted by the beauty of a silk vest, and made an examination and found that in the centre of each of the buttons was set a small pearl, which was so nearly the color of the shell-like buttons that the gems could only be detected by an expert.

In the bottom of one of the merchant's trunks the inspector found a toy dog carefully wrapped in tissue paper. Nakane explained that it was to be a gift to a child relative here. An examination of the outside of the toy revealed nothing; finally the tip of the tail was removed with a pair of scissors and it was found to be filled with pearls. A like find was made in the dog's nose.

Nakane then confessed that he had tried to smuggle the jewels into this country. The pearls were confiscated.

"Then you think this European war is really serious?"

"Of course. If it wasn't you can bet your life Congress would have ordered an investigation of it and sent a committee over there on a junketing trip long before this.

CANADA'S PENITENTIARY

One thousand, nine hundred and forty-six—that was Canada's penitentiary population on March 31st last, the end of our fiscal year, being an increase of only thirty-five over the return for the preceding year.

"Any attempt to classify the crimes of those in custody," says the Inspectord of Penitentiary in his annual report just published, "must be more or less arbitrary, but a general idea may be obtained in the following table.

Offences against the person ..	590
Offences against property	1,186
Offences against public order, generally	287

In the case of a sentence that indicates offence against more than one of the above classes, it is classified according to the apparent object of the crime. For example "assault and robbery" is classified as an offence against property—the assault being merely incidental.

Two per cent. of the population are over 60 years of age, and 8 per cent. under twenty. Those under twenty are generally lads who have been "reformed" previously in provincial reformatories where the essential element of discipline or obedience to authority was not enforced. When supplied with the backing essential they become fit subjects for parole.

Five per cent. are serving life sentence, and twenty-five per cent. are serving the minimum sentence of two years.

The illiterate constitute twelve per cent. The four western institutions show a better record of education than that of the eastern penitentiaries.

The Expenditure.

Upon our seven penitentiaries the Federal Government last year expended the sum of $839,109. The penitentiaries, however, produced a revenue of $4,472, so that the net expenditure was 783,937, or a little more than three fourths of a million dollars.

One of the most interesting parts of the Inspector's report is that embodying the special report of W P Archibald, Dominion Parole officer. During the year 186 prisoners were released on parole 181 men and five women.

In commenting on the re-discharge the Parole officer says:

Discharged on Parole.

"The most critical period or crisis in the life of a prisoner is reached on the day of his discharge from prison. During his service of sentence he has been required to obey, but not required to plan or decide upon his occupation outside. Day after day he has marched to his work, his clothes have been furnished, his food provided, and he has had no struggle for a living, as many have outside of prison walls. He has not been called upon to exercise any thought or care about the smallest necessities of life.

The longer his imprisonment is the more wholly dependent is he when set at liberty. For months, nay, years, he has looked forward to to-day as one of unalloyed happiness. Visions of the employment with which he would again earn his way have visited his pillow many a night in his lonely cell. Waking dreams of what he would do when he was his own master have come to him day after day, and now this day of days for him has come and he changes the prison suit and turns his back upon the walls that have so long circumscribed his view, eager to drink in the free air of heaven and taste to the full the happy freedom and liberty of the outside world.

The sun never shone so bright, the air never filled his lungs with such a sense of health and relief as it now comes pure from the fields and forests of his native land. He fairly shakes himself with delight as he realizes that no warden can hold him and no guard can call to him "halt!" when he turn his face towards his old home.

Only a Friend.

Perhaps he has a few friends left in the neighborhood who will welcome him, to whom he hastens. Perhaps a mother waiting to clasp her wayward boy to her sorrowed heart and pillow that sinning head upon a bosom that beats but to pity and love. If so, there is an abundant hope for his future. She may be very old and poor, but the mother's love remains and still serves to win the wayward boy back to the ways of rectitude and honest living.

But all mothers, unfortunately, are not what they ought to be to their children. Some time ago I accompanied a broken-hearted mother to one of our penal institutions, where she was having an interview with her boy who had gone astray, and was serving a sentence. The mother's grief was pitiful. She stated that she never felt that she had done her duty to her boy, and the boy in the conversation at that time, referred to the days of his boyhood and said, "Oh mother, if I had only known." What a wonderful influence for good or bad a mother can wield. Canada needs more good mothers if the tide of our criminal population is to be checked.

Neglect of Early Training.

The neglect of early training is often reaped in the after life of the child, producing a broken heart, with scalding bitter tears. Millions have proved a mother's love both a mantle and a shield. If a remnant of the true man remains, the paroled prisoner needs no outside aid, but in many cases the unfortunate person coming from the prison has no mother living, and very few friends if any, to help him in his hour of need. This is where the parole system proves a potent factor in assisting men.

In almost every case, employment and friends are provided before the prisoner is released, for I have always felt that no person should be discharged from a prison without a patron or friend to go to, and employment in view before discharge. I have known many to fall into temptation who truly intended to live an honest life when discharged from prison, but when looking for employment, disencouragements came which they little expected. This past year I have placed 675 prisoners, released on parole, with friends."

JAMAICA HEEDS KING'S CALL.

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Nov. 9—The elected members of the Legislature had a conference to-day. Then they met Governor Manning and submitted proposals for increasing the Jamaica contingent at the front, and expressed their willingness to levy increased taxation for that purpose.

FIGURING WAR COSTS.

Had our 3,000,000 soldiers been at work last year, Sir Leo Chiozza Money, the English statistician, calculates, they would have earned at least £234,000,000 in wages, and would have produced and handled goods of the value of about £780,000,000. In the centre of Europe the loss has been much greater, at least 11,000,000 men having been withdrawn from production, at a cost of £880,000,000 in the first year of the war. The respective loss of production by the destruction of human life cannot be calculated; one authority says that £5,000,000,000 is under the mark.

Some Danger.

Nothing so much vexes a physician as to be sent for in great haste and to find after his arrival that nothing, or next to nothing, is the matter with his patient. There was an "urgent case" of this kind recorded by an eminent surgeon. He had been sent for by a gentleman who had just received a slight wound, and gave his servant orders to go home with all haste imaginable and fetch a certain plaster.

The patient, turning a little pale, said:

"Sir, I hope there is no danger?"

"Indeed there is," answered the surgeon; "for, if the fellow doesn't run like a race-horse, the wound will be healed before he can possibly get back."

How to Make Your Hair Soft, Fluffy, Beautiful

An old-fashioned home recipe, consisting of plain bay rum, lavoris de composee, and menthol crystals is one of the best things in the world for the hair and scalp. Get from any druggist six ounces of bay rum, two ounces of lavoris de composee, and one half drachm of menthol crystals. Simply dissolve the menthol crystals in the bay rum and then add the lavoris de composee. It can be had from any druggist who has the ingredients on hand, or will mix the compound for you. A few drops of this fragrant perfume may be added if you like. Apply to the scalp a little of the mixture on a soft cloth, letting the cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one inch strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully fluffy, soft and lustrous. To stop the hair from falling and make it grow, rub the scalp briskly into the scalp with the fingers for a few minutes each night and morning. The ingredients for a week or two, and see if they do not do away with the dandruff and stop the hair from falling. If your hair is normally thin, the scalp should keep it so. If you keep up this treatment regularly for a number of weeks it will have surprised and delighted you, and should the hair have become thin, it will be surprising how it will grow and [illegible] Any druggist can put up this preparation, and it is not [illegible] to [illegible] and should be called for by [illegible] about 50 cents.

CRISCO
For Frying—For Shortening
For Cake Making

One of the most important things about Crisco is that it can be used over and over again to fry different kinds of foods, without carrying the taste or odor of one over to the other.

This prevents all waste, and does not make it necessary to keep several dishes of fat in the kitchen for different kinds of frying.

The convenience, as well as the economy, of this is obvious.

MENU:
Fried Rice Japanese Style.
Sauce Hollandaise.
Poinsetta Salad.
Tea Cakes.

The lecturer, who is charming big crowds of Peterborough housewives every afternoon at the Examiner Better Foods, Better Homes School in Conservatory of Music, has a seemingly inexhaustible store of cookery lore and a large supply of interesting recipes. These are given away most generously at every session of the school and the women who love to cook are revelling in the opportunity thus given them to make themselves more proficient in their favourite art. Many of the recipes given away by Mrs. Brown-Lewers from day to day are being tried out in Peterborough kitchens, much to the delight of the home folk. Men of the city feel that they are reaping the biggest benefits of this school, by reason of the good eats their wives are giving them.

Inspires Others.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers not only teaches cookery methods, but enthuses women about good cooking and those who attend her classes from day to day are eager to get into their own kitchens to try out the plans and methods suggested by this expert. Versatile, capable and thoroughly optimistic Mrs. Brown-Lewers is an able exponent of better foods and better homes; with her cooking is a pleasure rather than a bore or a drudgery, and she introduces many new ideas and suggestions that make housework more than ordinarily interesting. All of her lectures glisten with illuminating points and her cookery lessons result in delicious foods that are served every day.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers is telling how to make a dollar do the work of two and will emphasize the matter of practical and pleasurable economy in her lecture to-night on "The Woman Who Spends." This matter of economy in the kitchen is being pleasingly illustrated today by the lesson on how to serve oysters attractively. The course goes to-morrow with a talk on "Motherhood and the Development of the Child."

Many mothers will attend in order to hear the helpful talk on "Motherhood and the Development of the Child." Mrs. Brown-Lewers counts motherhood as woman's priceless possession and shows how the great discovery of the age is that of the child and its value to the nation.

SIR SAM GOING TO FRONT NEXT SPRING

OTTAWA, Nov. 10—The announcement of Gen. Sir Sam Hughes in Toronto, that he is planning to go to the front came as no surprise to Ottawa. General Hughes from the commencement of hostilities, has frequently expressed his wish to join "the boys" on the firing line. However, it was felt that owing to his organizing ability, his driving power and his knowledge of the Canadian militia, his duty lay in this country. That he has done his work well must be admitted by his bitterest enemies.

By spring the hundred thousand now being raised will be recruited and under training, in fact the present outlook is that the hundred thousand will reach one hundred and fifty thousand. With this work finished and the organization of the Militia Department as perfect as possible there is less reason for General Hughes not having his wish fulfilled. It is whispered in Ottawa that a "feeler" had been sent to Ottawa from England to discover if there was any probability of Sir Sam going to Europe in an important capacity. It may be that there will be a development shortly, but meanwhile General Hughes cannot be induced to say anything definite. That he will be in Europe within the next few months is taken for granted here.

HEAVIER RAILS ON G.T.R. TO LORNEVILLE JUNCTION

The G. T. R. Company's plan of laying heavy rails on this section has been amplified as it is learned, and will be continued as far as Lorneville Junction. During the past season the heavier rails have been laid from Belleville to Campbellford, and the work will be pushed forward next year. This type of rail has been laid in a stretch of the local yard, and the original intention was to lay them from Belleville to Lindsay.

TRUCES TO BURY DEAD

London, Nov. 10—An appeal for truces to allow the burial of the dead and acquaint relatives of the fallen with their names is being made to the rulers of the warring powers by the International Red Cross.

"The most elementary feeling of charity, the most imperious appeal to pity," it says, "demand all useful measures to acquaint families with the fate of the fallen."

The appeal asks that positive instructions be sent to the military commanders with a view to the mitigation of needless aggravation of the sufferings of war.

"Yes, I suppose I am one of the most prominent men in college," remarked the callow sophomore.

"Indeed, what capacity?" asked the friend of the family.

"Eighteen beers, eleven cocktails and six whisky straights," replied the young man proudly.

SUBJECT OF ATONEMENT WAS DISCUSSED

The subject of "Atonement" was taken up in the Assembly Hall last night. It was brought out in type from Levitus 16, in prophecy from Isaiah 53, and in I Peter, 2, it is seen in fulfilment and realization. The great day of atonement of Leviticus, 16 and 23, with its manyarites and ceremonies is a very precious type to the work wrought at Calvary's rugged cross some centuries later. The "affliction of soul" spoken of in ch 23, v. 23, answers to "repentance toward God" which must be on the part of the sinner. In v. 24, "Thou shalt do no manner of work" suggests on man's part, a completed work, and as in the type the guilty Israelite witnessed his iniquities placed by his representative (the high priest) upon the head of the innocent victim (the scape-goat) and borne away to a "land not inhabited," so, in the anti-type, the truly penitent soul sees atonement wrought for him by none less than the Son of God, who alone is "holy harmless, spotless, undefiled and separate from sinners," and upon his appropriation of the finished work, God can be declared "just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." This is beautifully brought out in Isaiah, 53:6, "The Lord (Jehovah) hath made to meet upon (in Jesus) the iniquity of us all."

The practical side of the truth was then brought out from I Peter, 2:24, "that we being dead to sins should live unto righteousness, by whose stripe we are healed."

"Atonement" is that which bridges the gulf between a thrice holy God and fallen sons of Adam.

A YEAR INDOORS.

"For thirteen months I was so bad with chronic indigestion that I could not go out of doors. Nerves were unstrung, the heart had and smothering feelings came on till I thought that I would choke. Doctors' treatment failed me so I began the use of Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which I thank for my present good health. I am now doing my housework, and have a family of ten."

What They Said Last Year; Remarkable Commentary Upon War's False Prophets

LONDON, October 27—Under the headline, "What They Said Last Year," The Bystander to-day reproduces extracts of London newspapers published in late October, 1914.

They are taken alike from the news columns and the comments of the military experts. It is a question whether correspondent or commentator goes further astray. Here are some of their efforts to instruct and enlighten the British public.

"The Germans cannot now hope to beat the Russians. Warsaw and the constant failure of the Austrians have shown us that"—Leading Article, Times, October 26.

"She (Prussia) allowed the Austrians to be overwhelmed. She visited upon the Austrians the faults of German strategy and compelled her subservient tools, the Austrians, to dismiss half a dozen of their best commanders."—Military Correspondent, Times, October 27.

"Let it be clearly understood that there is no room for reproach in this matter. No man need be slighted because he has not already offered himself for the country. Every call for recruits has been met."—Leading Article, Times, October 28.

"Since the Turks have resolved upon their own destruction we do not regret their appearance in the ranks of the combatants."—Leading Article, Times, October 30.

"While men are travelling in trains across Germany they are not fighting the enemy in the field, nor are they fitting themselves for the task of fighting them. This wonderful railway system may be a wonderful trap for the destruction of the German army."—Leading Article, Daily News, October 26.

"She (Turkey) will assuredly not harm the cause of the allies by associating herself with that of Germany, for such a cause would have reactions in other directions which would seriously add to the difficulties of Germany."—Leading Article, Daily News, October 27.

"The strain of the enemy who has Austria to help and Russia to repulse must be fast becoming intolerable"—Leading Article, Daily News, October 30.

"All indications tend to prove that the Germans had scarcely entered Antwerp and established themselves when urgent matters elsewhere caused them to clear out with all possible speed"—A Correspondent, Daily Chronicle, October 24.

"The Germans are still holding Ostend, but their retirement is considered imminent."—Another Correspondent, Daily Chronicle, October 25.

"It is possible, that if unmvaded, Germany might feed herself for a year. It would, however, need much careful Government action to make the food go round; and there are some rather suprising evidences that it is not being efficiently undertaken."—Leading Article, Daily Chronicle, October 26.

How You Can Quickly Remove Hairy Growths

(Aids to Beauty.)

A well known beauty specialist advises this treatment for the removal of hair from the face. Mix into a paste some powdered delatone and then apply to hairy surface, and after about two minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. This method is quick and entirely safe. To avoid disappointment, however, it is well to make certain you get genuine delatone.

Men's Snappy New Navy Blue Serge Suits Our $15.75 Fall Leader

Here are Suits that are excellent in quality, distinctly smart in style and perfectly tailored, at a really substantial saving.

WE WOULD LIKE TO SHOW you these Suits, they're a big winner at the price; we contracted for the cloth for them months and months ago, long before the marked advance in all wool serges, otherwise we could never offer such remarkable value. The material is a pure wool Botany yarn, well twisted into a fine twilled serge, in navy blue, indigo dye—a cloth that always looks dressy and never seems to wear out. The style, finish, tailoring, and fit are on a par with suits costing twice as much. Stop in and look these suits over, the average man cannot fail to appreciate their great value at 15.75

The CRESSMAN

Over 100 Members Added To Horticultural Society Last Year

Officers Re-elected at Annual Meeting Last Night—Reports Indicate Satisfactory Progress and Good Work Accomplished.

HAS A CREDIT BALANCE

Despite the war's distractions during the past year the Horticultural Society has enjoyed a very satisfactory year, as shown by the reports at the annual meeting held in the Council Chamber, last night. The membership has appreciably increased, the annual lawn contest was a decided success, the parks have undergone certain improvements and the options of bulbs, plants, etc. have been worth more than the membership fee, and a small credit balance remains at the end of the season's work. Public interest is gradually responding to the efforts of the Horticulturalists, many homes are being beautified, attesting to the excellent results from a flourishing society of this nature.

President's Report.

Mr. Walter Stocker occupied the chair and presented the presidential report, in part, as follows:

The membership has increased from 258 last year, to 360 this year. This is not nearly as large as it should be. Early in the year your directors decided to call for tenders for the supplying of the ten options which were chosen for distribution to the members this spring. Heretofore, these options had been purchased by the Society and distributed by local delivery which proved very unsatisfactory with tender plants, such as roses. This plan also resulted in a saving to the Society of an average of three cents per option, also in not having any surplus or shortage of any of the different varieties to look after. The members were also given their choice of either taking a year's subscription to the Canadian Horticulturist, or an additional option; about 50 per cent. of the membership chose the two options. For the Fall options the usual bulbs were supplied, namely six hyacinths, six daffodils, and six narcissus. Only first-sized named varieties were used, which proved so satisfactory last year. That these bulbs are being appreciated by our members is quite evident from the number of applications received since the distribution was made. We have been busy in the improving of the city parks. Early in the season tenders were let to Messrs. A. Blade & Sons for the planting of the flower beds in Victoria Park. Mr. Alfred Brown was engaged as caretaker. On account of the wet season, necessitating additional cutting of the grass, it was found necessary to supply him with an assistant on various occasions.

At the request of the City Council we have been looking after the small park, corner of Hunter and Park streets. Concrete curbing was continued on another section of the walks through Victoria Park, and it is very desirable that this work be continued a little each year until all the walks are completed. The pathway running parallel to Brock Street was refilled with soil and seeded, as this walk was not used to any extent and washed badly with every rain storm. The seeding of this walk has greatly improved the appearance of the Park from the street.

The fountain in the centre of Victoria Park has not proved to be very satisfactory and in devising means for bettering conditions and to allow the water to play in same, it was decided to erect the fountain on a pile of boulders in a concrete water-table. Specifications were gotten out, tenders called, and the work allotted to Mr. H. Shurter, he being the lowest tenderer. Part of the work has been done and the contract calls for the completion of same as early in the Spring as the weather will permit the work. We feel that this work, when completed, will show the greatest improvement to this park that has been accomplished in recent years.

Allies Blundered When They Treated Venizelos As Master of Greece

King Constantine's Bold Challenge to Former Premier Shows Lengths He Will Go for German Interests—Bound to Brother-in-law, the Kaiser, Since July, 1914, Says Dillon.

By Dr. E. J. Dillon.

ROME, Nov. 8.—King Constantine's bold challenge to M. Venizelos and a large section of the Greek nation bears out the interpretation which put on the crisis in yesterday's message. The nomination of General Yanakitsas is a provocation which indicates clearly the lengths to which the Kaiser's brother-in-law is prepared to go in defense of German interest which he has been persuaded to identify with his own.

The tumultuous scenes in the chamber of Venizelo's cutting remarks on the Crown and the constitution were the mere occasion which called forth a resolve long since taken by the King.

That resolve had already been consecrated with solemn finality in July, 1914 as I knew at the time, not by mere hearsay. King Constantine at that time bound himself to the Kaiser.

Mistake Made by Allies

One mistake committed by the allies, who were unaware of these stipulations, consisted in the assumption that the King was a mere figurehead, and that Venizelos was virtual master of Greece. Another was the systematic attempt to bring together in brotherly union nations which hate each other with an all consuming intensity whereof the British have no conception.

For whichever of the States we propitiated, Bulgaria or Greece, promising her the territories she coveted, we were driving the other into the arms of our enemies. Similarly, when inspiring Serbia with the alluring perspective of an extension of her sway along the Adriatic, we were unwittingly throwing fuel into the flames of hatred burning in the breast of Bulgaria, and not Bulgaria only.

Yielded to Counsel.

Before the war King Constantine resolved to rid himself of the eminent statesmen by whom he was overshadowed. Already he had begun to execute the plan when yielding to wiser counsel, he allowed him to remain as a valuable hostage. When he dismissed Venizelos in March he had special efforts made to ensure the electoral triumph of the ex-Premier's edversaries.

I am unable to ascertain what truth there is in the report that he sent an autograph letter to King Ferdinand in response to the Kaiser's exhortations, but it is certain that a few days before the crisis a military mission to the general staff arrived in Athens under curious circumstances.

It consisted of the German military attaches at Sofia and Bucharest, also the attache at Athens, who had gone to the Bulgarian capital, one of Prince von Buelow's sons, who is an army officer, and Lieutenant Colonel Wilbrand. On reaching Saloniki they hesitated to continue the journey by sea lest they should be captured by Entente warships.

Greek Navy Balked Plan.

The chief of the Greek general staff, who was greatly concerned to confer with them as soon as possible requested the Marine Minister to allow them to travel on a Greek warship. The Minister, having consulted with the British admiral, returned a negative answer, whereupon the company received a motor car from the General Staff and drove to the Greek capital.

There they had long conferences with King Constantine's military favorites and also with the Bulgarian Turkish and Rumanian military attaches.

As, to almost all intents and purposes, King Constantine is Greece, it behooves the Entente peoples to understand the psychology of the man and take that as a basis for their calculations, not the interests of the Greek nation. Had that course been adopted at the outset, the diplomacy of the Allies might have drawn Greece within their sphere.

Force Might Have Won.

Taking its stand on the circumstance that the King has always been characterized by steadfast fidelity to his principle—and according to that principle expediency outweigh moral obligation—the Entente might by the deployment of force, have determined him to treat the obligations he had not a legal right to contract as he has treated those he assumed in virtue of his prerogative in behalf of the nation and in defence of right and justice.

TAKE CARE OF THE CENTS AND DOLLARS WILL ACCUMULATE

Admirably Illustrated in the Work of the Ashburnham "One-Cent-a-Day Club"

The contributors to the "One Cent a Day Club" of the Ashburnham Red Cross Society for the Month of October last, amounted to six thousand nine hundred and nineteen (6919) cents, making a total to date from this source of thirty-three thousand five hundred and ninety-two (33,592) cents.

As there is some misunderstanding regarding the expenditure of money received from the contributors to the "One Cent a Day Club," Mrs. W. H. Pretty and her colleagues are particularly desirous that all should know that the funds from this source are exclusively used for Red Cross purposes in Canadian hospitals.

No money has at any time been taken from this fund for any other purpose whatsoever. Interested members are requested to do their best to bring in additional members when ever possible and give in their names.

WHEAT SHIPMENTS GREATLY DECLINE

Montreal, Nov. 10.—Since the beginning of navigation this season 34,664,528 bushels of grain have been sent across the ocean from Montreal. For the same time last year the total was 58,112,000 bushels, so that the decrease to date is 23,447,427 bushels.

So far the figures for the season are 27,807,108 bushels of wheat, 5,868,080 bushels of oats and the balance of corn and barley, so there is little prospect of any great gain for the season, for the receipts through the Lachine Canal from the Upper Lakes are away below normal.

To date the decline from the 1914 canal record is 26,126,052 bushels.

A shortage in the crop a year ago and a quick marketing last fall by farmers, who took advantage of the high prices prevailing, are given as the reason for the big drop in trans-Atlantic business, some grain carriers even coming in ballast from Fort William to Montreal several times last summer.

FOUR DRUNKS IN POLICE COURT-TWO FOR GUELPH FARM

Four drunks, two of them vagrants, comfortably fitted into and filled the prisoners' box at the police court this morning. One was fined $2.00 or ten days for being drunk in a public place yesterday.

Two will winter at the Guelph prison farm. The fourth was liberated with the Magistrate's plea that he "straighten up" and the court's threat that his next appearance means a vagrancy charge.

One old timer pleaded not guilty to a charge of vagrancy.

P. C. Kidd stated that he had arrested him on Hunter Street. He was wandering about the streets under the influence of liquor.

"I asked him where he was living, and he replied 'That's my business.'

"I asked him where he slept at nights, and he answered 'where they let me.'"

"He told me he had plenty of money, but there were only three cents in his pockets."

P. C. Kidd stated that he loitered around hotels spending his time and wasting for others to buy.

Old timer said of himself that there was no better working man in Canada. He admitted approaching a man for the price of a meal.

"Six months in the Reformatory Farm, Guelph," concluded the Magistrate.

Next old timer said he had no use for Peterborough, and if he ever got out of it he'd never come back. To the charge of vagrancy he replied that he was willing to work and was to have gone lumbering. For some reason he was not taken, although he could work, so he claimed, all around some of those who went. He then requested to be sent to Guelph, if he had to go anywhere. There was a chance to work there, but on the local hill there was practically nothing to do. His request was granted, and he and his partner will go up as companions for the same term.

MONTHLY MEETING OF THE PETERBOROUGH BRANCH OF THE RED CROSS SOCIETY

Report of Work Done, Appeal For More Workers and Statement of Funds Received on Account of Subscriptions

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Branch Red Cross Society was held yesterday in the Teachers' Room at the Public Library.

There was a small attendance of members present.

It was decided to change the time of the monthly meeting to the first Monday in the month at 7:30 p.m.

The organization committee reported visits to Campbellford, Lily Lake and Young's Point. It is hoped that much good work and aroused interest will be the result of this committee's work in visiting outlying districts and explaining the work of the Red Cross Society.

A membership committee was appointed to try to increase the personnel membership of the branch, as it is felt many more citizens of Peterborough would like to become members of this greatest of all patriotic societies.

Shipped to Headquarters.

The packing committe reported the following articles sent to headquarters, during the month:

Made at work-room — 4,480 compresses, 18,740 swabs, 2,540 pads 6x7, 2,088 pads 9x12, 1,040 pads 18x16.

Sent in by the auxiliaries—3 doz. and 8 night shirts, 3½ doz. bed jackets, 12 feather pillows, 10½ doz. pairs socks.

A message from a prisoner in Germany was read. He says: "The Red Cross parcels from Lady Drummond are very good value, and come quickly." This is interesting to know, and it is hoped many may be inspired to subscribe to the prisoners' food fund, through the Red Cross — $2.00 per month provides two boxes of food a month for a prisoner, who may be named by the donor.

Letter of Acknowledgement.

The following letter has been received by Miss Rush, Supervisor of Supplies, since the meeting, from the Headquarters of the Society:

Miss Marion Rush,
Peterborough:

Dear Madam,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of shipment of supplies for which enclosed herewith, please find official receipt.

In behalf of the executive I desire to convey our thanks for the excellent work already done, and hoping to have your continued cooperation.

Yours truly,
(Signed) NOEL MARSHALL,

This is a neat, home-like place, where you should be able to dine like a prince and be happy.

SERBIANS PREPARED FOR DESPERATE RESISTANCE

(By Oswald F. Schuette, correspondent of the Chicago Daily News).

BERLIN, (via London), Nov. 10—Although the advance of the Germans and Bulgarians is apparently irresistible, reports are arriving that the Serbians have prepared for a desperate stand in the mountains south and west of the Morava River. This may lead to a decisive battle far overshadowing the events of the past weeks. Such a course would leave the railroad free for speedy repairs, and the resumption of operations on the through route to Constantinople.

It also means, on the other hand, that the bulk of the Serbian army is in a position to cause much trouble and heavy fighting if an attempt is made to dislodge and drive it into Montenegro. According to these reports only a fraction of the Serbian army was north of the Morava, and the prisoners, of whom there are said to be 50,000, say that there are about 150,000 men in the mountains west of Nish. It is said that the artillery lost by the Serbians in the battles of the last few weeks formed only a small proportion compared with what is now available in the mountain fastnesses.

All through the summer great supplies of munitions and stores, partly British, but mostly French, were brought up from Saloniki, but were not sent beyond the Morava. As late as three weeks ago great quantities of supplies were sent into the interior from Nish. At the same time the Serbian regiments called back from the north into the mountains were repulsed by Macedonian troops, whom the Serbian troops feared to leave in the south.

It is still unknown whether the main stand of the Serbians will be made directly west of Nish, in the Jasirbac Mountains, or southwest of Rusina, in the Paonik Mountains, east of Novi Bazar, at the gateway to Montenegro. The latter place seems the most likely. King Peter of Serbia is now supposed to be in these mountains with his troops. He was reported November 1st to be in Jagodina, and on November 5 it was announced that he had left Kruševac for Kurshumlija.

Food Question Is Troubling Germans

BERLIN, Nov. 10.—At a caucus yesterday of the National Liberal members of the Reichstag it was resolved that the fight against the high cost of living, due to the war, was at present the most important question growing out of the conflict, and that further measures should be taken along the lines of the food ordinances already put into effect. The resolutions demand the introduction of meat cards, also the establishment of a far-reaching system of leaves of absence for soldiers at the front in order to maintain the eficiency of the industrial trades and agriculture. In addition, the sharpest punitive measures against food speculators were advocated, including the loss of civic honours, and the immediate introduction of graduated taxes on war profits was demanded.

New milk cards will be issued in many Berlin boroughs on November 15, and there is official intimation that preparations are being made for introducing meat cards in the near future. The Bundesrath also has passed an almost revolutionary measure for the confiscation by the State of all stocks of animal and vegetable oils and fats having food value, which will be distributed and apportioned to the various industries by the newly organized State War Corporation, modeled on the breadstuffs monopoly which has functioned so successfully.

Among the the many interesting means employed to wean the public away from eating meat and to restrict its consumption is an exposition of meatless dishes which an association of Berlin housewives has just opened. To console the chronic meat eaters, news comes from afield that Lieutenant Immelmann, Germany's new air idol, who has just shot down his sixth enemy aeroplane, is a vegetarian and a teetotaler as well.

NEW SEXTON IS APPOINTED

At a meeting of the Trustee Board of the George street Methodist church last night, Mr. Brick, Smith street, was appointed sexton of the church succeeding Mr. J. Bradley, who resigned after many years service as sexton.

At the same meeting Mr. T. W. Robinson was appointed financial secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Geo. A. Robinson.

BECAUSE HE WAS FOURTH COUSIN OF J. PIERPONT MORGAN

Mothers Rushed Him to the Altar

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 11.—L. Pierpont Morgan, head of the Morgan Consolidated Gold and Copper Mining Company, who is held on a charge of passing a worthless check and with bigamy, told the police that he had got into the bigamy troubles because he is a fourth cousin to J. Pierpont Morgan of New York and the mothers of girls everywhere he went would try to force him into marriage. Police are investigating a report that he has more than three wives, but he contends that is all he ever married.

He admits marrying a New York girl and having a ceremony performed with a girl in Joplin, but he says he did not consider those marriages binding because he entered into the marriage ceremonies to get rid of the mothers. Since last February he has been living with a third wife.

She was prostrated when Morgan was arrested, and says she knows he is innocent. Morgan calls himself a poor relation of the New York financier.

"My company has only a half million dollars assets," he says. "But my relationship to the New Yorker got me in to trouble all the time."

"The marriage in Joplin was performed early in 1913. It was illegal because no license was issued. I was in Joplin selling stock in my mining company, which has mines in Arizona and other States of the Southwest, when I met Miss Elizabeth Schebe. Somehow her mother found out about my connections with Wall Street and I was rushed. One evening I was out with the girl and got home late. Her mother insisted that we be married at once and ceremony was performed by a Justice of the Peace while I was protesting.

"I left the girl immediately and the next day consulted with an attorney about an annulment. I gave him $750 to fix up the annulment and I believe he did. The marriage was not legal anyway because there was no license.

After Morgan had told of his alleged fake marriage to Miss Schebe, a report from a private detective agency that Morgan had married a Miss Florence Hanson of New York. Morgan was astounded when Allender asked about Miss Hanson and first denied knowing her. He later admitted having married her.

"It was just like the Joplin case," he said, "only she had a license. Miss Hanson's mother wanted me for a son-in-law and she threatened me with a breach of promise suit if I did not marry her daughter. I married her August 20, 1914, and lived with her a month. I then paid a lawyer a fee to annul the marriage and left. I do not consider that marriage legal either."

Morgan was arrested on a charge of passing a worthless check for $20. The check was on a bank in Tucson, Arizona. Morgan says he had money in the bank, but must have overdrawn his account. He said he had ordered money sent to the bank from New York. After his arrest it became known he had given a second check for $15 on the Tucson bank to a mining stock salesman, and that it had come back marked "no funds." He says he can straighten them out in a few days.

Married Third Time.

After his arrest, police remembered a request had come from Joplin for the arrest of Morgan on a bigamy charge brought by Mrs. Elizabeth Schebe Morgan. The Joplin woman says the marriage was legal.

Morgan was married February 7 to Miss Nellie Knowles at Cynthiana, Indiana, with whom he has been living since. After their marriage he visited mines in Arizona and came here in July to sell stock.

After Morgan confessed the New York marriage Chief Allender received word of a fourth alleged marriage in Philadelphia.

"I never married a Philadelphia woman," said Morgan. "I only married three and I have told you all about them."

Chief Allender could not shake him from that statement. Finally Allender asked him how he came to win so many women.

"I didn't win them," said Morgan. They won me because I am a fourth cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan."

BIG VOLUME OF PARCELS FOR THE BOYS IN EUROPE

Postmaster Mr James Edgar was out of the city today, but at the office it was learned that the Christmas Overseas mail promises to be the largest on record. Already many packages have been sent to the Peterborough boys at the front, and it is said that business is even now heavier than during the regular Overseas receipts in former years. Although Christmas parcels will be in time if they leave by November 25th, the public is making doubly sure of timely delivery by forwarding their remembrances now. Each parcel carries its own little story of love and hope, and from the accuracy with which the lists have been gone over surely every Peterborough man overseas will receive token from home relatives and friends.

SURE TO WIN.

A young lawyer of Irish parentage, recently admitted to the New York bar, thus addressed the judge when about to begin the defence of his first criminal case: "Your Honour, I shall first absolutely prove to the jury that the prisoner could not have committed the crime with which he is charged. If that does not convince the jury I shall show that he was insane when he committed it. If that fails, I shall prove an alibi."

When court resumed its preliminary hearing of the charge of incest against Sandford Lindsay this afternoon, the first witness called was Mrs. Newell, a neighbour of the Lindsays, and a woman of seventy years, who told her story in a straightforward manner. Her evidence was the most damaging that has as yet been given.

She said she had lived in Methuen twenty-three years. She knew the Lindsays and had seen them frequently in the last year. They lived about a mile from her place. The prisoner came to her place the day before the child died for a bottle. He said she was very sick. Witness was at the Lindsay house herself that day. She had talked to the girl several times. She knew the condition the girl was in. She knew of it in May. From that time until September, when she died, she saw her several times while picking berries. Her father and his daughter would be together. On the eighth of July she saw them together in an improper position. The girl was calling to her father to leave her alone. She was attracted by her cries. Mrs. Hubble and witness' daughter were there at the time, and she drew their attention to the improper relations of the father with his daughter.

To Mr. Gordon witness said this was the only occasion she had seen anything of the kind going on, but for a long time she had suspected it.

To Crown Attorney Hatton witness said the deceased girl had told her of her condition.

BUILDING MANY ZEPPELINS.

Germany Proposes "Bringing the War Home to English People."

LONDON, Nov 10—The correspondent at Rotterdam of the London Daily Telegraph claims to have learned from an absolutely reliable source that in many widely separated places in Germany the construction of Zeppelins is being carried on. In no department of constructional work in Germany is greater activity being shown.

Dirigibles of all types—Zeppelin, Parseval and Schutte—are being turned out with feverish haste. New sheds are being built of iron, including roofs of the same material, as a protection against aircraft attacks. The Krupps also are said to be engaged in building portable sheds.

From all the correspondents was able to learn the idea is to bring the war home to the English people, who hitherto "have not felt its effects so that they shall be more anxious for peace."

Spain has opened an aviation school near Madrid in which the government aids those receiving instruction.

COMISKEY WILL TRY TO BUY CHIC GANDIL FOR WHITE SOX

Chicago Magnate Seen to Make Overtures to Washington For Former Montreal First Baseman

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—If Charley Comiskey has his way Chic Gandil will be playing first base for the White Sox next season. Comiskey may not have communicated the fact that he wants the Nationals' first baseman to Griffith, but in due time the Nationals' manager will receive a proposition from the head of the Chicago club which may end in the sale of Gandil to that club. When Manager Rowland was in Washington on his last eastern trip he watched Judge perform at first base and he at once came to the conclusion that Griffith had two first basemen and that he would in all probability be willing to part with one of them. Since then Griffith has made it known that he intends to have Judge, a youngster of only twenty years, at the bag when the season opens, and it is not a secret that with this in view he intends to make some sort of a disposition of Gandil. Gandil would come pretty near to making the Chicago team which is sadly in need of both a first and third baseman.

As yet there has been no correspondence between the two clubs with references to the deal, but just about the time that the annual meeting of the American League takes place in December matters will so shape themselves that Gandil's sale to the Chicago club will be broached and may take place.

Judge being a youngster with a great future before him, and a good hitter and intelligent ball player, Griffith has decided to take a chance with him. The Chicago club has nothing in the way of players that it can afford to part with for Gandil, but the big first baseman may bring a good price in cash, and this can be used to get either a second baseman, whom Griffith is anxious to corral, or an outfielder of class, who would add decided strength to his outfield. There are two players whom Griffith has in mind. The outfielder is a star of the first water with a club which is apt to be tempted with the amount that Gandil should bring if he is sold to the White Sox, while the second baseman he has in view can either be bought or might be obtained in exchange for Ainsmith.

Cornell On Way to Football Championship of the Season

It is beginning to look as though Cornell is going to be the champion football team of the East. The Princeton bubble was nicely exploded by the sons of John Harvard Saturday, and the result of the game is about along the lines of the properly reasoned dope. The Tigers had been doing very well. However, Speedy Rush is having his initial year at Princeton, and you all know that Rome was not built up in a day. Harvard won by 10 to 6 because it had the better drilled aggregation. Princeton scored because it had Tibbott.

Poor old Yale dropped another game! It is getting to be an old, old story at New Haven. Still to have Brown trim the Blue is the most unkindest cut of all. However, the 3 to 0 score shows that the Eli team is improving. A drop kick is an accident that can happen in the best of regulated families.

Cornell, alone of the more important colleges, came through with flying colors. Michigan was trimmed by a 34 to 7 score. Funny how nothing satisfies some people. There are a lot of Cornell men complaining today on account of that 7 score. Surely, poor old Michigan should be allowed a few points. Pennsylvania did decidedly better against Dartmouth than was generally expected. The 7 to 3 defeat of the Red and Blue was almost a victory for the Quakers. Notre Dame again trimmed the Army. The 7 to 0 score, however, did not set the Hudson river on fire. Navy did a little better than usual, beating Bucknell by a 18 to 3 score. —Rochester Post.

Ottawa Rugby Team Counting On Big Things Next Season

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—The Rugby season is over locally, unless the unfinished Ottawa-Argo game is ordered replayed. While the Senators will likely finish the season with only two wins out of six starts, the team has been the big surprise of Big Four football and a credit to themselves and coach. It is no idle guess to venture that a little more experience and cleaner handling of the ball behind the line would have given Ottawa an unbeaten record and left the championship decision right up to the final game in Hamilton. No wing line in the Interprovincial Union has shown such a smashing attack as Ottawa. And with the exception of one game, no wing line has displayed as tight a defence. The team's possibilities have been wonderful and with an early start next year, and with the same coaching, Ottawa will be an even chance for the title against the field.

It might be pointed out here the Senators throughout the whole practice season did not have more than four scrimmages, having to depend entirely on formation and signal workouts. Injuries necessitated an overhauling in over half of the positions, and frequently a man had to be rung in at the eleventh hour who was unacquainted with the signals. Many of the players never had junior experience and broke in as Big Four players. Most every practice the last half of the season was held in the dark and of a half hour's duration. With two or three exceptions none of the men ever played senior football before.

Inexperience is a hard obstacle to surmount and the Senators had to combat it every game. Given a year's experience the two games of the past ten days would be turned to victories, with an even chance the game against Argos in Toronto would have also been safely tucked away.

NO CHANGES IN RUGBY RULES UNTIL AFTER WAR

The belief prevails Canadian football will undergo a radical change in the course of the next two or three years, or at the conclusion of the war, writes Malcolm Brice, in the Ottawa Free Press. William Hewitt, secretary of the Canadian Rugby union, who is a very well posted football man, requested suggestins from rugby men throughout eastern Canada, at the close of the season of 1914, but the call to arms took so many away the matter was dropped temporarily. When conditions are again normal, it will be again taken up. Interference has been a stumbling block in the Canadian rules, and will have to be more clearly defined. Mr. Marriott, a former Hamilton player, now coaching the Tigers, comments on the "Shaughnessy interference" in retorting to an article that his team played old-fashioned football. Any football player or coach conversant with the Canadian book of rules will make "interference" the last item for discussion. The rule is violated on every scrimmage and probably the Hamilton Tigers do it more than any other team in the Big Four, for they use their hands wholly in attempting to throw aside their adversaries on the line. Out side wing men in the Canadian game quickly develop into expert wrestlers, as their duty when on the defence is to "block" their covers and "blocking" is nothing more or less than fastening a hammerlock on ones' opponent and if possible put his shoulders to the mat. Frank Robbins, the referee, ignores the 3-yard tackling rule altogether and as a result gives each team an even break on that point. The rules are woefully indefinite as they now stand and need overhauling completely. When that is started the changes advisable will probably be brought in. Among them is likely to be the dropping of the side scrimmagers and the return of the snapback. The success of the running game will be increased, for it will mean longer and more frequent runs. Three years ago a run of thirty yards in the Big Four was a record. Last Saturday in Ottawa such runs were frequent occurrences.—Hamilton Spectator.

93rd WILL BE REPRESENTED IN CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE

A meeting to organize the City Basketball League for the coming season will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night, Nov. 15th, at 7.30 o'clock. This league was a big success last year, when six teams were entered. While a large number of last year's players have enlisted it is expected that a good League can be formed this season. The following teams have signified their intention of playing: Cressmans', Bankers, Veterans, Excelsiors of George Street Church, Collegiate. The 93rd Battalion will probably be represented by two teams. It may be necessary to divide the League into two sections, the winners playing off. Any teams wishing to enter are asked to be on hand on Monday night. Any players not playing with any team and wishing to play should get in touch with the Physical Director of the Association.

PLAYERS ARE TAKING MORE TO MANAGING

Pilot Berths Were Formerly Shunted, But Job Is Now Eagerly Sought By Active Men

Time was when it appeared that the United States mint couldn't turn out enough liberty heads to induce a baseball man to accept a position as manager for a major league club. Many failures by candidates and the demand of the fans for the head of all first-year failures, made a new leader's lot anything but a desirable one.

In the last two years, however, the job is looking up a bit. It's almost possible to engage a manager without promising him the sub-treasury.

This has been brought about by the achievements of George Stallings, Pat Moran and Fielder Jones, who rescued three logical tail-end clubs and parlayed them into title or near-title teams.

It took Stallings two years to whip his club into shape. It took less than a season and one-half for Fielder Jones to transform the worst club in the Federal league into a team that finished only .00086 behind the league leadership. Pat Moran rescued his wrecks from the mire in one season—the most notable performance of all, considering the supposed character of the material he inherited.

Besides these quick successes future managerial hopes may take heart from the fact that several managers of brief experience have done fairly well and have pleased the fans.

Lord Helped Buffalo.

In the Federal league Harry Lord made the Buffalo club appear almost a live one in less than a season, while Reb Oakes, with one year's effort, made his club a pennant factor up to the very last game played.

Wilbert Robinson, of the Brooklyn Nationals, and Carrigan, of the Red Sox, have been in charge only two years and both have reason to point with pride to what their clubs have done.

Branch Rickey, although the Browns did not clean up last season, has provided the team with some first-class men who should carry the club far next year.

It's hard to call any man a failure whose club advances three positions in one season and finishes third. Yet there are those who consider 'Pants' Rowland's Sox fell down.

The reason generally given for this view is that Rowland couldn't produce a leader, although Comiskey bought him the very best talent in the country, including Eddie Collins of the Athletics, last year's Chalmers commission choice as "the most valuable player in the league," and Joe Jackson, former clean-up man for Cleveland.

White Sox Ill-balanced.

One can absolve Rowland, however. While he has some good talent, his club is not airtight throughout. Its pitchers are not so good as Boston's and it's not nearly so well balanced a club.

A few changes may put the White Sox in running next year, but even so, that Boston pitching staff is a kill-joy.

Strange to say the tip is out, and it's a fairly strong one, too, that Carrigan will not be in charge of the Red Cross team next year.

One Boston scribe comes out openly and puts himself on record that the Red Sox' leader's mistakes had determined the management to get rid of him next season, "whether he won the world's series or not.

The Red Sox team has not been delivering the necessary power this season, although equipped with great natural strength.

Charles (Buck Choke-Em) Herzog as a manager, is probably wondering what his fate will be. Heads come up and are cut down quickly, in the history of the Cincinnati club of late years.

Herzog Handicapped.

Buch has now been there for two seasons. In that time his policies have chased away enough good men to win a National league pennant.

In the meantime he has not been able to lift his club above the fifth place mark, although he has obtained a certain sort of fighting efficiency out of a hopeless outfit.

Herzog's future smells of the executioner. At least it would have three years ago. But the changed times may win another season's trial for him. If the club bosses were financially able or willing to buy him a few players he might make good, in his own fighting way.

All in all, instead of being deemed a berth to be shunned, the manager's job is now one eagerly sought. The chance of turning a loser into a winner is not nearly so impossible as it seemed before the advent of the third league.

SPORT GOSSIP

On Oct. 16, "somewhere in France," two Canadian nines played a baseball game under unique circumstances. With big guns booming in the distance and aeroplanes buzzing overhead the umpire announced the batteries to be men who had just been relieved of trench duty and were finding rest in watching a game of ball.

The teams were made up of men chosen from the mechanical transport and Strathcona Horse. Charlie Gage, formerly of Hamilton, the Toronto Varsity football captain of last year, caught for the Transport team. Among other athlets of note were Shorty Lewis, the crack little quarter back of Ottawa H's, and Bill Burkholder, the ex-scrimmager of the Tigers. Both played for the Transport team.

Along in the seventh innings with the score a tie at 1-1, the shells commenced dropping in the outfield, so the umps called the contest "on account of rain."

Grover Alexander, who won a pennant for the Phillies this past season, and who was banked on to pull them through the world series, has quit the All-Nationals under orders from the ownership of the Philadelphia Club. Alexander has not done very well on the trip and reports have reached his employers that his arm is in suspicious condition. For that reason, they desired to have him return to his home and to conserve his wing without which his team will have a hard time in 1916 in finishing in the first division.

Alexander did yeoman work in the past season. In fact it is probable he did too much. If he is ruined as a pitcher it will be due to the iniquitous bonus system. He had extra money for winning 20 games, and for winning 30 games. He collected both extra accounts. In addition of course he was in the consequent world series money. But if he was right for those games, then he is not the pitcher he is touted to be. Chances are that overtime effort for bonus money finished him, as it has ruined many another box man.

SUBSCRIBE FOR WILDING TROPHY.

Recent dispatches from Sydney Australia, say that subscriptions are being received by the Australasian Lawn Tennis Association to establish a fund, the interest from which will be used for a trophy to perpetuate the memory of Captain Anthony F. Wilding of New Zealand, who was with Norman E. Brookes of Australia a holder of the Davis up. The cup was regained for Australia by the pair in the United States last year. Wilding was killed at the front. It is the intention to give the Wilding Trophy annually to the winner of the Australasian singles championship.

IF ANIMALS COULD TALK

It is a startling fact that if some animals could tell their life history they would be able to recall events which happened hundreds of years ago.

A Russian eagle, for instance, would be able to remember watching with greedy eyes as one by one the French soldiers under Napoleon fell exhausted out of the ranks, in their awful retreat from Moscow in 1812.

There are crocodiles alive in India to-day which saw the first English traveler set foot there, while there are whales in the sea which might have skirted the coast of France, when the English invaded it in 1415.

A great many elephants could recall historical events of a hundred years ago, while there are ravens still living whose memory could go back twice that period.

Talking of birds, the parrot, the crow and the swan often live a hundred years—that is, of course if they do not meet with misfortune—while the heron will live 60 years. Geese and pelicans will survive half a century and the sparrow 40 years.

Pigeons, linnets, canaries, cranes and peacockers will live to well over 20 years, while the goldfinch, partridge, pheasants, lark and nightingale will live from 15 to 18 years, the robin 12 years and the thrush and hen 10 years.—Exchange.

Annie—"It was awfully dark where we met under the trees, and the first thing I knew, he'd kissed me."

Fannie—"I wouldn't be angry about it, dear, I don't think he'd have done it had it been daylight."—Judge.

ALL GERMANY NOW ON SHORT RATIONS OWING TO THE WAR

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Entirely upon the evidence of their own latest official publication, it is manifest that the Germans' food situation on the threshold of the second winter of the war is much more serious than in November, 1914.

The iron grip of the British fleet, and particularly the activities of Admiral Jellicoe's submarine in the Baltic, are making themselves felt, say the British, as never before.

A year ago it was unnecessary for the kaiser's government to resort to any more stringent regulations than the introduction of bread cards and restriction on breadstuffs in general on the ration basis. Such steps were found advisable even at the end of the more than average good 1914 harvest, and while Germany was in possession of a vast reserve of American cereals imported as long before the war as April or May.

Hoped for Big Crop.

This year it was hoped the extraordinary extensive seeding and planting, and the conversions of every available acre into agriculture land, would produce crops which would provide the country with as generous a supply of farm products as Germany had on hand in November a year ago.

The government figured that the fatherland would thus be able to tide over another winter and spring as successfully as before. But the 1915 German crops fell little short of failure. Despite the unprecedentedly large acreage, only the potato harvest was above normal.

Two months of relentless drought on the threshold of the harvest time completely obliterated the prospects of the expected bumper yield. The result is, according to the best information available here, that while it would be exaggerated to assert that the Germans are face to face with starvation, they confront by far the gravest food conditions wherewith they have had to deal during the entire period of the war.

The new food laws decreed by the Imperial government, which are coming into force this week, certainly seem to tell their own story. They provide for putting the Germans on rations in practically all the great necessities of life.

The regulations for restricting the consumption of meat in the restaurants and the sale of it in butcher shops are the most drastic in the history of the empire, if not in the history of the country. Potatoes have practically been converted into a state monopoly.

Butter to Cost 64 Cents.

The maximum price is fixed for butter at an outburst of high figure 64 cents a pound, and soon will be for margarine, cheese, eggs, lard and similar commodities. The introduction of official butter cards, on the bread ration system, is imminent. Milk commands prices, which the Socialist press declares, practically put it beyond the reach of the poorer classes.

To the charge that they are in great measure responsible for the high prices of food, the agriculture monopolists retort that conditions for which they are not responsible have necessitated abnormal prices for agriculture produce of all kinds. They point to the fact that Germany is ordinarily dependent on Russia for fodder for her cattle, and this is entirely shut off. The consequence is that much produce which was customarily converted into human food must now feed to animals, unless Germany's already diminishing supply of cattle and pigs is to be still further decimated.

Each day of the week has its own food laws. Monday is no-fat day. Tuesday is no-meat day, etc.

The only exception permitted on the no-fat day is that baked meats may be served in cold slices, as sandwiches. Ham sandwiches will also be legal on Saturday, the no-pork day.

Offenders against the meat laws, may be fined $375 or be given three months' imprisonment, while they also run the risk of having their premises closed.

The regulations for butter, milk, cheese, lard, margarine, eggs, artificial lard and butter products of various sorts, are undergoing consideration at the new Imperial Price Regulation Office, Berlin. Stringent restrictions in regard to the use of cream of all kinds have been in force for some time past.

Whipped cream, the favorite tidbit of the "Blackfische," or "flappers," has been barred for months. It is now illegal to use cream for anything except the production of butter and cheese. Its use for pastry purposes is strictly prohibited. Many people are accustoming themselves to drink coffee without either milk or cream.

GERMAN BUYERS IN HOLLAND.

Heavy Purchases Start Rumours of Peace or an Armistice.

Amsterdam, Nov. 9.—The presence of Holland of larger numbers of Germans than have been seen in a long time past is causing much speculation. The Germans are buying very large quantities of goods, both eatables and other merchandise, but mostly such commodities as are not allowed by the Dutch Government to be exported. German buyers seem to show no inclination as hitherto to try to get their purchase over the frontier. Instead they are making arrangements for the food to remain in Dutch warehouses for the time being.

Many Netherlands regard these proceedings as indicating the approach of some sort of armistice, during which the export problems might temporarily be removed. Others even suggest that the enterprise may mean peace, and that preparations are already being made to cope with the tremendous rush to buy foodstuffs, which would arrive in such an event. In any case the circumstances are unusual, and the Dutch are convinced that something is in "the wind." Other and more sinister deductions are possible.

BREAK INTO JAIL TO QUENCH THEIR THIRST

GRAND JUNCTION, Col., Nov. 11 This town is dry. Whenever anybody wants a drink he gets arrested. It is easier to get in jail than it is in the bootlegging emporiums down by the depot.

Whenever a bootlegger is arrested his whiskey is confiscated and held in the city lockup. The lockup isn't very new or very strong; the confiscated booze is kept in a locked cell, but every few weeks some prisoner breaks the cell open and then there is a pleasant jail party. The booze soon disappears.

MILITARY PLAY AT THE "EMPIRE"

The production of the Empire Theatre has secured for the balance of this week the wonderful photo-play entitled "The Patriot of France, or The Ordeal." It will be shown in five acts, with 350 scenes. It has been adapted to the screen from the famous poem of the same name, with an all star cast. Having been shown in the principal cities to overflowing audiences, the verdict about these scenes is that they are without a doubt "the finest ever filmed." Besides, "The Ordeal" is the most artistic war drama ever produced, and has had a remarkable effect in producing recruits.

Miss Anna Laughlan and Harry Sorenger are the stars. Don't miss this thrilling life photo, showing how ruthlessly the Germans make war. To-night and all this week.

WAR HELPS MIDDLE CLASS OF LONDON

LONDON, Nov. 1.—How completely the war has baffled the forecast of economic experts is shown by the remarkable wave of surface prosperity which the masses of Great Britain are experiencing.

Only a little more than a year ago political economists were discussing seriously the need for organizing public works on a great scale for the tens of thousands who would be thrown out of employment. Now financiers like Sir George Paish, editor of the economist, and Edwin Montagu, the financial secretary to the Treasury, are sounding strong warnings against the extravagant living of the nation as a whole. "Money is being squandered on all sides," declared Sir George Paish in a recent speech, and the newspapers are taking up the same cry.

The increase of the British army to three million men, and the demand for workers in the public and private munition works, has absorbed all the available manhood and given a great surplus of employment to the United States. Money is being discharged freely, and even lavishly, to contractors and to workingmen, and for the support of the families of soldiers, according to the economists, and it is being spent by the people at large with equal lavishness.

Wealth is Changing Hands.

In the enormous redistribution of wealth the general drift would appear to be from the hands of the rich and the middle classes into the hands of the workingmen and the families of soldiers. The people with large estates and those with savings and middle class incomes believe they furnish, through taxation and war loans, the bulk of the money which is carrying on the war, and which finds its way down through the government and contractors to the small merchants and workmen. This results in the enforcements of unusual economy upon the wealthy and the middle classes (except those concerned in war work, who are many), and encourages unusually free spending in the stratum, usually most economical most economical.

While the Covent Garden Opera has been suspended during the war the theatres of the masses, and the picture shows are prospering. The hotels and restaurants supported by the wealthy pass their dividends; the popular resorts are doing good business. Tailors and fashionable dressmakers claim to be suffering great depression, but the wives and daughters of workingmen are dressed better than ever before in their lives. Wine merchants are putting up their shutters, but the public houses where beer and gin are consumed are crowded.

Mr. Monagu cites the fact that the sale of pianos has increased.

Big Increase in Wages.

Sir Alfred Mond, a wealthy manufacturer, told the House of Commons that men from the agricultural districts who formerly earned four dollars a week are getting fifteen and twenty dollars from the government and men are being paid five dollars a day for putting up huts for the soldiers.

Annan Bryce, brother of the former Ambassador to America, testified that boys who formerly worked for $2 a week are being paid by the government more than $10 for carrying the bags of government carpenters.

Extravagant payments to contractors, and to buyers and experts who have been taken into government employ, is a complaint against the Government levied by many business men. Corruption is not charged, but high and wasteful disbursements due to ignorance of business affairs on the part of officials and the necessity for making hurried contracts. The country would not suffer so much from these conditions if it were self-contained like Germany, and money merely flowed back in a circle from the Government into the hands of the people back to the Government in taxes and loans. But Britain is importing enormous quantities of goods for the use of the people beside war supplies, and the experts do not balance the imports by many millions.

Advocates of economy in the popular press take advantage of the opportunity to call upon the Government for retrenchment.

BREAKING RELIGIOUS BARS.

Catholic and Protestant Teachers to "Sub." For One Another.

DARMSTADT, Germany, Nov. 9.—The school authorities of the Grand Duchy of Hesse have authorized school boards in districts where Catholic teachers are lacking to permit Protestant teachers to impart religious instruction to Catholics in the primary and middle grades, and give corresponding privileges to Catholic teachers in districts where Protestant teachers are lacking.

SIR SAM TO STAY AT HOME

Merely Said he Would Like to be at the Front.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—"I didn't say I was planning to lead the Canadian troops on the final victorious march to Berlin. I merely expressed a natural desire, which any Canadian would have, to personally participate in the fighting at the front and to be in at the finish." Major General Sir Sam Hughes Gun referred to-day to the press reports of his Toronto speech of last night, which made him appear to be planning to leave his post here and take personal command of the Canadians at the front.

Blame It on the Rains, Which Have Made Country a Swamp ---Italy Skeptical as to Greece's Attitude Towards the Allies

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—German troops have systematically evacuated the forest district to the west and southwest of Shlok, west of Riga, because it has been transformed into swamps by the rains, says the official announcement made to-day at German army headquarters.

At a point of the west of Riga, the statement adds, "Field Marshal Von Hindenburg yesterday repulsed Russians attacks which were supported by three ships. To the south-east of Riga 100 Russians were made prisoner.

Gen. Von Linsingen's Austro-Hungarian troops, assisted by German artillery, according to the announcement, have thrown the Russians from Kossen-Inovka.

Gen. Koevess' army yesterday took prison seven officers and 200 Russian soldiers and captured eight machine guns.

In the western theatre, the Germans forced an English aeroplane to land at a point north-west of Bapaume, in Pas-de-Calais. The occupants of the machine were made prisoner.

A "Certain Liveliness" in Greece.

ATHENS, Nov. 12.—Since yesterday a certain agitation has been noted in diplomatic circles. Various rumours are circulating in consequence of the consultations made by members of the cabinet with Gen. Dousmanis, Chief of the General Staff. These conferences are said to have a bearing on the international situation, but no confirmation of the report can be obtained.

Nothing yet has been decided regarding the proposed dissolution of the Greek Chamber of Deputies.

Italy is Skeptical.

ROME, Nov. 12.—The benevolent sentiments towards the entente allies expressed by Greece have been received with skepticism in Italian political circles. The Messaggero says that unexpected news of events in Greece proves that it has been fear of naval action by the allies that has held back King Constantine and his Government up to the present time.

"We have every reason to suspect," says the newspaper, "that Greece is awaiting an opportune moment to throw in her lot with the central empires. The quadruple entente has paid dearly for its mistakes in the past, and it ought not to let itself be deceived again.

But, after all, England and France are not the whole entente, and perhaps Italy and Russia, who are directly interested in the Orient, will do their duty. We have drawn the Government's attention to this duty from the beginning, and the Government is convinced that the march of the Bulgarians on Monastir, and their aspirations regarding Albania, call for Italian action. But leaving out the account her special interests, the action of Italy with her allies is imperative in the general interest.

CANNONADE IN THE BALTIC

British Submarine Believed to Have Attacked Enemy Squadron

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 12, via London—A cannonade of terrific intensity for 20 minutes was heard yesterday in the neighbourhood of the Fehmarn Belt, in the Baltic Sea.

It is believed by those who heard it to have been the result of a British submarine attack on a German squadron.

The firing was of such violence that the doors and windows on the rocky harbour were blown open. Houses vibrated as though in an earthquake. The weather was so thick that it was impossible to observe the engagement.

The Fehmarn belt is the channel between Prussia and the Danish Islands. Kiel Bay is a portion of the belt.

GREECE MAY YET AID SERVIA

The Arrival of Large British Forces Perhaps a Persuader

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—A news agency despatch from London published here to-day says:

Greece may, after all, go to Serbia's aid against the Bulgarians, according to a delayed message received by the Exchange Telegraph Company from Athens to-day.

Arrival at Salonica of large forces of British troops has convinced the Greek government of the allies' determination to fight the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians effectively, and that is given as the reason for this change in the outlook.

Greece would not at any time have been so unwilling to enter the war, the correspondent says, if it had not feared that the allies' campaign would prove a failure, leaving the whole burden of the Balkan campaign on the Greeks and Serbians.

The situation is referred to as still complicated and a source of deep anxiety to the Government, however.

It Is Merely Regrettable

Staats Zeitung's Comment on Loss of Life on the Ancona

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The Staats Zeintung comments as follows on the torpedoing of the Ancona: "The loss of life involved is something to be deeply regretted. In the absence of any official information on the subject it is impossible at the present time to predict what stand Washington will take with reference to this latest disaster. Of course, it must be accepted as certain that the Ancona was destroyed by a submarine of the Austro-Hungarian and not the German navy.

"Insufficient as are the reports of the destruction of the Ancona, the fact nevertheless seems to stand out that the steamer received timely warning."

OIL BOOM PASSED.

Fortunes Were Made Out of Poor People of Calgary.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 10.—A. W. Dingman, head of the Dingman oil well at Calgary, reached the city after a visit to eastern cities. Seen at the Royal Alexandra last night he stated that the latest reports he had received from Calgary were to the effect that the flow of oil was very encouraging, and the drills were nearing the point at which it was expected to get the maximum flow.

"There will never be a return to the boom days of 1914," he declared, "for the oil business in Calgary is now being run on a business basis. Unfortunately many indiscriminate speculators came in from outside and cleared up the money of the Calgary people. It was not the financial people who lost money during those sensational days. But the sharks played the peanut shell game on the poor people in wholesale fashion, and cleaned up not a few fortunes."

LADIES' FINE CASHMERE HOSE

Before the price of fine cashmere hose went up we secured by a big contract a great quantity of good cashmere stockings. We are going to place them on sale every day, right along at even a lower price than before. We think that this is quite a triumph for Elliot's store.

These hose are made from fine cashmere yarn, widened leg, narrowed ankles, and are entirely seamless.

When you come to see these hose, just think of what you would like to see in a 40c hose. Our price all this season will be just 27c

We have enough to supply all Peterborough and Peterborough county.

We have every quality there is in Hose and Underwear from the finest silk goods to the cheapest fabrics, and every quality between.

KNITTED WOOL COATS

We list here one of the styles from our coat section just to give you an idea how well we are doing here.

The above coat is here in Child's, Misses' and Ladies' sizes. These too were contracted for before the prices went so high. Made with new high neck, two pockets, neatly trimmed, warm, comfortable and durable.

Children's sizes	68c
Misses' sizes	88c
Ladies' sizes	$1.10

You can't buy the yarn alone to make these coats for these prices to-day.

Keep this list. This is not a list of special bargains, just a few articles from our regular stock to show you how well we can serve you during these critical times.

READY-TO-WEAR DEPT.

We have just room here to picture one item, a silk blouse, (your choice of different styles). But all the other articles are just as good. Our staff will be pleased to show you through all the lines.

These silk blouses are made from a strong quality of wash silk. Please do not compare them with the tissue paper silk blouses that are being shown some places. These blouses will give quality and style. They have the high-low convertible collar, and the newest touches for the coming season. All sizes, 34, 36 38, 40, 42, etc. We have seen blouses of this quality marked at $3.00 but our price is just $1.10

Ready-to-Wear Dept., 2nd Floor.

We have dotted down these few articles from our regular stock just to show you how it is we keep busy. You will be pleased with our qualities for we never lessen the quality to suit the price. But just look at the prices. Can you equal them?

In our Needle Craft section you will find all the Threads and Materials that are used in Art Needle Work.

Try us, we can fill your every want. We sell the Pictorial Paper Patterns, each pattern contains a free cutting Guide.

MAIN FLOOR—REAR

We excell in corsets—the manufacturer learning how many we sell has confined these corsets to our store only. No other store in Peterborough can get this corset.

It is made from good coutil, has six hose supporters, non-rustable steels, and made in the newest cuts for the coming season.

And in addition to all this we guarantee every corset.

FLANNELETTE NIGHT GOWNS

Here is one of the biggest bargains of the season, daintily silk trimmed, white flannelette gowns, made from heavy 16c white flannelette, as they are all made in good generous lengths and widths it takes 5 yards of goods to each gown, so you see the goods alone would cost 75c. Then there is the thread, silk for the trimming, buttons and making. These gowns are being sold in most places for $1.25. They are good value at that.

When you come be prepared to criticise them keenly, they will stand it. But we will surprise you at the price. All this season it will be only 79c

Without gainsaying — this is certainly quality, style and unusual value, but it is just an evidence of our work throughout the whole stock. See it all.

FROM THE MEN'S SECTION

We have secured a great quantity of men's fine black Cashmere sox. You will like the quality, we recommend them, they are good. We give you the advantage of our good luck in securing these. The regular price of these is now 50c per pr. But while they last they will just be per pair 35c
Or three pairs for $1.00

Our storeroom is filled with all the wool goods we could gather together. They are all here for your advantage. Many of them not only at old prices, but also quite a large number of them at still lower prices than before.

FROM THE MEN'S SECTION

Soldier of Fortune —— by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

At the top a man seemingly a huge figure, suddenly emerged from the shadow of a column and confronted us.

"What are you doin' here?" he ejaculated gruffly.

It was not in my nature to feat men and this was evidently a man.

"You surely startled me, friend," I explained. "Are you the overseer?"

"I reckon I am, but what I want to know is who you are."

I started to regain my poise. "Why I am one Philip Henley. We have just got in from the north."

"Is that so? Alone?"

"Yes. May we come in?"

"Oh, I reckon I can't get no hoss to turn yet awhile. I'll not mind her risk it. Let's see. I'm a little rough to have company. Get over there and I'll light up so we can see a bit."

He disappeared and I stood the top of the steps until we could hear a faint scratching sound through the open door. A match flared, and the huge creature of the man stood out clearly. He was a Texan, and the biggest specimen I ever saw. I confess I entered the door with a slight shiver, as some strange premonition of peril flashed through me, and clung to me until the sight of the white face gave me new courage.

CHAPTER V

A Pleasant Welcome

It was an old fashioned room into which we entered, the floor unswept, the air foul and musty. Heavy curtains were drawn closely over the windows, while the single oil lamp stood on the center table offered little light. Newspapers littered the floor, and the remains of a meal were scattered over the table. The man, as he stood there, was of huge proportions, his face covered with a heavy mustache that overgrown whiskers. He appeared a coarse, rough, wearing high boots, with an ugly looking revolver in a belt holster.

"Where are you from?" I asked surprised at this display of firearms.

Texas," with a grin not altogether pleasant. "That's all of it. I was hired for to keep people other than ourselves. There ain't no work going on so I don't have no niggers to keep off."

"Who employed you?"

"That don't make no difference. Those were my orders, not to let no one by and hang 'round except you folks."

"Then we were excepted?" in surprise.

"Sure, I reckon yer'd 'a' been hoofin' it up the road long afore this otherwise. Still, I dunno," with a suggestive wink, "I've got a likin' for pretty girls."

I glanced at her, where she had sank down on a dilapidated sofa, but no expression of her face told me she had overheard. It was the man's wink, more than his language, which angered me.

"Yer needn't ride no high hoss with me."

"Cut out your references to the lady," I said in a low tone, "unless you are starting in for trouble."

"Oh, skittish, hey! Yer needn't ride no high hoss with me. I'm on ter your game."

His words sufficed to silence my batteries. I felt no fear of the man, big as he was and armed, but the thought that he might have been sent there by either Neale or Vail and informed of the conspiracy made me cautious about angering him. I must discover first the exact situation before locking horns with this Texas steer.

"Oh, do you?" I returned carelessly. "All right, then, we'll let it go at that. Only please remember the lady is under my protection. What is your name?"

"Coombs," in better humor, feeling he had bluffed me. "Bill Coombs."

"Can we have a bit of lunch?"

"I reckon yer can. Ol' Sally is a rustlin' some grub now. I stirred her up when I first cum in."

He sat down crosslegged on a chair the other side the littered table and stared at us, his hat still drawn down over his eyes. I spoke to her quietly in a voice which would not carry across the room.

"Don't mind him," I whispered. He's only a rough neck trying to bully a bit. I'll teach him his place before tomorrow."

"It is not the man so much," she replied, giving me a glimpse of her eyes. "But it is all so desolate and gloomy."

"Shadows won't hurt us, and this place will look better by daylight."

"You haven't any nerves."

"Oh, yes, I have; only they are trained. I didn't anticipate an easy job when I came down here. I am beginning to wonder if those fellows were square, if they gave me the straight story. Coombs words would seem to indicate that he knows I'm a fraud. Perhaps he didn't mean that, but it sounded so. Why should they tell that rough neck their plans and send him down here? I'll find out what he knows and how he knows it before another ten hours. If he's here to spy on us I'll make him earn his money."

"I—I hardly know why I consented to come, only I was so miserable; any

FROM HEADACHE.

To suffer from headache makes life miserable, and it takes a person who has never been subject to headache to describe the suffering and agony that goes along with it. The dull throbbing, the intense pain in one part of the head, now in another, is caused by some disordered condition of the system. The stomach may be wrong, the bowels may be constipated, the blood may not be right properly, but whatever the cause, the presence of headache clearly shows that there is something wrong, and unless relief is obtained and the cause of the trouble removed, more serious trouble may result.

The fact that Burdock Blood Bitters relieves the most stubborn cases of headache, no matter what the cause, is the best proof that it is the ideal remedy for this trouble, and those who have used it for this purpose recommend it highly. Mrs. Walter Lloyd, Caledonia, N.S., writes: "I was troubled very much with headache. I was induced to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after using a few bottles I was entirely cured. I feel it my duty to recommend it to all sufferers."

B.B.B. is the oldest and best known Blood medicine on the market to-day. Being made entirely from herbs, it is pure and harmless. Manufactured by T. Milburn Co. Limited, Toronto, Ont.

thing seemed better than the one I was leading."

"You saw all the papers," I interposed, "and they bear out every statement."

"Yes. But could they not be forged? Why should any honest lawyer advise a client to undertake such a fraud? It seems to me we are actually criminals, engaged in a criminal plot. Because the plan was concocted by a lawyer makes no difference. We could be arrested, imprisoned."

"We shall have to play out the game tonight at least," I said, startled by her earnestness. "I will talk with Coombs and will tell you the result tomorrow. Your nerves are all unstrung, and the affair may appear different by daylight."

The Texan got noisily to his feet and swaggered across the floor.

"If you all hav' got through yer whisperin'," he said roughly, "I reckon Sally's got ther grub laid out."

I bit my lips to keep back a hot reply, feeling the restraint of her eyes, and we followed him into the next room. The table was set for two, and I could distinguish the shadow of a woman standing motionless in the farther corner.

"Yer kin talk it out yere," announced Coombs, waving one hand, "'cause I won't be present, havin' et already. I reckon Sally won't interfere none."

He slammed the door viciously going out, causing the lamp to sputter. Then the woman came silently forward, a coffeepot in her hand. She was a mulatto perhaps sixty years of age, her face scarred by smallpox, and with strangely furtive eyes. Somehow she fitted into the scene, and I saw my companion gazing at her almost with horror as she flitted about us silently as a specter. I endeavored to talk while eating heartily, for I was hungry, but found it difficult to arouse Mrs. Bernard to any response, and she merely toyed with her food.

When the colored woman went out Mrs. Bernard dropped her fork and pushed back her chair.

"Oh, I simply cannot stand this place!" she exclaimed. "There is something perfectly horrid about it, and—and the people. How shall I ever get through the night?"

"That is nothing," I soothed, although hardly at ease myself. "She is evidently of the taciturn sort. We don't need to keep these servants, you know. I'll hunt up some more cheerful in town tomorrow. Why, by Jove, it's 10 o'clock already. Have you finished?"

"I couldn't choke down another mouthful."

"Well, don't be afraid. They mean well enough, no doubt. Sallie!"

She came gliding in, her back to the door.

"Are you the one who is to show us to our rooms?"

"Yes."

She picked up the lamp and went out, and Mrs. Bernard followed instantly, evidently afraid to be left in the dark. I followed with the grips, trailing up the stairs, having seen nothing of Coombs in the front room. In the upper hall our guide threw open two doors, going into the rooms and lighting lamps, thus giving glimpses of the interiors. The one in the corner was the larger and better furnished.

"This will be yours," I said, placing her valise on the floor. "You can feel safe enough there with the door locked—yes, there is a key—and I will be right opposite if you need anything."

She gave me her hand, but I felt it tremble.

"You are still afraid?"

"Yes, I am—but—but I am not going to be such a fool."

As her door closed I turned to the mulatto, who still stood there, lamp in hand. I was not sleepy, and I wanted most of all to have an understanding with Coombs. "Is the overseer down stairs?"

"Ah reckon he's out in one o' ther cabins, sah—he done don't sleep in the house nohow."

"He doesn't sleep here! Why?"

"Ah spect it's cause he's afeard, too, sah," she replied, her snaky eyes showing. "Ah's a voodoo, an' Ah don't care how 'bout dat—but good fur' dem ain't no white man wants ter stay in' dem yere house more'n one night."

She laughed a weird, grating laugh and started downstairs. I stood still, watching her light disappear. Then, swearing at myself for a coward, I stepped back into my own room and closed the door.

This revealment of conditions left me thoroughly puzzled. I was not frightened at the situation, for I largely attributed the fear shown by both Pete and Sallie to negro superstition. But Bill Coombs was a very different proposition. He was of the hard headed kind, not to be easily alarmed by visionary terrors, and yet he was manifestly afraid to sleep in the house. I was sufficiently acquainted with his type to comprehend there must be some real cause driving him to retreat to the negro cabins for rest.

I sat there for some time smoking, endeavoring to think it all over coolly and listening intently. At first I could distinguish the rattle of dishes downstairs as Sallie cleared the table, and, a little later, heard Mrs. Bernard moving about uneasily in her room across the hall. But at last these sounds ceased and the house became still. I removed a portion of my clothing and lay down on the bed, a certain uneasiness preventing me from undressing entirely. I was tired, but with little inclination for sleep. Could there be any truth in Mrs. Bernard's questioning of the motives actuating the man who had sent us here? Had we come—mere pawns in some game of crime—deceived, perhaps betrayed to arrest? Was Coombs here merely to watch us and report to Neale and Vail how we carried out our part of the bargain? The affair certainly looked altogether different now I was upon the ground, although I could figure out no possible object those men could have. At least they could accomplish nothing without my co-operation, and, if I discovered any evil afoot, I could block them instantly. I was there to save this property for the rightful heir and was determined now to see that Philip Henley received all that was due him. It was after 1 o'clock before I fell into a drowsy sleep.

Indeed, it hardly seemed to me that I had entirely lost consciousness when I was jerked bolt upright by the sharp report of a firearm. For a single instant I imagined the shot fired within my room; then I sprang to the door and flung it open, peering out into the hall. Everything was still, the rays from my lamp barely extending to the head of the stairs. I could neither see nor hear anything, and yet I had a strange premonition that I was not alone. There was an automatic pistol in the pocket of my coat, and I stepped back after it, picking up the lamp on my return, determined on a thorough examination of the upper story. There was no doubt about the shot—the sound was no effect of a dream. I wondered if the girl had been awakened by the report and paused to listen at her door, but no sound reached me from within.

I moved down the hall cautiously, regretting the need of a lamp, but the place was strange, and I dare not venture about in the dark.

The first doors I came to were ajar, but the moon was at the back of the house, and I was obliged to enter each apartment and flash my light into the corners to make sure they were vacant. These were medium sized bedrooms, comfortably furnished, although containing nothing new. Only one exhibited any evidence of late occupancy, being in considerable disorder, the bed unmade, some discarded garments strewn about the floor.

Some man had been sleeping up here lately, and it was not Coombs, but a much smaller individual. This knowledge made me even more cautious as I tiptoed down the hall, now narrowed by the back stairway. The first door opened into a bathroom, the tub half full of dirty water, a mussed towel on the floor. The last door, leading to a room apparently extending clear across the rear of the house, was tightly closed. I set my lamp down well out of sight and gripped my pistol before attempting to manipulate the knob. It opened noiselessly. Moonlight streamed through one window where the curtain was not closely drawn, but the gloom was too dense to reveal much of the shrouded interior. I could dimly perceive a table and some chairs, one overturned. There was no movement, however, no sign of present occupancy. Convinced as to this, I slipped back for my lamp, shading the flame so the light was thrown forward into the room. A single glance revealed everything. The table, a common deal affair, contained two bottles, one half filled, and three dirty glasses, together with a pack of disreputable looking cards, some of these scattered about the floor. There was no other furniture, and the walls were bare, a dirty gray color. But what my eyes rested upon in sudden horror was the body of a man curled up in a ball on the floor as a dog lies, his face hidden in his arms. That he was dead I knew at a glance.

THE VICTROLA AND THE COMMUNITY—NO. 4

says: "If people knew the health-giving relief from the strain of modern living which the Victrola gives, we medical men would have less to do and every home would be happier.

"When I can relax for an hour and listen to the excellent music my Victrola provides, I certainly feel the benefit. Violin music always appealed to me so I take especial pleasure in records by Elman, Kreisler or Maud Powell. I think "The Concerto for two violins" on three records by Kreisler and Elman is the finest music I ever heard.

"Expensive?—Not nearly so expensive as one of my bills for mending shattered nerves. It's wonderful what excellent ten-inch, double-sided Victor Records you can get at 90c each.

"No medical man can leave me out of his talk about music now, as formerly. I've got it of my own."

ROLL OF HONOR

Several thousand officers and employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway enlisted for active military duty with the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, and the majority of them are now in Europe, fighting for Canada and the Empire. As particulars of army reservists are not available, these lists of those who have given up their lives for their country, or been wounded in action, are necessarily incomplete, and do not therefore indicate fully the extent to which the Company's officers and employees have participated in the great struggle.

Nish the Scene of Many Battles

Once the Abode of Roman Emperors—Was Strongly Entrenched

Nish, which the Bulgarians have occupied, and which when the Government moved from Belgrade at the time of the first Austrian invasion a year ago made the temporary capital of Serbia, is at the junction of four railways—from Belgrade Kniasyevac, Sofia via Pirot, and Saloniki. Although considered by military experts the weakest of all the Serbian fortified towns, it was strongly intrenched, and form hills rising only 150 to 200 feet high its artillery was able to sweep the surroundings through a radius of fifteen miles.

There were as many fortified sectors as there were spaces between the railways, although that on the west having for its base the Saloniki-Nish-Belgrade line ranged 180 degrees, and on the west the place was approached by a highway quite as well detended as were the railways.

On the right bank of the Nishava, a tributary of the Morava, there is a small, obsolete stone fortress, said to occupy the site of the ancient Roman city of Nassius, from which the modern town may have derived its name, although there is authority for believing that the Turkish name Nis had nothing to do with the Latin origin of the place.

The first mention of the City of Nassius is to be found in the writings of Ptolemy of Alexandria. The Emperor Julian lived there, as also did Justinian for a while. It was the birthplace of Constantine the Great.

Nish has been the scene of many great battles and much slaughter. Under its walls in 269 the Emperor Claudius annihilated the armies of the Goths. Attila the Hun destroyed the city in the fifth century. In the ninth the Bulgarians conquered and held it for two centuries when they ceded it to the Byzantines, who, in turn, lost it to the Byzantine Emperor, Manuel I., in 1173. Its next possessor was the Servian Prince, Stephen Nemanya, who in 1195 received here the Germanic Emperor Frederic Barbarossa and his crusaders.

The Turks first came into possession of the palace in 1375, only to lose it sixty-eight years later to the allied armies of the Hungarians under Hunyada and the Serbians under George Brankovich. It again came into the possession of the Turks in 1456, and for more than 300 years it remained the most important military station on the road between Hungary and Constantinople. In the Austro-Turkish wars of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries it changed hands several times and after the Serbian repulse with great slaughter in 1809 the Turks built a tower of human skulls in celebration of their victory.

After the Turks were driven from the city in 1878 it was to a certain degree modernized, although it has still preserved its ancient Turkish palace, mosque, fountain, and market place, where, as of old, every costume of the Balkans may be seen on market days.

Nish is only surpassed by Belgrade in commercial and strategic importance; the administration of the Serbian railways has its factory here for repairing engines and principal stores of material. Prior to the removal of the capital here from Belgrade the King and Government resided in Nish for about three months every year; the National Assembly also had its sessions in Nish before the Constitution of 1901 was adopted.

It is the see of a Bishop, the seat of the district prefecture, and a tribunal and the headquarters of the Territorial Militia Corps.

20,000 AT BALL GAME IN JAPAN.

[illegible] baseball game between the University of Chicago baseball team in Japan, where the athletes are making extensive tours before large crowds. The first game in the international series was played on 24th September in Tokio. A crowd of 20,000 persons saw the Chicagoans beat the Waseda University representatives, 5 to 3. The Chicago players won their second game, which was with the University of Keio, by 4 to 1. The team is accompanied on its trip by Coach H. Jan O. Page, class of 1910, and Professor Chester Whitney Wright, of the Department of Political Economy, as representative of the University Faculty.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and abundant.

INTIMATE DETAILS

"London, first among the war capitals, and foremost among the battle theatres on English ground—by reason of its having become the storm center for operations of the mighty Zeppelins—is sketched with all the intimate details of long friendship by Florence Craig Albrecht in a communication to the National Geographic Society. Speaking of the many-sidedness, the great size and the ancient dignity of London, Mrs. Albrecht says:

"There are so many Londons in one London, where begin with them? The London of Roman and Saxon, of Norman and Plantagenet, the London of Chaucer and Shakespeare, of Lamb and Dickens and Thackeray; the London of clubs and hotels; the London of factories and sweatshops; the London that administers the affairs of empire, and the London that dances and plays cricket. There is the summer London of the tourist, there is social London revelling in May; there is the November London of smoke and fog, busy and inhospitable; there is to-day a darkened London, somewhat apprehensive, but grimly determined, a London different from any we have known.

"Putting aside all unproven traditions, its history begins with the coming of the Roman legions. Rome, seven centuries old, was in her pagan prime, but Paris, then Lutetia, was an island hamlet in the Seine; Vienna was a small Roman camp; Berlin did not come into existence for many a century thereafter; Madrid first appears 1,000 years later; Brussels was founded in the sixth century, Amsterdam about the 13th of our era. These count not at all in London's age.

"The city of London, the commercial heart of the metropolis on the site of the British hamlet and Roman town, measures about a mile square. In the daytime its inhabitants number more than 300,000, at night not a twelfth that number sleep there. Land is too valuable for residence. During one day a million and a half of people pass through its gates. Beyond it and across the river spreads another London of 5,000,000 people, over 130 square miles, and beyond that 'Greater London,' the district covered by the Metropolitan and city police, with 700 square miles and more than 7,000,000 inhabitants.

"Her streets, straightened and laid end to end, would reach from New York to San Francisco. Of her 650,000 buildings, 500 are hotels and inns. One hundred thousand Americans pass through them in peaceful summers and 15,000 resided there before the war. The East End, beyond the 'city' and the Tower, is a manufacturing district, tenanted largely by Jewish tailors. There are other industries, but the race predominates. The West End is the home of fashion and of power. Between these ends lies real London, with all its wealth of long and tremendous history, of literary and legal repute, of commercial prestige, of architectural fame.

"The district across the water concerns the American visitor only in a few definite interests; all of London for him lies in a mile-wide band above the Thames, from the Tower to Westminster; but so rich is it that when he would summarize his impressions, he finds neither beginning nor end.

"The whole of Christain history speaks to one in the hum of the monster city, the writer says, and in its thousands of picturesque sessions hallowed by memories. From the Tower, or tem palace, prison, arsenal, to the world famous Abbey, made sacred to civilization by the illustrious dead gathered within its walls, Mrs. Albrecht finds the echoes of the past nowhere more rich or more impressive than in the Imperial city of earth's greatest empire. Of this echo from the past, to be heard in London, Mrs. Albrecht says:

"It is the tramp of Roman legions investing a squalid British hamlet; it is the battle cry of Saxon and of Dane; it is the shout of the Norman conqueror, the echoes of the mallets of his builders; it is the gay songs of the courtiers riding to this or that palace on the Thames; it is the chant of many psalms, the sob of martyrs; it is the thud of oars in muffled rowlocks, as a barge slips down the river from the jubilee hall of Westminster to the Traitor's Gate at the Tower. It is the laughter of masques and revels in inns or court halls and gardens; it is the moan when a king dies at Whitehall, it is the frenzy born of plague and fire; it is the [illegible] and yells of roisterers, the drone of nuns; it is the acclaim of a new prince and a new crown. It is all these and more; it is the throbbing of a city's heart; it is the voice of many peoples through 2,000 years."

WAR HITS LONDON LEISURE

Business Men Drop Heavy Luncheons and Their 4 o'clock Tea.

War has changed many of the old business customs in London, according to Henry G. Lindley, a London business merchant, who arrived yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria on his way to China.

"Merchants in London who used to stroll into their offices about 10.30," he said, "now get to their desks at 9 o'clock and go through the foreign news very carefully. Instead of going out at noon and spending two or three hours over a heavy luncheon, business men have a sandwich and a glass of sherry, while they talk over the war news and the actions of the Government in putting a tax on their profits. I have known members of long corporations who have had their cup of tea and a toasted muffin at 4 o'clock every afternoon for more than thirty years who now go out and have a whisky and soda with an oatmeal biscuit, as they say the war has made them too nervous to indulge in the old-fashioned innocuous beverages."

Mr. Lindley went on to say that the 1 o'clock commercial dinner served in all the principal inns of England at 1 o'clock for half a crown (about sixty cents), which was described by Charles Dickens and Thackeray in their novels, had been abolished by the war, and the drummer had a sandwich and a glass of beer or milk in a restaurant instead of returning to the hotel in the middle of the day, wasting valuable time.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MY QUEER PARTNER.

By GELLE C. WARREN.

(Copyright by American Press Association.)

When I was twenty-five years of age I was sent to St. Paul by the firm I was with to establish an agency for their goods. I soon discovered that there was a concern in Minneapolis which was selling the same grade of goods and always underbidding me. I went over there to see if I could make a scale of prices with the underbidding firm.

I found a young man even younger than myself. He was not acting as agent, but for himself. I stated my business, to which he listened attentively. I argued that if he continued to underbid me I would begin to underbid him, and one would thus ruin each other's trade, whereas if we made prices together we could both succeed. When I had finished he said:

"What guaranty have I that you will keep your agreement?"

Surprised at such a question, I replied, "The same guaranty I have that you will keep yours."

"There is no doubt whatever that I will keep any agreement I shall make," he replied, with some hauteur.

It struck me that he should go to some university for a course of logic. However, I persuaded him to make a list of minimum prices with me and left him well pleased with the result of my visit. We became very good friends as well as competitors, and finally, when I concluded to act also on my own account, we concluded, in order to save expenses, to form a partnership. I offered to give him first place in the firm name, but he insisted on taking the second, so we styled ourselves Graves & Elliston.

I found my partner a queer mixture. For a time I was virtual as well as nominal head of the firm, but lost it in a very odd way. A man came into our store to buy a large bill of goods on credit. The profit would be large, and I was brimful of enthusiasm over the trade. Not so Elliston. He flatly refused to consent "to sell' the man. When it came to his reasons he had none to give. Irritated, I told him that he should explain his position or I would dissolve the partnership, whereupon, driven to the wall, he said that he didn't like the shape of the man's nose.

Notwithstanding this absurd reason, which I inferred he had given simply to afford me an excuse for not fulfilling my threat, we did not sell the goods. Some months later the notes the purchaser had given other firms were protested and every dollar of the indebtedness was lost. I charged Elliston with having some information unknown to me about the rascal, but he denied having any whatever. Nevertheless from this time I never urged entering upon any important transaction without my partner's full approval.

But when it came to a matter of several hundred or several thousand dollars, while I would unhesitatingly make an offer of half the amount asked, Elliston could never bring himself to consider such a course as anything but ridiculous. Thus the large transactions fell into my hands.

Although Elliston seemed to me to be very notional, I gradually found that he was a better business man than I. He was certainly my superior in looking ahead. While my mind was on the present, his was on the future. This was especially true in the matter of expenses. I am free to admit that had it not been for him our expenses would have eaten up our profits. He was continually surprising me, when payments we were obliged to make came round, by having provided the funds to meet them. This faculty, together with his keeping expenses down, made money for us every year for several years. Then one day Elliston told me that he wished to sell his interest in the business since he purposed traveling abroad. This was a blow to me, for I was not minded to give up business myself, and I was sure I could not make money without the aid of the typical faculties possessed by my partner. However, he gave me easy terms, and I bought him out.

As soon as the papers had passed Elliston bade me goodby and left for New York to sail for Naples. A week later I received a letter from him at Chicago, asking me to meet him there. Since he gave no reason I hesitated. However, knowing him to be a queer fellow who usually had a reason hidden away somewhere for what he did, I left my business with my head clerk and took a train.

The next evening I called at Elliston's hotel and sent up my card. I was shown to a private parlor, where, instead of finding him, a woman advanced to greet me.

"You're Elliston's sister," I exclaimed, "doubtless his twin."

"I am Elliston himself," she replied.

And so she was. It was a singular story she told me—how, having been obliged to make her own way in the world, she had found skirts disadvantageous and finally donned man's attire. Having made enough to give her several thousand dollars a year income, she gladly resumed her proper attire, but not until she had left the proximity of those who had known her as a man.

I had always regarded my partner as young and boyish looking, without a beard and with a musical voice. In woman's dress Margaret Elliston—that was her name—was transfigured into a very attractive woman. I remained in Chicago a week, at the end of which time it was arranged that I should return to Minnesota, sell the business and we should go abroad as husband and wife.

Light to jail. Why, man, killing a cow is next door to killing a human being! Can't you realize it?"

"But, you see, we are stopping at the Elms hotel, and the young lady is anxious to get back to her mother. If I pay the damages you can take the ball on the speeding case, can't you?"

The constable thought the case over and decided to take bail. When Mr. Dillon pulled out his purse to pay the $32 he received a shock. Four dollars was all he had with him. The weeping and muttering chauffeur was searched, but he had less than a dollar. Blushing and stammering and perturbed, the young man called upon Miss Haddon for a cash loan. She had only $2.

"I hate to take you to jail," said the constable when informed of how things were. "I guess your watch and pin will be enough to secure everything. You've got to come back in a week, though, to face the squire."

The things were handed over, the fuddled chauffeur loaded in like a bag of meal and the smashed auto left "to be called for." Then the other auto headed for the hotel. In the excitement of the hour neither of the principals had thought of names. It was only as they were rolling smoothly along at not too fast a gait that the error was repaired. Then a silence lasting five long minutes ensued. Then two peals of laughter broke from two pairs of lips in chorus. The whole thing was grimly ludicrous.

"And how did you raise the $32 and the bail?" asked the girl.

"The constable has my watch and pin."

"And won't we have to go to jail?"

"I think not, but we are prisoners in a sense. If you fly the country you will leave me in a bad fix."

Of course the mother thanked Mr. Dillon, and of course Mr. Dillon thanked his stars and pushed his luck. Once always and sometimes twice a day that couple had to ride out to see about bail; they had to wander about the grounds evenings; they had to sit in grottoes and beside waterfalls. After a month had passed Mr. Dillon begged the mother to let him be a bondsman to the daughter for life.

"Dear me," said the mother, "but what strange things running over a cow may lead to! Don't let Minnie do it again!"

His Crushed Cigar.

"Yes," said the man with the open countenance, "I married a girl in the mutilated currency bureau of the treasury department at Washington. Quite a little romance it was too."

"How did it happen?" asked the man with the crumpled necktie.

"It was her deft fingers, her marvelous skill, that chiefly attracted me."

"Patching together ragged old dollar bills? Faugh!"

"Restrain your sarcasm, if you please. She could do much finer work than that. I had seen her once or twice and thought her a pretty girl, but was not particularly impressed. One evening, though, when I was calling on her at the boarding house where she lived I happened to notice that in some way I had crushed a twenty-five cent cigar in my upper left vest pocket, and I showed it to her.

"'That's nothing,' she said. 'I can mend that and make it all right in a jiffy.'

"It was a shapeless mass, but I told her to go ahead. She got a little paste, and in five minutes she fixed it up as good as new. Well, sir, that caught me, and I proposed to her on the spot. She said 'Yes,' and we were married the following week."

"Old chap," said the man in the mackintosh after a long pause, "how had you crushed that cigar?"

"That's none of your business!"—Chicago Tribune

Christmas Gifts for the Baby

A Group of Baby Belongings

The baby inspires the greatest number of dainty gifts at Christmas time, nearly all of them the handwork of those who welcome him.

A book in which the important affairs of the new arrival are to be put on record, a hanger for safety pins of several sizes, a pair of armlets, and some brightly colored toys suspended by gay ribbons, are pictured above in the group of baby belongings.

The record book is made by covering cardboard with white moire silk. A stork is painted on the front cover, and plain heavy white paper provides the leaves. Satin ribbon in light blue or pink is sewed to each cover to fasten them together.

Pink satin ribbon and white celluloid rings, in three sizes, are used for the safety-pin hangers. One long and three short ends hang from a pretty bow, each terminating in a ring. The pins are fastened over the rings.

Narrow satin ribbon shirred over flat elastic cord forms the armlets. Each is finished with a full rosette.

The Important Part.

"What you want to do," said the druggist, as he handed the old darkey the medicine, "is to take a dose of this after each meal."

"Yes, sah," was the reply; "an' now, if you please, sah, tell me whar I'm gwin get de meals?"—"Christain Register."

!"MAKING GOOD" MAKES FRIENDS.

There is no way of making lasting friends like "making good." After more than four decades of popularity friends here in Canada are numbered by the thousands.

Windsor, Ont.—"I have used Dr. Pierce's remedies, Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription, in my family over fifteen years, with the very best results. I would not be without them in my home. I consider they have been a great saving as I have had very few doctor bills to pay. I take great pleasure in recommending them to the sick, who are in need of sure relief."—Mrs. Elizabeth Kellam, 120 Glengarry Ave., Windsor, Ont.

Chatham, Ont.—"This is to certify that I have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and my husband has used 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Both were found to be very satisfactory and I have recommended them to my relatives, who have used them with the best of results. I can highly recommend these medicines as being the very best."—Mrs. Isaac Weston, 7 Lacroix St.

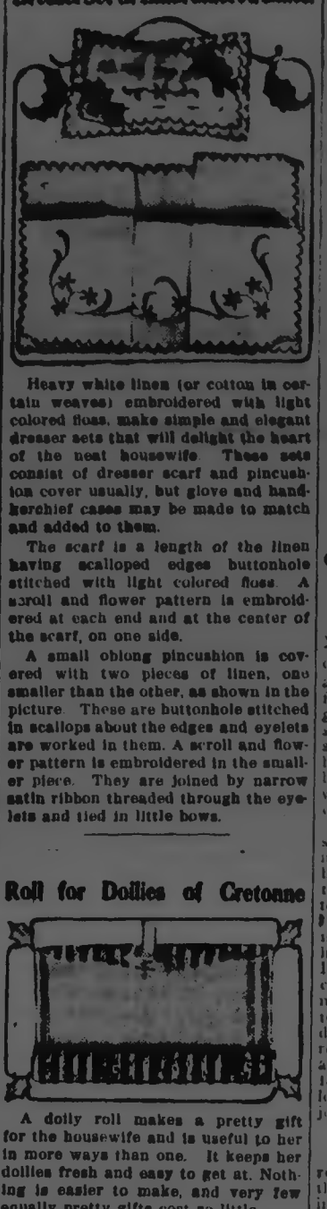
There is not a drop of alcohol or any narcotic in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, but in this safe vegetable remedy and tonic there is a mighty alterative power which by replacing the blood impurities with pure, rich blood, not only cure catarrhal conditions wherever located, but vitalizes the kidneys, stomach, liver, bowels and every organ of the body.

All dealers in medicine can supply Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, or send 50 cents in one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial box of tablets.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

Pretty Things for the Housewife

Dresser Set of Embroidered Linen



Heavy white linen (or cotton in certain weaves) embroidered with light colored floss, make simple and elegant dresser sets that will delight the heart of the neat housewife. These sets consist of dresser scarf and pincushion cover usually, but glove and handkerchief cases may be made to match and added to them.

The scarf is a length of the linen having scalloped edges buttonhole stitched with light colored floss. A scroll and flower pattern is embroidered at each end and at the center of the scarf, on one side.

A small oblong pincushion is covered with two pieces of linen, one smaller than the other, as shown in the picture. These are buttonhole stitched in scallops about the edges and eyelets are worked in them. A scroll and flower pattern is embroidered in the smaller piece. They are joined by narrow satin ribbon threaded through the eyelets and tied in little bows.

Roll for Doilies of Cretonne

A doily roll makes a pretty gift for the housewife and is useful to her in more ways than one. It keeps her doilies fresh and easy to get at. Nothing is easier to make, and very few equally pretty gifts cost so little.

The rolls are usually made in two lengths, one for centerpieces and one for doilies. To make one a strong pasteboard tube, such as used for mailing is procured. Circular pieces of cretonne are stretched over the ends and pasted down on the roll.

A strip of the cretonne as wide as the tube is long is then cut off of any length desired. One end of this strip is trimmed in a curve and the other left straight. The curved end and sides of the strip are bound with tape.

The straight end is pasted to the roll, the cretonne wound once about it and sewed down to form a casing for it. Ribbon ends are sewed to the curved end of cretonne to form ties for fastening it when the doilies have been rolled.

The cretonne used to make the roll shown in the picture is a striped pattern with small flowers scattered over the surface. Dark backgrounds with gay flowers make rolls that do not soil easily. The ribbon used should match the flowers or foliage in the pattern.

Many Women Suffer FROM EXCRUCIATING PAINS IN THE BACK.

Do you ever feel that you must have some rest for that lame and aching back?

Do you ever feel that those shooting, stabbing, darting pains must be gotten rid of before you can get into condition, whereby you can attend to your household duties without a pain or an ache?

When the back begins to ache it is a sure sign that there is something radically wrong with the kidneys.

What you want is a kidney medicine, and a medicine for the kidneys only.

Doan's Kidney Pills know nothing but kidney disorders, because they are manufactured solely for the purpose of relieving and curing the kidneys.

Mrs. L. Melanson, Plympton, N.S., writes: "I am sending you this testimonial, telling you what a wonderful cure Doan's Kidney Pills made for me. For years I had suffered so with my kidneys I could hardly do my housework. I used several kinds of pills, but none of them seemed to be doing me any good. At last I was advised to try a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. When I had taken the first box I found relief. I have used five boxes, and to-day I feel like a new woman. I cannot recommend them too highly."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

EMIGRATION FROM BRITAIN

WHAT FIGURES SHOW.

Canadian Official in London Tells Men Who Apply to Him That Recruiting Officer Needs Them.

The London correspondent of the New York Sun writes under date of Oct. 20: Much alarms has been aroused recently by the emigration from Great Britain, which has been growing from month to month to such proportions that the average since the beginning of the year has been 2,676 men. A campaign has been started by the press to find out what proportion of the emigrants are of military age.

When the emigrants are going outside the British Empire, as is true in the majority of cases, nothing can be done under existing regulations to stop them. It, however, they intend to settle in any other part of the British Dominions every effort is made to discourage them. The head of the Canadian Emigration Department in London declared recently that whenever an "enlistable" man informed this office that he intended to emigrate to Canada the department notified him that the recruiting officers wanted to see him, and that Canada was not sending 150,000 men to Europe in order to let other men go out and get their jobs.

Figures of Eight Months.

Australian states, which have already sent more than 50,000 [illegible] the war, stopped assisting emigrants immediately after the outbreak of hostilities.

In the eight months ending August of the present year 63,085 British subjects left the United Kingdom for the British Empire and for the United States and other foreign countries. The largest number went to the United States, namely, 24,960, to Canada and Newfoundland 14,552, 9,314 to Australia, 7,163 to South Africa. In the same period of 1914 passengers outward were 211,653, of whom the Empire got 138,058. But on the balance 21,847 more British subjects entered the United Kingdom than left it between January and August this year; whereas last year the balance was on the other side to the extent of 42,531.

Fewer Britons Left.

The number of British subjects previously resident in the United Kingdom who left to take up permanent residence in place out of Europe during the eight months ending in August 1915 was 50,788, of whom 21,441 were men, 20,673 females, 8,314 children. The 50,308 is a drop from 160,539 in the corresponding period of 1914, and as to men, 51,430 fewer British left this country in those eight months of [illegible]. Before the war a fall in emigration had set in. The years 1910 to 1913 were a boom period, which substantially reduced the numbers available in those classes in the United Kingdom from which emigrants are chiefly drawn.

Was Attacked By Two Submarines Says Officer

Of the Indian Steamship Ancona—Eighth Boat Had Hardly Touched Water Before Liner Floundered

CAPE BON, Tues., Nov. 11, via Paris, Nov. 12.—One of the Ancona officers, named Salvemini, says that a wireless sent by the submarines, which, by reason of the steamer's size, a lifeboat and the rescue of the boys, were able to approach unnoticed. Both submarines, he says, flew the Austrian colours, but several other survivors affirm that the flag was replaced by the German colours as soon as the liner was struck. The nearest submarine was about 100 feet long and carried three periscopes on her bow and stern. The other submarine drew across the Ancona's bow. The officer says:

Sank With Passengers.

"At the first shots the captain of the Ancona ordered out the boats. The eighth boat hardly had touched the water when the liner sank by the head, engulfing the remainder of the passengers and crew who had taken refuge on the top deck. The eight boats, keeping together, steered on a southerly course. After travelling some distance they sighted a ship with her lights out. The survivors lighted flares and the ship approached them; but the submarines, who were following, turned their searchlights upon her and she abruptly changed her course and disappeared in the night. The boats then separated."

Salvemini believes the persons who were not in the eight boats inevitably perished.

The captain is said to be among the saved.

"AFRAID OF NORTHCLIFFE?"

Question Asked in Commons—Another Paper Called Guilty as Globe.

LONDON, Nov. 10.—"Is the Government afraid of Lord Northcliffe?" was the query propounded by Harry Anderson Watt, member for the College Division of Glasgow, in the House of Commons. The Speaker promptly forstalled discussion of the topic by disallowing the question.

The House was discussing the suspension of The Globe at the time. One inquisitor wanted to know why another evening paper which had committed the same offense as The Globe was not similarly suppressed.

Sir John A. Simon, Secretary of State for Home Affairs, assured the House that any newspaper acting as The Globe did would receive similar treatment. As to the length of the suspension of The Globe and as to procedeings against its editor and publisher, the Secretary said these questions were under consideration.

3 BOXES CURED PSORIASIS

Mrs. Nettie Masser, Consecon, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis, and one said could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment and am entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

BIG THEFT OF PEARLS.

Precious Stones Valued at $100,000 Taken from French Liner.

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—Pearls valued at nearly $100,000 were stolen from the strong box on the French Line steamship Rochambeau just before her arrival here on Nov last, it has become known to-day. The pearls were being forwarded to firms in the city from Paris.

The theft was discovered when a number of loose pearls were found on the ship's decks. The pearls were insured for their full value with Lloyds in London.

MEDIUMS TELL FATHER OF HIS SON'S MISHAP

ROSEBURG, Ore., Nov. 11.—Claiming that he received as many as three letters from mediums, in which was stated that his son, Dr. Clayton Ransom, was not dead, but had accidentally shot himself in the head while hunting in the mountains of Wyoming, the young man's father telegraphed his son Charles, in Wyoming, carefully to inspect the cabins along Snake River. The father received the following:

"Have found Clayton; he had accidentally shot himself in the head. Am writing hospital."

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and dizzing of the scalp will stop instantly and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

The total Prussian losses to date, the paper says, have been 2,089,454 not including 230 Bavarians, 234 Wurtemburg, 280 Saxon and 1100 navy lists and the lists of officers and non commissioned officers who have been lost while fighting with the Turks.

RUSSIAN POSITION STRONGER THAN EVER

(Isaac Don Levine in N.Y. Times.)

The recent developments in the Balkans have so far in no way aggravated the position of Russia, and, on the contrary, may yet prove a source of unexpected relief to the Slavic Empire. It is absurd to contend that Russia by losing the littleused avenue of communication passing through Bulgaria—a loss which, by the way, came as no surprise to Russia—will find itself in the grip of a ring leading to "a sudden collapse or a slow strangulation." Russia's problem is not the result of recent development in the Balkans or in any other theatre of war; it arose, before the first winter's campaign, in the first weeks of the war.

The blow that Russia received with the closing of the Baltic and Black Seas came in the Fall of 1914. Since then nothing has occurred to make Russia's position in respect to means of communication with the outside world less favorable and, for that matter, nothing can occur. Whatever had happened was an improvement, not a loss.

Archangel was a "discovery" to Russia more than to the outside world. No one in times of peace had looked for anything worth while in that direction. Only in Russia, the country of "possible impossibilities," can such a thing happen. A port that is open nine months in the year, within such proximity to England and the United States, will prove of great value to Russia after the war.

Russia knew the extent to which it would rely on Archangel. The Arctic certainly is not of recent development, having been a factor last winter. Why it should make Russia's difficulties more extensive this winter is a mystery which only a Teuton mind can divine.

As for Vladivostok, the port can easily be kept open all the year, and though the Doctor is inclined to minimize its importance, the fact remains that it is an excellent port, and the Trans-Siberian Railway is working smoothly without any breakdowns, and has been double-tracked all the way.

The breakdown that happened during the Russo-Japanese war might have happened again last winter or this summer, because of the suddenness with which the railroad was compelled to handle enormous traffic, but they will not take place this winter.

With Japan's resources at the disposal of Russia, the despised "back door" becomes of force enough to disillusion the Doctor of his vision of a ring around Russia.

With Russia, unlike Germany it is not a question of procuring bread and meat, but of exporting these articles. While Russia's foreign trade has been effectively crippled, it should never be forgotten that there is a fundamental difference between high prices in Russia and Germany. While in the latter it is due to lack of food, in the former it is due to lack of organization in the distribution of food. The clamor of the people in Russia will result in an organized effort to distribute the food more rapidly in the vast empire; it will make the government more efficient. But how will Germany meet the clamor of her people? Surely not by increased efficiency.

Russia's problem this Winter will be much less difficult than last. She had time to prepare for it, and she did so. Her prospects of getting an adequate supply of war material have not changed since last Winter. The Balkan developments could have no real effect on these prospects, for it was early in the Summer that Russia realized that the opening of the Dardanelles could not be relied upon, and it was then that she cooperated for Japan's aid. What that aid has already accomplished can be seen in the last month's activities on the Russian front. The "almighty" von Hindenburg could perhaps furnish some interesting information on the subject.

Russia is too vast, wealthy, and self-sufficient to become a victim of "slow strangulation." A "sudden collapse" has been prophesied even by Russia's friends, but such a collapse, even if it takes place, which is very unlikely, would be fatal to Germany and beneficial to Russia and her allies. It would be an internal collapse of the present government and would speedily bring forth a "new Russia," a Russia stronger than ever in her determination to rid the world of Prussian militarism.

A revolt in Russia, which I repeat is very unlikely, would be a revolt against the very principles of Prussian "Kulture," and would make Russia a terrible foe to deal with. So instead of strangling Russia the approaching Winter Doctor Oberpherren would do better devoting his attention to the marked effects of a not very "slow strangulation" that Germany is suffering from at the present moment.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

All soft materials look their best when made in some way that gives considerable fulness, and we have so many dainty voiles and crepe fabrics this season that a model like the one shown herewith should receive a cordial welcome.

The blouse of this frock is quite plain, deeply cut out at the neck in U shape and with a chemisette filling in the opening. The wide collar is attached to this chemisette.

There is some fulness at the waistline, just enough to be graceful, and the sleeves are made loose and of full length, but, of course, they may be shortened as much as desired. When short they are finished with a cuff.

The skirt is made with a yoke which is fitted to the figure. To this a two piece lower portion is attached, and this is quite full and gathered at the top. A little distance above the edge of the skirt is a row of perforations, and along this a bias fold of material may be placed as trimming if desired.

The use of frilling is a favorite way of trimming many of the more simple dresses, and in this design it is used effectively at the cuff and above the fold which trims the skirt. This frilling is usually of silk or ribbon harmonizing or contrasting with the dress material. The ordinary colors can be purchased all pleated, but others must be done by a professional.

The dress pattern, No. 7297, is cut in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires with skirt fold 4¼ yards of 36 inch material and ⅝ yard of 27 inch lawn for collar, and chemisette.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Heavy Rains Marred Champagne Triumph

Frederick Palmer Says Germans Are Not Fighting as Well on Western Front Now

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—"The Germans on the western front are not fighting as well as they did six months ago. British artillery is now firing more shells than that of the Germans.

"Before I left France I visited the Champagne battlefield, where the French might have broken through the German line but for heavy rains on the second day of the battle."

This was the statement made here to-day by Frederick Palmer, American war correspondent, whose recent despatches from the British front have been important as well as interesting. Mr. Palmer, who arrived to-day on the St. Louis, declared that the execution of Edith Cavell, the British nurse, by German soldiers in Belgium, had done more to stimulate recruiting in England than all the Zeppelin raids over London.

Germany in Bad Shape.

Conditions in Germany are very bad, Mr. Palmer believes. "If that steel curtain which is drawn over Germany could be lifted, the revelations might amaze the world," he declared.

Mr. Palmer said that there is no thought of peace in England or France at this time. Englishmen consider that the war cannot possibly end before next summer, even if it does then.

Zepp. Raid "Tame."

"After having lived at the British front for months the glimpse I had of Zeppelin raids over London seemed pretty tame. For real thrills they are not in it with half a dozen 15-inch German shells dropped into a French town during the busiest hour of the day," said Palmer. "The crisis of the war now seems to be in the Balkans. It is a case of a fierce fight for time in the mud and mountain passes. The Bulgars could not keep going long unless the Germans got through to them with ammunition."

Britain's Glory.

"The greatest experience I had was with the British fleet. If it takes a navy the size of the British to make an impregnable line of steel from the English Channel to Iceland, how large a one will we require if we should ever be attacked on two sides, to defend our coasts on two oceans, the Panama Canal, Hawaii and the Philippines?"

ELEPHANT DIES OF JOY WHEN SHOW RETURNS

Superannuated Beast Topples Over When Cronies Come Back.

BARABOO, Wis., Nov. 10.—"Old Bate," the oldest elephant in captivity, the first to travel with the Ringling Brothers when they had a wagon show, with one ring and one elephant, is dead. She died of joy at seeing the circus come back to Baraboo for winter quarters after having been left here alone for the first time, while the rest of the animals and keepers were out on the road.

"Old Bate" had been for more than forty years a permanent fixture here during the winter season. It is estimated that she was 100 years old. During the season of 1914 she went with the show or old times sake, because the Ringling Brothers' sentiment for her, but never left the car, and last spring she was left in the winter quarters.

ALLIES ATTACK BULGARS ON SIXTY MILE FRONT

FALL OF VELES CANNOT BE LONG DELAYED

ALLIES PRESSING BULGARS HARD ENEMIES' LOSSES ARE NUMEROUS

French Inflict Severe Defeat on Bulgarians Near Veles---And North-East of That Town the Enemy's Retreat Verges on a Route---French Artillery is Clearing the Way For Franco-British Infantry and Cavalry---Constant Reinforcements Reaching the Allies

Has King Constantine Thrown Down Gauntlet?

BUCHAREST, Nov. 12.—Bulgarians are desperately resisting the Franco-British advance to-day along a sixty-mile line extending from the vicinity of Veles in southern Serbia, to the region southeast of Strumnitza on the Bulgar side of the frontier. Their attempt to check the Allies seems vain. The latter have now occupied the town of Gradeko and are moving forward steadily, the French artillery clearing the way for the Franco-British infantry and cavalry forces. Northeast of Veles the Bulgar retreat verges on a rout, with the French chasing fugitives. The Bulgarian losses are enormous. The Allies are constantly bringing up reinforcements from Salonika.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The French have inflicted a severe defeat on the Bulgarians near Veles, and the fall of that town is considered imminent. Veles is about 27 miles southeast of Uskub on the railroad to Salonika. A successful French cavalry raid which reached environs of city led to an erroneous report that it had been captured Wednesday.

(By Wm. G. Shepperd.)

MONASTIR, Serbia, Nov. 12.—The Allies are firmly established in Southern Serbia. Monastir, Prilep and region around them was in imminent danger for a time from the oncoming Bulgars, but the French saved them when they threatened Veles, to the northeast.

The Monastir Serbs feel safe again to-day for the time being. Refugees who fled from Prilep are returning. American doctors who escaped from Uskub before the Bulgars arrived there are due here to-night after an exceedingly roundabout trip through Albania, the only route by which they could avoid the invading force. News of the detention by the Bulgars of Lady Page, the English woman engaged in nursing wounded Serbs in the district taken by the invaders has been confirmed. Austria faces great difficulty in controlling its Croatian and Dalmatian subjects who, sympathizing with the Serbs, are deserting from the Austrian army in great numbers and joining the Serbians.

In a telegram of congratulation sent by the Kaiser to the Bulgars on their conquest of Nish, the German ruler referred to the Serbs as "a band of brigands."

ROME, Nov. 12.—Greek smugglers are furnishing the German and Austrian submarines in the Mediterranean with fuel and other supplies. Orders were given by the Admiralty to-day for systematic hunt of these purveyors of necessities to the enemy. If this source of supplies can be cut off, it is believed the Teutonic underseaboa campaign will be ended, so far as the western Mediterranean is concerned.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—That King Constantine has finally thrown down the gauntlet to the Greek war party is the impression gained from Athens despatches announcing his dissolution of parliament. Constantine presumably is convinced that he will get a mandate satisfactory to himself from the handful of electors who will be able to cast their ballots with the army completely mobilized. Venizelas' course is watched from here with much anxiety. If he undertakes to rouse the counry against the King, diplomats say they think the prospect excellent for a revolution.

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—Virtually the entire food supply of the nation is expected soon to pass under governmental control to insure an equiable distribution of supplies at fair prices among the entire population, rich and poor.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—Italy has agreed to lend sufficient aid to the Allies in their Balkan campaign to insure their complete success, according to a despatch from Rome.

ROME, Nov. 12.—Only 225 passengers and crew of the steamer Ancona were saved out of a total of 428 on board, says a despatch from Tunis. Two boats have arrived at Tunis, the despatch said, one with 37 survivors and the other with 27. United States Ambassador Page called at the Foreign Office to-day and had a long talk with Baron Connino. The Italian Government has ordered a rigid investigation of the disaster, under the direction of the Italian consul at Tunis, assisted by Italian naval officers to determine all facts relating to international responsibility. It is expected here this will have a bearing on any diplomatic representations the United States may make in behalf of the American passengers on board the steamer.

PARIS (Official) Nov. 12.—A spirited bombardment has continued in the sector of Loos, both sides taking part. In the Artois district French artillery has silenced certain German batteries.

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—The first cable received by the New York office of the Italian Line concerning the sinking of the Ancona arrived today, but threw no light on the disaster, and tended to confirm the belief that the Italian censor was holding up despatches.

MILAN, Nov. 12.—There is grave reason o fear that the main body of the Serbian army, fighting the Germans' and Bulgarians' right wing has been cut off between Kralico and Nish, say despatches here. It is possible that since the southern army holds at Katchanik, retreating columns may escape, though there has been no news from the retreating Serbian army for four days.

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—Twenty-seven members of the Greek Parliament have deserted the war party, which ex-Premier Venizeloe leads, so that the Government has secured a neutrality majority among the law-makers, according to Athens information.

LONDON, Nov. 12. — The Germans have lost so much ground on their eastern front that the Russian War Office considers Riga and Dvinsk safe for the winter, Petrograd despatches said this afternoon.

SHAH MAY GET OUT.

If Persia's Proposals to Russia Are Not Acceptable.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11.—According to the latest advices received in Teheran, Persia, a Russian force is within 48 miles of Teheran, and the indications are that the Germans, Austrians and Turks in the city are preparing to leave. At a secret session of parliament a majority of the deputies expressed the hope that an amicable arrangement of the difficulties between Russia and Persia would be reached. The cabinet ministers had been in session for 24 hours trying to formulate conditions acceptable to Russia and Great Britain.

It is reported that the Shah will retire to Ispahan in the event that the Persian proposals are not acceptable.

TWO LOCAL WOMEN SENTENCED TO A YEAR IN MERCER

Appeared in Police Court This Morning With Several Charges Against One of Them—Big Docket Before Magistrate This Morning

BLACKLISTER CHARGED

Two women were each sentenced to one year in the Mercer Reformatory at the Police Court this morning. Mrs. Florence Spring was found guilty of attempting to procure a young girl of sixteen for immoral purposes, and also of being a common prostitute, while Mrs. Kate Douglas was also found guilty of being a common prostitute.

In the case of Mrs. Florence Spring P. C. Deannard was first called. He said that he had seen the prisoner several times on George street accosting different men. He had seen her stop a man also on Simcoe street.

Detective Newhall stated that he asked the accused to give a satisfactory account of her conduct with certain men, but this she refused to do. Her language was very bad. She said she came to Peterborough to visit her husband's grave. She admitted to the detective wrong doing in an immoral way. Her reputation was bad.

On this charge she offered no defence

Attempting to Procure.

The next witness, a young girl, stated that she had resided here since February, 1914. She was sixteen on the 4th of May last. She knew the prisoner, Mrs. Spring. She came to Mrs. Stabler's house, 491 Albert street, where the witness was staying. The young girl went out with her and Mrs. Stabler one afternoon. They went to a local hotel where Mrs. Spring asked her to have a drink. Witness told her she didn't drink, but the accused said "Come on upstairs and be sociable." They went upstairs and Mr. Stabler, who works at the hotel, brought up three Scotch whiskies. The two women drank theirs, but she didn't take hers then. She told Mr. Stabler to take hers. Mrs Spring said "Go on and drink it. It won't hurt you." Witness then drank it. Mrs. Spring paid for it.

After leaving the hotel they went and bought flowers which were taken to the cemetery and placed on Mrs. Spring's husband's grave. They then returned home.

The young girl then told of a conversation with Mrs. Spring, who asked her several times to go to Toronto with her, and told her how they would make a good living there in an immoral way. Witness stated that the accused told her of being at Niagara Military Camp with a girl friend where she was fined $14.50 for her conduct there.

Wandered the Streets.

Mrs. Kate Douglas was also sentenced to one year in the Mercer Reformatory this morning by Magistrate Dumble on a charge of prostitution. She was arrested last night by P. C. Blade on Rubidge street. In court this morning P. C. Blade testified to having watched her house, stating that he had seen as many as sixteen men calling there and waiting around her place, not later than last night. Her reputation was bad. Several complaints had been made by citizens as to her canduct, also from the military police in regard to her accosting soldiers

She offered no defence and was sentenced as stated above.

It is fair to state that this Mrs. Spring is not, except by an unfortunate marriage, in any way connected with the respectable family residing at 138 Lock street; she is late of Toronto and formerly of Niagara Falls.

Took Flask From Pocket.

A well known young man was found guilty of being drunk while on the prohibited list, at the Police Court this morning and was fined ten dollars which he paid forthwith. In the witness box he stated that he got his liquor in a coat, hanging in the Brock St. Rink. When he went to get his coat he saw a flask sticking

700 Invalided Canadians Expected On The Metagama

Biggest Batch of Returned Soldiers Since War Broke Are Looked For This Week--Several Promotions in 93rd Battalion---Eighteen Added to the Strength the First Four Days of the Week---To-Day's Military News

OTTAWA, Nov. 12.—Preparations are being made for the reception of the biggest batch of returned wounded soldiers [illegible] on their home shores in Canada. The Metagama is expected to arrive at an early date with 700 men on board, 240 of whom the Dominion Hospital Commission is advised, should be placed in convalescent homes.

The discharge depot, Quebec, is being reorganized to a certain extent, and headquarters will have full charge. In future a number of officers from the Militia Department will meet the men and several medical boards will be placed in charge and will examine the returned soldiers.

Concert a Success.

The concert at the Royal Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, in aid of the 93rd Band Fund, not only resulted in a substantial addition to the fund, but also provided a very enjoyable entertainment for the large audiences which attended. The programme included recitations by Corp. Frank Traynor of the 93rd, and Mrs. Knox, the President of the Kitchener League, enjoyable solos by Miss Stevens and Sergt.-Major Hartshorn, a coon song, with banjo accompaniment, by Mr. Frank Clarke, a skeptdance by Mr. Dave Quinlan, and a laughable sketch by Sergt. Major Hartshorn and Corp. Traynor. A good series of pictures was provided by Manager Pappas. An orchestra from the 93rd band, consisting of Bandmaster Hughes, cornet; Corp. Leader, violin; Pte. Tom Smith, 'cello, and Pte Walne, piano, furnished enjoyable music. Another concert will be presented at the Royal on Monday of next week in aid of the Canadian Kitchener League. The members of the 93rd band wish to express their thanks to the artists who assisted in yesterday's programme.

The men of the 93rd Battalion were busy this morning in preparing their sleeping quarters. Each man is given a tick and sixteen pounds of straw with which he makes the paillase on which he is expected to sleep. It requires a ton of straw to provide beds for 125 men, so that nearly three tons will be employed by the soldiers already drilling here.

The 93rd Band will take part in a Red Cross entertainment at Knox Presbyterian Church to-night.

The Lindsay Post says:

Several of the officers of the 45th Regiment have volunteered their services for overseas and have been accepted at the local armouries. They will, it is understood, be attached to the 109th Battalion, which is to be recruited by Lieut.-Col Fee in Victoria and Haliburton.

Captain William Warren, one of the most popular officers of the 45th has at a great personal business sacrifice offered his services and will undoubtedly receive a command. He is one of the most indefatigable officers in the 45th and has been doing splendid work along recruiting lines, etc., ever since the war broke out.

Capt. Thorne, of Omemee, is another officer who has offered his services. He is in command of Omemee Company and is a most efficient officer.

Lieut. Brokenshire, of the 45th is another officer who has volunteered. He is in command of the Collegiate Cadet Corps and has brought that organization up to a high state of efficiency.

Lieut. Bisonette, who has been on duty at the armouries for some time has lined up with the other officers and will likely be attached to the new regmient.

The other officers volunteering for service are Lieuts. Geo. W. Hall and Geo. Tilly, the latter being at present in the Bank of Montreal at London.

SANFORD LINDSAY AND MRS. PHEOBE LINDSAY COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Former Was Charged With Incest and the Latter With Causing the Death of an Unborn Child—Three Other Charges Yet to be Heard

THE EVIDENCE

This morning in the County Police Court, Mrs. Sandford Lindsay was committed for trial on a charge of causing the death of the unborn child of her daughter, Lily May Lindsay, whose death is said to have resulted from a criminal operation. Late yesterday afternoon, Sandford Lindsay was committed for trial on a charge of incest. Three more charges remain to be heard. Both Sandford Lindsay and his wife will each have to answer a charge of murder, based on the death of their daughter, while in addition Sandford Lindsay will have to answer a charge of causing the death of the unborn child of his daughter. The latter charge is similar to that which was preferred against Mrs. Lindsay, and upon which she will have to stand trial.

Provincial Detective Present.

Mr. J. J. Turner, Sr., Justice of the Peace for both the city and county, occupied a position on the Magisterial dias together with County Police Magistrate O. A. Langley before whom the preliminary hearing is being conducted. There were few spectators in court when the hearing was resumed this morning. Provincial Detective Boyd occupied a chair at the Barristers' table and was in frequent communication with Crown Attorney G. W. Hutton, who conducted the hearing for the Crown. Sandford Lindsay and his wife were represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon.

Witness Recalled.

The proceedings opened with the recall of Dr. Sutton, who was asked by Crown Attorney Hutton to reply to a question that was placed on record yesterday, and which called forth an objection on the part of Mr. Gordon, who claimed that the evidence involved was inadmissable owing to the fact that Sandford Lindsay whom the reply referred to being absent at the time. While in the secondary stage of the anaesthetic, the deceased made a statement which tended to implicate her father. This Mr. Gordon contended was inadmissable as her father was absent at the time. Further he claimed that Dr. Sutton's reply should not go on the record, and also intimated that the publication of such evidence would be prejudicial to the interest of the prisoner, should the case subsequently go before a Jury.

The Reply.

The Magistrate ruled that the evidence be heard. He also stated that he had no jurisdiction over the press as regards what they should publish of the evidence heard in court. He ruled that Dr. Sutton reply to the question, subject to Mr. Gordon's objection.

"What was the statement?" enquired Crown Attorney Hutton of Dr. Sutton. "While in the secondary stage of the anaesthetic deceased said, 'Oh, papa take your hands away.'"

In response to further examination Dr. Sutton said it was a frequent occurrence for patients, while under the

PTE. SHEPPARD DESERTER FROM THE 93RD BATTALION

WARRANT FOR HIS ARREST

Pte. Angus Sheppard of A company, 93rd Battalion, is a deserter from his unit and also a fugitive under the criminal code. Sheppard, whose home is Woodstock, Ont., and who was for some time employed by the Pearson Carnival Company as a slack wire performer, joined the local battalion nearly two months ago. He was on duty for some time at the recruiting office.

Several weeks ago Sheppard was married to Mrs. Carrie Whittaw, daughter of Mrs. Bowman, Charlotte street, at whose home he was boarding. Last night Sheppard doffed his khaki uniform, dressed in civilian garb and took his departure from the house and undoubtedly from the city. With him is said to have departed a silver watch valued at $20, the property of his mother-in-law. At least Mrs. Bowman has sworn out a warrant for his arrest, charging him with the theft of the time piece.

The military authorities learned of Sheppard's action in donning civilian clothes and a picket of soldiers scoured the city and watched all trains last night without locating the fugitive.

A COMPLETE BATTALION

Mayor Buller Wires Minister of Militia Asking that Peterboro City and County be Given This Privilege

WERE FIRST TO OFFER

His Worship Mayor Buller to-day despatched a telegram to Major General Sir Sam Hughes, offering to raise a whole battalion in Peterborough city and county. This action comes as a result of a meeting of the Speakers' Patriotic League, held last evening, for the purpose of discussing the proposed changes in the recruiting scheme, whereby Lindsay will be asked to provide for a whole battalion. This means that Peterborough, instead of having two companies of approximately five hundred men, will have a whole battalion of eleven hundred.

Peterborough was the first community to present this offer to the militia department some months ago. At that time the authorities were not in a position to accept, and subsequently compromised by assigning two companies to Peterborough.

The Owners Of The Patriotic Cakes

If the holders of Tickets No. 64 and 66 will telephone their name and address to Miss Harstone, secretary of the Junior Branch Daughters of the Empire, Telephone No. 1264, they will have the decorated cakes donated by Mrs. Brown-Lewers of the Examiner Better Foods, Better Homes School, delivered to them.

A Baltimore inventor has provided a bootblack's chair intended for women's use with curtains that can be moved from the arms to prevent an undue display of hosiery.

INTERESTING TO LADIES

To-night there will be shown at the Royal Theatre one of the most interesting films ever seen here. Included in the story of a thrilling drama is incidentally shown the most modern system of cooking as recently demonstrated here. Every lady should see this picture.

Howden's Telephone 1281

A mistake occurred in printing the telephone number and store address of W. G. Howden's Meat Market. The right store address is 176 Simcoe Street, and the right telephone number is 1281. Mr. Howden has put the prices of beef down this week. See advertisement. The result has been an extra demand for his meat, and, of course, an extra number of telephone calls has been sent in, but the wrong number being given has caused inconvenience and delay to customers.

FRIDAY, NOV. 12, 1915

A WISE DECISION.

Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of War, has denied having said so many things he is said to have said in Toronto that one is a little chary in trusting to the statement he made with considerable emphasis, while recently in Toronto. But we like it so much that we feel sure that he really said it and meant it. It is the right thing, and Sir Sam wants to do the right thing. This statement is that hereafter there is to be no disabling and discouragement of battalions, by makilng drafts from them for overseas service. He declared that hereafter battalions would be sent abroad complete and without militation by drafts. This declaration coming with strong emphasis from the Minister of Militia will be welcomed by the battalions already enlisted, and by the Speakers' Patriotic League, as it will constitute a great encouragement to enlistment. The sentimental value of the influence of the spirit of comradeship is very great, and it will also have a direct value. Under previous conditions, the demoralizing effect of drafts from battalions, selecting out the best companies and officers, and leaving the battalion a mere skeleton with impaired strength both in numbers and morale, has tended to discourage recruiting. Now recruits who "dare" their comrades to enlist will know that if they do enlist, they will remain comrades and be in daily touch not only in the cantonments where they get their preliminary training till they leave for the front, but also in the grim camaraderie of the battle field, and the trenches.

LUCRE VERSUS LIFE.

Another appeal to our young men to rally to the recruiting call, consists in the new atrocity of making war upon ,and murdering helpless women and children and non-combatants, passengers of an outward bound Italian steamer. An Austrian submarine, flying the German flag and officered by the German spirit, wantonly destroyed an Italian steamer in the Mediterranean without the least excuse of military advantage. The vessel could not have been carrying munitions, for its destination was from the war zone. It was bound for New York. The outrage was the refinement upon German atrocity. Cruel guns poured sharpnel upon women and children in the lifeboats. The object was to frighten Italy; but the outrage will have as little deterrent effect upon Italy as German "frightfulness" has had upon Belgium and Britain. It will only serve to set the teeth more closely, and to fight the harder to destroy the devilish cult of destruction incarnate in German militarism. Here is a chance for the United States to reprove Germany for a breach of its promise made to modify its submarine programme. Uncle Sam might take some of the strong expressions he put into the note to Great Britain, and address them to Germany. Of course, he Ancona atrocity only destroyed women and children; while the crime of Britain was interference with trade—the destruction of dollars—interfering according to international law with United States shipping profits. Money is so much more worth making a row over than mere humanity.

A RED TAPE WRONG.

While the German Government is by its "frightfulness" providing an incentive to recruiting, our own government or government authorities, is providing a discouragement to recruiting, if the statements are true regarding the neglect (accidental it it is hoped) of returned soldiers, who have done their bit and got their hit on the fighting lines. It is stated, and there does not seem to be any error in the statement, that returned soldiers instead of being allowed full pay until health is restored, have been discharged and all pay and medical attendance cut off. It appears that this is merely a red-tape blunder; for a militia order is still in force, though its existence has only recently been revealed, allowing returned soldiers full pay, the wife's (in case there is a wife) separation allowance and all other allowances till medical treatment is over. The summary and unwarranted discharge of returned soldiers also results in the withdrawal of the amounts paid by Patriotic Associations. Thus, instead of the returned soldier, who has been disabled from work, being rewarded by a grateful country in whose service he met his disability, is cast adrift, through official neglect, the consequence being that returned soldiers have suffered more, perhaps, at home than they did on active service.

Of course this is wrong, and the only mitigating feature is that it is due to neglect rather than intention. There is something radically wrong when an order of the Militia Department, that provides for the care of soldiers till their medical treatment is over, and they are in a condition to earn their living, is ignored and its existence unknown till a day or two ago. We have so much red tape that tangles are bound to ensue. Sir Sam certainly has his hands full, but his work would be less, and his administration more effective, if the most of the red-tape of the department were "cut out." He might well take a leaf out of the book of General Gallieni, the new French Minister of War, who has begun the administration of his department by declaring war on routine or red tape. He will discharge all incompetents and business methods—not political methods—will be applied to his department, which is to be reformed in as radical a manner as that which General Joffre applied to the army. Only enough formality routine and red tape should be retained in our Militia Department to protect the government; and not enough to permit of repetition in some other form of the blunder that has resulted in so much injustice and hardships to returned soldiers. They have in many cases been turned adrift and destitute in face of an express militia order which if it had been carried out, would have provided for just, and even generous treatment of soldiers who, by virtue of doing their duty have come hime, wounded to disability or broken in health. Mistakes like this are deplorable, and give a false idea of the gratitude the government and the country are prepared to show the soldiers, who sacrifice so much in the cause of Canada and the Empire.

Despatches to-day state that steps have been taken to remedy such conditions and prevent the recurrence of similar regrettable neglect.

"TRY ON" UNIFORMS.

Kingston has a proposal to increase the poll tax on young men who do not enlist. First ady the effect of uniforms for those who do.—The Globe.

GERMANY'S DESPERATE BLUFF.

The German Press Bureau is sending out some despairing bluff these days. Here are some of the items: "Waiting for the British Navy to Come Out," "Italy Eues for Peace," "Paris in a Week," "Moscow as Good as Captured," "England Deserts the Allies," "France Will Make a Separate Peace," "Russian Diplomats Seek Kaiser's Friendship," and so on. Coincident with all these grand victories for Germany comes the news of repeated attempt to patch up an inconclusive peace. Evilently the war lords of Germany see the handwriting on the wall at last.—Montreal Herald.

WAKE UP, WASHINGTON!"

The Ancona infamy is but one in the grand scheme Germany assumes but this Government can be kept asleep. Why, not: The Lusitania is forgotten and filed away in Mr. Lansing's pigeonholes. And yet a doubt arises. True, the Zealandia which is suspected of having on board the German officers who broke parole at Norfolk, was not searched by the United States navy, which should long ago have been after the suspected ship. True, the Lusitania is forgotten, and equally true that Captain Boy-Ed and Captain Von Papen still insult this country with their presence. But the Government shall be given the benefit of the doubt. Something may happen to wake it up yet.

But one thing is certain the tide of popular wrath is rising surely, higher and higher with each unspeakable outrage that must be laid at the doors of the Teutonic allies They are equally blood-guilty, and there is surely a limit if not to official, to public patience.—New York Herald.

AN INTEMPERATE ADVOCATE.

It is the opinion of the Toronto News that British papers which assail the Asquith Government, however vicariously, are doing a patriotic duty, while Canadian papers which criticize the Borden Government have almost rivalled the Father and in their abuse of Canadian Ministers." The News ought to consult an oculist for a bad case of distorted vision. The general opinion is that the Borden Government is getting off very easily, while the present Asquith Government and its predecessor — the coalition Government and the Liberal Government—have been subjected to persistent and malignant attacks by the Northcliffe press.

If it is patriotic to assail the British Government and to spread distrust and despondency through the United Kingdom, we see no reason why the Borden Government should be exempt from fair, moderate, and constructive criticism. We have no desire to assail it as the News' friends assail the Asquith Government, but we do not regard it as infallible. It needs the kind of criticism which is not discouraging but stimulating.

The Borden Government is not being subjected to the kind of attack which is intended to break up a Government. There is no demand for a general election, except from some of the Government's friends. There is no desire on the part of the Liberals to enter a coalition. All the Government is asked to do is to strengthen itself by taking counsel with business men, and to use the organizing and executive ability which is at its service. The News would do much better service to the Government if it would frankly admit faults and seek to have them amended, instead of treating the Ministers as an assembly of the gods, to whom only prayers and incense must be offered.—Toronto Star.

Those who object to the abolition of the bar as proposed by temperance reformers, because they think and call it "sumptuary" legislation, have now a good chance to learn practically the meaning of the adjective "sumptuary." The suggested restriction of imports of food products for the purpose of enforcing a reduction of the cost of living in Great Britain is a good illustration of the correct application of the term. The abolition of social drinking places in Ontario is a matter of police regulation, not of sumptuary legislation. The English word is derived from the Latin "sumptus," meaning expense.

THE MINISTER OF MONEY AND THE COMING WAR TAXES

In his recent speech in Montreal the Minister of Finance dismissed Canada's share of the war expenditure with a wave of the hand. He remarked:

With an increased production of one, two, or three hundred million dollars a year, any business man can figure out the ability of the country to support an additional ten or twenty million dollars a year in interest and still prosper with ever increasing prosperity.

Let us see exactly what this means. Mr. White is apparently figuring on a war interest of at least $15,000,000 per annum. That is at the rate of $2 per annum for every man, woman and child in the country. If this amount is raised by direct taxation, it would appear not to be so burdensome after all. But if Mr. White proposes to raise it after the manner of his last budget, not only will the Government tax the people for this amount, but it will at the same time confer on protected interests the privilege of also taxing the people.

How this already works out has been shown by the Ottawa Citizen. Our contemporary says that the customs duties at present imposed raise from the people $15 per head per annum. The protection that this affords enables domestic manufacturers to raise the price of their goods by an amount equal to the taxes. As we consume in this country at least twice as much domestic merchandise as we import, the imposition of a protective Customs tax at the rate of $15 per head means that the protected interests are enabled to impose on the people an additional tax of their own of at least $30 per head for their own profit.

This annual tribute of $45 per head, being levied in an indirect manner, has contributed largely to the increased cost of living. People do not realize that every family of five is taxed thus to the amount of $225 per annum. The prospect of an additional war tax of $2 per head does not seem heavy by comparison. But if it is raised by augmenting the tariff, it will mean an additional tribute of $4 per head for the benefit of the "interests." That will be a total of $6 per head, or $30 per family of five; or, with the $225 already imposed, a grand total of $255 per annum. Put another way, it means that out of the income of the family of five an average of $5 per week will be taken by the Customs and the interests as regularly as pay day comes round.

These figures throw a light on the problem of the cost of living in Canada, and serve to show why the Liberal party so strenuously objected to the Borden Government taking advantage of the war situation to impose an all-round increase in the protective tariff of seven and a half per cent., with a five per cent. increase on goods from the Old Country which had the benefit of a preferential tariff.—Montreal-Herald Telegraph.

DO NOT RAISE DISCORDANT RACIAL NOTES

Special to the Examiner.

WINDSOR, Nov. 11.—An appeal to all anadians, to men of British origin and men of French origin, to join the colours in the defence of their homes and liberties and the preservation of freedom and justice throughout the world, was the feature of Mr N. W. Rowell's speech at an enthusiastic recruiting meeting held here tonight.

"The County of Essex," said Mr Rowell, "in undertaking to raise a County Batalion, voices, I am sure the united sentiment of its citizens both of French and British origin and their united determination to contribute to the measure of their ability to the success of the allied cause.

"One cannot but regret that at this critical time, when, if ever, we need a united Canadian people to face a grave crisis which will tax our energies to their utmost, one hears a few discordant notes; on the other hand, statements which belittle the courage and patriotism of the French-Canadian people and the part they are taking in this great struggle, and on the other hand, statements which would discourage any participation on our part in this struggle. Neither view represents the sentiment of the Canadian people.

"The first Canadian blood shed on the soil of Belgium in the cause of freedom, was that of a French-Canadian—the Hon. Dr. Beland, formerly Postmaster-General of Canada — who was wounded in the defence of Antwerp. Our gallant Canadian sons, of both British and French origin, have on the plains of Europe, fighting in a common cause, sealed with their blood the covenant which should bind together the two great races in Canada. The upion of Great Britain and France in a common cause—the cause of liberty, justice and humanity; the union of our sons in fighting for a common cause on the plains of Europe, is the guarantee that in this struggle, no matter what agitators may say on the one side or the other the common-sense, courage and patriotism of the people of Canada will demand and will secure united, harmonious and effective action from all classes of Canadian citizens."

"In the City of Quebec," declared Mr. Rowell, in conclusion, "a common granite shaft has been erected to the memory of those two brave generous and gallant soldiers, Wolfe and Montcalm. Both died loyally, fighting for their country. One has added lustre and honour to the arms of Britain; the other, to the arms of France. Both have added lustre and honour to the history of our common country. Let that monument be a symbol of the unity which should exist between the people of this country in this great struggle."

HOW LORD DERBY GETS RECRUITING RESULTS

Much has been said in the despatches of Lord Derby's recruiting campaign, but the details of the method adopted have not been disclosed. These, however, are set forth minutely in the London Times, as follows:

Every existing recruiting body will be made use of in the scheme, which will be carried out by the aid of the National Register.

Everybody who recognizes that the State has a right to call on his services should enlist, and those found to be fit will be attested there and then.

Those who wish to join the colours at once will be allowed to do so; the rest will go on with their usual vocations and will be subject to be called up only when required.

Men who have enlisted will be divided into 46 groups, the unmarried men in the first 23 groups according to age and the married also in 23 groups according to age, and beginning when the unmarried groups are exhausted.

These men will be called out in successive groups as required, a fortnight's notice being given to each before he joins. Appeals may be made to be put in a later group; men thus allowed on leave will draw no military pay.

If every man liable to be called on will join, it is hoped that it will be many months before the older married men are called on at all; it may even be that the war will be decided before it is necessary.

Pay and allowance at the rate of 3s. a day will be granted to men who are prepared to join at once, but are allowed to go to their homes after being attested. They will be subject to 24 hours' notice before being called up.

"Starred" men who enlist will be attested to be called on if wanted, but will be sent back at once to their employment. Unstarred men found to be indispensable to their employments may also be sent back.

It may be found that even in "starred" trades there are portions in which men can be liberated from their employment.

All men will be enlisted for general service and no promise can be made to allot them to any particular branch. Preference for the Army Service Corps and the Royal Army Medical Corps will be given to married men.

DESTROYS MRS. DURAND'S PRIZE HERD OF CATTLE

Chicago Sheriff Holds Her and Her Servants Prisoners While He Kills Animals Worth $60,000.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10.—A $60,000 herd of prize Guernsey cattle belonging to Mrs. Scott Durand of Lake Forest and condemned to death because of foot and mouth infection, was slaughtered this afternoon under rather sensational circumstances. Sheriff Griffin of Lake County, armed with an order from Governor Dunne, locked Mrs. Durand and her servanes in the pretentious farmhouse and read the order to her. Mrs. Durand protested that the cattle were protected by an injunction, but the Sheriff carried out his orders.

The hoof and mouth disease struck the farm last Summer and it was by means of an injunction at that time that the cattle were saved from execution. More than a thousand similar cases are awaiting jury trials.

According to Mrs. Durand the Sheriff and his men held her and her servants prisoners in the farmhouse at the point of rifles and shotguns.

"They even fired at me when I tried to approach the barn," Mrs. Durand said in an interview later.

"It is the most anarchistic act I ever heard of," continued Mrs. Durand. "They even denied me the right to send for a veterinary surgeon to see that the animals were dispatched in a merciful manner."

The Durand herd was one of the most valuable in the State, and annually was represented with prize winners at the national dairy show.

EDITH CAVELL

"No! Not a bandage to shut out the light, I'll see God's blessed sunshine to the last."
So went she forth where guns shone steely bright,
Without a tremor; fear of death was past,
So went she forth; flag-decked, this martyred nurse,
To Britain's blessing turning German curse.

And he, whom pleas for mercy could not move,
He ne'er was fed from human mother's breast.
'Twas some fierce Prussian wolf bereft of love
That nourished him at pride and hate's behest.
Go! sons of British mothers, far and near,
Go! face the foe she faced without a fear.

Oh, English sister with the heart of gold,
We listen to the praises sung of thee,
And each in turn seems only to unfold
A brighter picture of thy bravery.
We see thee meet thy fate with clear, calm eye,
For Britain's cause thou didst not fear to die.

With but a taste of heaven's own peace and joy
Be satisfied, and tarry near us still
For earth has need, and love may well employ
Try wondrous courage and unfettered skill.
Keep near us still in some bright form, that so
Our faith and courage like to thine may glow.

We reach to thee our eager, yearning hands,
To touch, if may be, thy great human soul;
For where the angel of sweet mercy stands
Is thy true place; and if our prayers control
The minstrels of angels here on earth,
In other souls they soul shall have new birth.

Thou shalt live on in many a human life,
And multiply they life a thousandfold,
And haste the day-dawn when all hate and strife
Shall cease to curse with misery untold;
For thou most grandly played the hero's part—
A brave, true woman, after God's own heart.

—Camilla Sanderson (formerly of Peterborough).

Long-Headed.

Senator Lodge was talking in Boston about certain investigating committees.

"They are like the brook," he said; "they flow on forever. Some of them, in fact, remind me strongly of Si Hoskins.

"Si Hoskins got a job last spring at shooting muskrats, for muskrats overran the millowner's dam.

"There, in the lovely spring weather, Si sat on the grass-y bank, his gun on his knee; and, finding him thus one morning, I said:

"'What are you doing, Si?'

"'I'm paid to shoot the muskrats, sir,' he answered. 'They're undermin' the dam.'

"There goes one now,' said I. Shoot, man! Why don't you shoot?'

"Si puffed a tranquil cloud from his pipe and said:

"'Do you think I want to lose my job?'"—Exchange.

"It seems a pity, my dear Miss Gotham, that you New York society women dont' give up more of your time to raising money for the war sufferers."

"My dear Marjorie, how can you say such a thing? Haven't I sat up until 2 o'clock for three nights now playing charity bridge?"—Life.

Rochester Post's Comment On Latest U. S. Note to Britain

Our latest note to Great Britain, advertised in advance as a vigorous document, denounces as indefensible and illegal the blockade established by the order in council in March last and declares that the United States cannot submit to such a curtailment of its rights. "This country now unhesitatingly assumes," so the notes asserts, "the task of championing the integrity of neutral rights against the lawless conduct of belligerents."

If we now assume this task unhesitatingly, as our state department declares, it is a radical and momentous departure from our course hitherto. We did not champion the integrity of Belgium, nor have we effectively championed against lawless submarine warfare either the lives or the property of our own citizens. The facts are that the von Tirpitz plan of under sea war was not abandoned in deference to any protests of ours. Only when it proved to be impracticable and to cost more than it was worth was it discontinued; and the destruction of the Lusitania when over one hundred American lives were lost has never been disavowed nor has any offer of reparation been made.

The British blockade was established as a retaliatory measure. It was Great Britain's effective answer to submarine was methods which respected no neutral lives or rights. It works some hardships upon our shippers, vessels having been detained for examination and contraband cargoes being referred to a British prize court. But the injury done us is so trivial compared with that of which we complained so long and unavailingly that it seems, under all the circumstances, as though any excessive vigour of denunciation was uncalled for. The note puts us in something the position of a man bluffed by a bully who seeks to save his face by brow-beating somebody else.

LYRICS OF BURGLARY.

He'd carried the swag for ten miles and a half,
But bitter, thrice bitter indeed was the fruit—
Instead of pure silver 'twas pewtery chaff,
And he moaned with a sort of hysterical laugh,
"I see what they mean by a rift in the loot!"

The fine suit of armour that stood by the door
Was a good place, he thought, to conceal him from sight;
When he tried to get out, though he struggled and swore,
He stuck, and the whole thing crashed down to the floor—
Said the watchman, "Hello! Here's a thief in the knight!"

Nothing Stops This Man

The man with vigorous, virile health and a clear mind, who brushes away obstacles, and rejoices in overcoming difficulties, is bound to succeed. His is the joy. ous outlook on life.

Physical and mental conditions like these come largely through proper eating—"Food makes the man."

Now it is a fact—attested by food experts—that the modern dietary is woefully laking in the very elements that put success into a man. They are the mineral salts —Phosphate of Potash, etc. White bread is almost lacking in them. But there is one food that richly supplies these vital elements, and that food is

Grape-Nuts

Made from whole wheat and barley, Grape-Nuts contains all the nutriment of the grain, including the valuable mineral salts. It is easily digested, is concentrated and has delicious taste. A daily ration of Grape-Nuts along with other food helps build vigorous bodies and keen brains.

WHAT WILL THE UNITED STATES DO ABOUT IT?

(From the New York Tribune.)

The technical side of our dispute with Great Britain will be settled by arbitration. This is inevitable because between the country and our own there exists a treaty making such disposition compulsory in all matters of difference whatsoever. As American citizens, then, we are quite in the position of a client who accepts with confidence the statement of his case by his counsel. For us all the note to Great Britain is our belief, which will naturally be adopted as correct and just.

But the main question does not arise on technical points or ultimate arbitration. What is essential to know at once is what steps, if any, the administration means to take to impose its views upon Great Britain in all future cases. In other words, does Mr. Wilson mean to pause, having stated his case, and leave all past and future incidents to arbitration, or does he mean to go outside of arbitration hereafter when British acts infringe on American rights?

What is in everybody's mind, of course, is the question: Will Mr. Wilson favorea resort to an embargo to coerce the British government into following the American interpretation of international law in future dealing with American interests? This is a question that no one, probably not even Mr. Wilson, can answer at the present time.

To fall back upon the Lusitania case, apologists for Mr. Wilson's course in this explain that he was prepared to take action had the country indicated a desire for action. But these apologists insist that Mr. Wilson, satisfied that the country did not want action, relapsed into a policy of "watchful waiting" until the Arabic incident provoked a demand for a more vigorous course.

In other words, our message to Great Britain will be translated into action precisely as the American people in the next few weeks show their desire for action or acquiescence. This is exactly what one must expect of a foreign policy which is sheerly opportunistic, which amounts to taking a popular referendum on each question that arises. Mr. Wilson is now waiting to see if the American people will be satisfied with words or will demand action.

Such a policy carries its own perils, as the German affair has shown. It is, in fact, no policy, but a mere game of setting your sails to the prevailing wind. Thus a terrific outburst of German sympathizers, carefully manufactured and arranged, mighty conceivably hurry the administration into a course repugnant to the majority of Americans.

Yet even an embargo is not a simple solution of our difficulties. It is easy to prevent the export of munitions of war to Great Britain if the British decline to follow our wishes or respect our rights. But shall we extend the embargo to all England's allies, to France, to Russia, to Italy, to Japan? And if we do not, what effect can the embargo have for what was intended for Great Britain can be shipped to France without doing England any material harm. On the other hand, if we put an embargo on the export of munitions to England and her allies, we invite reprisals from most of the non-blockaded nations of the globe and practically destroy our markets outside of South America.

More we cannot do in any event, because our treaty prevents our making war upon Great Britain. Why, then, should Great Britain pay attention to our warnings? Here is the real vice of our present foreign policy. On July 21 we sent a note to Germany asking a disavowal of the Lusitania massacre. So far, no reply has come. To judge from present indications, not the smallest intention exists in Washington now to insist upon German disavowal. If we can give Germany three months in which to disavow murder, how long shall we allow Great Britain to disavow larceny for which she is willing to make restitution after arbitration?

There is no disposition to justify the British offending Great Britain is now violating international law, under which we would live, because she desires to strike Germany. Not only Germany, but the United States suffers. For this there is no defense, no excuse, no explanation but the German "law of necessity."

On the other hand, when Germany followed the same course we did nothing but write notes, and Germany was able to carry on her illegal operations until the British mastered the German submarine campaign, and put an end to it. Our dispute with Germany, in fact, was settled, not by American diplomacy, but British naval power. Mr Wilson's "victory" was won in British waters by British sailors.

Now, the situation in the case of Great Britain is wholly different. Her blocade legal or illegal, and we believe it to be illegal, is growing more and more fatal to German hopes. Every dispatch from Berlin testifies to the suffering or inconvenience incident to failing food supply. If Germany has mastered British sea power as Britain mastered the German submarine campaign, Great Britain could afford to follow the German example and present Mr. Wilson with another great diplomatic "triumph." But the fact is quite the opposite.

We Americans must make up our minds, that, law or no law, Great Britain will not now relax her grip on the German throat. Rightly or wrongly, she believes that Germany is approaching exhaustion. She believes that a few more months of blockade will win the war. Not even the inconvenience of the embargo would overweigh the advantage of the blockade. We must face the fact that Great Britain intends to go on her course, illegal and immoral as it seems to us.

In this situation we can't fight Great Britain, even if we wanted to fight her, without reducing one more treaty to the estate of a "scrap of paper." We can't make the embargo effective without practically breaking off all friendly relations not alone with Great Britain and her colonies, but with most of the nations whose ports are open to seaborne traffic. In a word Mr. Bryan's peace treaty has tied us hands and foot, however anxious we might be to act as well as pose as the champion of neutral rights and the freedom of the seas.

The thing that we would not do in the case of Germany when life, not property, was at stake, and no arbitration treaty held us back, we can hardly do now in the case of Great Britain. We have not obtained the disavowal of the murder of our citizens. We did not persuade Germany to stop murdering them. The cessation was solely incident to the British success in abolishing the submarine from the North Sea and the Channel.

Our note to Great Britain is good law and good sense. It is firm, where we are justified in speaking firmly, but it is just one more case of words, because we have deliberately elected to employ only words in our foreign disagreements, and in the case of Great Britain signed a treaty compelling us to go no further. England may seize our ships, restrict our lawful trade, do whatsoever she chooses to hinder our business, and our only redress is arbitration in the distant future, with the promise of some repayment to the grandchildren of the losers.

Mr. Wilson's present communication is one more document worthy of note in any court of law and deserving the attention of British jurist and international arbitrators. But it won't persuade the British to let our commerce alone, because it is backed by no force and can be backed by no force. Even an embargo ordered in January, 1916 would be relatively harmless to the British, whose own industries will be mobilized for munition manufacture by that time.

In the existing situation we are helpless and have accepted the helpless role without protest. We have not only declared ourselves "too proud to fight" in the case of our dead, murdered by Germany, but we have bound ourselves over to keep the peace, at our own expense, with the British. If England thinks the blockade worth the price of an embargo, we have no recourse save at law. It would be noble of the British to meet our wishes at the risk of losing the war, but such nobility is not to be expected. Otherwise the worst we can do is to abuse the British by word, and the best to hold our tongues and endure the consequences of our own pacifist folly expressed in Heaven only knows how many Bryanis treaties.

INTERESTING ESCORT.

At a dinner and theatre party recently given in Washington a beautiful debutante was frightened beyond measure because Senator Blank had been selected for her escort. The poor girl was almost in tears from nervousness.

"But, mother," she protested, "whatever can I talk to him about?"

The mother smiled. "You'll like him, dear; everyone does."

It was late that night when the debutante came running into her mother's boudoir, a happy flush on her young cheek. "I've had a perfectly dandy time," she announced. "and I think the senator's fine. He isn't at all like I expected him to be. Why, we hadn't gone two blocks before we were talking about fleas in Italian hotels!"—Everybody's Magazine.

VILNA IS HAUNTED BY FEAR OF FAMINE

EAGER FOR WAR NEWS

Times Correspondent Besieged with Questions as to the Fighting on Other Fronts.

VILNA, Oct. 2.(By Courier to Berlin.)—Every captured city has a war psychology of its own, and one of the most peculiarly interesting is to be studied in Vilna. There is no evidence that a rejoicing population is hailing the Germans as liberators; but, on the other hand, the populace doesn't seem to be pining for the Russians to come back. In talking with the natives you quickly discover that many of them have one thought in common—the haunting fear of famine. Their instinct of self-preservation seems to tell them that food stocks are fast dwindling.

Every storekeeper with whom I talked, as soon as he discovered that I was an American,. immediately brought up this biggest question of the day—for them. With a note of anxiety he would ask me whether American wheat would come here, or if not, where the necessaries of life could come from to keep them from hunger this Winter. Their fears seemed not entirely unjustified. When two armies—Russian and German—pass in close sequence through a city, the effect is much as of an invasion of an army of locusts, except that these field-gray locusts pay cash. The run on the grocery stores reminded you of the run on a bank in panicky times, and food stocks seemed literally to melt away while you waited. You saw whole rows of empty shelves, and other shelves with three or four cans of vegetables, canned meats, etc., which would be gone when you dropped in again next morning.

The alarm of these natives is exaggerated and intensified by their feeling of utter helplessness; for when the Russians dynamited the tunnel at Vilna, the railway bridge over the Vilna, and wrecked long stretches of railway track, the city was completely cut off from rail communication with the outside world; and while the battle line ahead prevents the merchants from getting fresh supplies from Russian sources, they are just as physically unable to get anything from Germany or Poland, even assuming that these had large food supplies to spare and were willing to part with them. The situation here is not so favorable as that of Belgium was, which was easily and quickly accessible to help from the outside world.

Should existing stocks give out before breadstuffs and other food supplies can be got here, the peculiar irony will be that the people here have the money to pay for them. Merchants and storekepers made big profits and did an immense business while the Russian Army was based here, and now that Vilna is the base of a German army they are doing an equally big business and making even larger profits. They are in fact proving their benevolent cash neutrality toward the Germans by increasing prices anywhere from 200 to 1,000 per cent on such wares as the soldiers are eager to buy when after months afield they reach the basis of a large city. As their stocks dwindle the canny storekeepers raise their prices accordingly, and generally manage to make a profit on the exchange, for, while officially the value of the Russian ruble has been fixed here at 1.60 marks, the natives are not averse to taking 2 marks or more from soldiers who aren't mathematicians or experts in foreign exchange.

Natives Eager for News.

The psychology of the Vilnaites is further conditioned by the dearth of news. With no newspapers to read, they are dependent on posters pasted on public buildings and billboards giving the German official reports in German Polish, Lithuanian, and Yiddish, which do not, however, quite satisfy the native thirst for news. Next to questions about possible sources of food, an American is oftenest asked for news from the outer world. "Has Riga fallen?" "Have the Dardanelles fallen?" "How is it in Warsaw?" and "Are the stores in Kovno open?" were some of the questions asked me; also more intimate questions about the positions of the Russian armies; the possibility of their coming back soon, or later, or never.

Their appetite for news is whetted by the daily signs and sounds around them. It is 7 A.M. A German brass band swings around the corner into one of the narrow main streets. The natives line up along both sidewalks to see the passing show. The band is followed by war-worn infantry—a field-gray column that chokes the narrow street as far as the eye can see. It takes an hour to pass a given point. Artillery rumbles incessantly through the streets. Squadrons of galloping Uhlans with fluttering pennants enliven the moving picture. Long columns of Russian prisoners add a sinster touch. They come by in detachments of a thousand or two. Then there are interminable columns of absurd miniature native farm wagons, loaded with the wounded bedded on straw—Russians and Germans. When the traffic is blocked, which is often, the Vilnaites cluster thick as flies around these wagons and stare silently at them. And all day and all night you hear the rumble of columns going both ways—ammunition columns, provision columns. There is never an intermission in their passing.

You roam around town, but nowhere can you, even for a minute, get away from reminders of war. You take refuge in a little park whose principal ornamental features is a handsome red granite pedestal. You painfully spell on the gilded Russian letters, and discover that it is a statue of Catherine the Great. But where is Catherine? Out of sight—nothing left but the pedestal. The retreating Russians kidnapped Catherine and carried her off; not probably so much because of the sentimental interest attaching to the amorous Empress, but because of the undeniable military value of her bronze bulk. Apparently the Russians feared the Germans would throw Catherine into the melting pot and convert her into ammunition. This theory seemed to be supported by the fact that I saw pedestals on which other statues of Russian worthies, Generals and what not, had once stood until removed by the Russians.

You stroll through the extensive park, intent on dodging the war, your objective the high hill crested wih thet crumbling ruins of an ancient church from which, according to the guide books, a magnificient view of Vilna is to be had. At the foot of this hill is a rather modest two-storied white house which had some special interest because it is the luckless General Rennenkampf's villa. This you decide to visit, but German sentinels with fixed bayonets are on guard at the front and back doors. The Germans are not taking any chances of having it said of them that they plundered the General's villa, so they guard the place day and night, and nobody gets by. There is no peace, either, among the ruins perched on top of the hill, for the roar of German ammunition columns rolling incessantly over the cobbled streets swells up to you. Yet here, in a shaded nook, you see a sallow-faced, long-haired idealist reading Polish poetry aloud to a pretty girl of about 15, both unconcerned about war—proving that it can be done, after all.

Everybody Wants a Bath.

You seek the seclusion of a bath, because this is one of the things to do in Vilna. Bathrooms being apparently an unknown luxury in the houses of Vilna, there are to fill the natural want, a dozen big public establishments, and about the first thing an officer returning from the dirt of the front does is to head for one of these. Signs in the streets point the way to the nearest. You head for the Diana Bath in Soldaski Street, and here you get the impression that you are going to a public function. Little droschkes keep rolling up to the main entrance discharging soldiers and officers and then rolling away with the cargoes of the washed.

You notice that in other ways a few weeks or months at the fighting front in Russia develops a passion for water. It seems as if von Eickhorn's army was obsessed with an intense desire for climbing aboard the water wagon, for it is almost an impossibility to buy a bottle of mineral water in town, such is the demand. Nobody in his senses would of course take a chance with ordinary water because of the cholera danger; so here one experiences the novelty of say, brushing one's teeth with mineral water or beer.

At 9 o'clock P.M. a bugler blows "taps" outside the Kommandantur, but it seems to have little effect, for Vilna never goes to sleep.

Arranged Different.

A man was brought before a police court charged with abusing his team and using loud ant profane language on the street. One of the witnesses was a pious old darkey, who was subhitted to a short cross-examination.

"Did the defendant use improper language while he was beating his horses?" asked the lawyer.

"Well, he talk mighty loud suh."

"Did he indulge in profanity?"

The witness seemed puzzled. The lawyer put the question in another form:

"What I mean, Uncle Aus, is—did he use words that would be improper for your minister to use in a sermon?"

"Oh, yes suh, yes suh," the old man replied with a grin that revealed the full width of his immense mouth; "but dey'd have to be 'ranged diffrunt"—Everybody's.

COOKERY COURSE CLOSES

Mrs. Brown-Lewers Made Friends Here

HAS MANY INVITATIONS TO RETURN

Many converts were made to the cause of better homes by the course which has been so ably conducted in Conservatory of Music, by Mrs. Mary Brown-Lewers under the auspices of the Examiner. Mrs. Brown-Lewers' work ended today, much to the regret of the women who have been attending her classes every afternoon. The popularity of this Better Foods, Better Homes school has increased from day to day, the attendance growing in numbers and enthusiasm at every session.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers proved herself as good a cook as she is a cooker, teacher and a Better Foods, Better Homes lecturer. So enthusiastic is she in regard to good cooking that she enthuses all who hear her along this line. Peterborough women who like to cook have been deeply interested in her course, learning much from her in regard to their favourite art and regret that it was not possible for her to remain in the city longer. Many of the best cooks of the city approved of her practical methods and were pleased with the foods prepared from day to day. Not content with pointing out woman's culinary mistakes, this inspiring and helpful teacher spent much time in suggesting workable means by which these mistakes may be corrected.

The nutritive value of each food prepared was fully explained and the housewives in attendance were deeply grateful for the information given as to which foods were best for their families and how they may be most easily and economically prepared.

Mrs. Brown-Lewers has won many friends here both for herself and her Better Foods, Better Homes course and has received many invitations to return to Peterborough at the earliest opportunity.

MIRACLES DONE BY RED CROSS

If you are inclined to believe that the age of miracles is passed and wish visible evidence of Red Cross thaumaturgy, you have only to look at our returned soldiers who are now coming home in steadily increasing numbers. Nearly every returned soldier is a Red Cross miracle, for in the majority of cases a soldier is invalided home only when he is physically incapacitated for further service. You may think that some of them are sadly crippled and mutilated, but if you could compare their condition to-day with their condition when they were first placed in the hands of surgeon and nurse, you would be able to estimate what the Red Cross has done in the way of patching up and healing shattered bodies.

In Canada, however, you can not see the greatest miracles of the Red Cross and Army Service Corps—the men who have been made sound and whole, and as good as new again, and once more back in the trenches making one life do double service. Indeed is it not a miracle that one man having only one life to give should be able to give that life twice and even three times over—thanks to the Red Cross.

Think what the Red Cross has saved in that most precious of all commodities—human life—and be certain when next you put your name on a Red Cross subscription list that you have made a very profitable investment to say nothing of performing a humane and patriotic act.

A NEW IDEA FOR THE RED CROSS FUNDS

In this the sixteenth month of the war it would seem an impossibility to think of any new way by which to add to the Red Cross funds. Picnics have been held, concerts given, fortunes told, tags sold, innumerable other money-making devices put into practical execution so that the ingenuity of Canadians has been put into severest of tests. It has remained for Mr. Henry Pearce of Victoria to suggest an original idea. Mr. Pearce, in delivering a recent Red Cross speech stated that many thousands of people possess many superfluous articles of convertible monetary value, such as pictures, jewellery, furniture, china, curios, books, glassware, which they would be pleased to donate to the Red Cross. His suggestion is that the Red Cross everywhere hold a series of "Superfluity Sales" which, if run on proper business lines with some popular effects of auctioneering, would bring large sums of money into the Red Cross coffers.

This seems on the face of it an excellent idea. It would turn property which no one would grudge, into wealth which the Red Cross could use. The contributors would assist the Red Cross without cost to themselves and the buyers would secure bargains. It is certain indeed that the Canadian Red Cross with its steadily increasing responsibilities, can make good use of any increased revenue.

200,000 Russians In Balkans Would Bring In Roumania

LONDON, Friday, Nov. 12. — The Times' Balkan correspondent, telegraphing from Bucharest, expresses the opinion that if Russia could send into the Serbian campaign a force of 200,000 men while the French and British troops are landing on the Aegean coast, the hesitation which prevails in certain quarters in Roumania would be dissipated and both Roumania and Greece would throw in their lots with the Entente allies.

"In this event," says the correspondent, "Roumania could fall on Bulgaria in the rear with 200,000 men and simultaneously attack the German front with 400,000 men. Roumania feels safe in the Carpathian passes, which she regards as impregnable. The scene of action in such a case would probably be Eastern Bulgaria or Thrace, where Field Marshal von Der Goltz's army is assembled, but lacks munitions."

The distance of the Entente allies' naval base from the scene of the hostilities in Serbia, and the necessity for guarding the long line of communications in a difficult country and in the face of a hostile population are regarded by the correspondent as rendering a northward march from Saloniea inadvisable. The concentration of forces farther east is held by the correspondent to be imposed by military conditions.

RESCUE FIGHTING MEN FIRST

HEROIC NURSING SISTERS.

When Transport Was Attacked Women in Charge Stood Aside and ten of Them Perished.

LONDON, Nov. 11—The Morning Post says: "A correspondent sends us a story told by the captain of a French cruiser which well illustrates the important part being played by many noble women in the war. The captain says his vessel was instrumental in saving a number of lives when a British transport was torpedoed some time ago in the Aegean Sea. On board were thirty six nursing sisters, of whom a number were drowned. When the French boats came on the scene the nurses called out with one accord "Fighting men first." Such an instance of devotion to the flag surely deserves to live in British history."

Were From New Zealand.

A casualty list issued last night shows that ten women nurses of the New Zealand nursing service were lost when the transport Marquette was torpedoed and sunk in the Aegean Sea last month. Nearly 100 of the personnel of the Marquette, in all, were unaccounted for, the Admiralty stated, when the sinking of the transport was announced on Oct. 26. The Morning Post's story quoted above evidently deals with the sinking of this vessel.

INTEREST RATE WILL BE RAISED

On Debentures to be Issued by the Peterboro Utilities Commission

A meeting of the Peterborough Utilities Commission was held yesterday and after some discussion it was decided to ask the City Council to increase the rate of interest from five to five and a half per cent. on the debentures to be issued in accordance with the authority secured some months ago from the Provincial Legislature. At that time the Commission was authorized to raise a maximum of seventy thousand dollars. The abnormal condition of the money market has made it difficult to raise money on a five per cent. interest basis.

The Commission also decided to pay the De Laval Dairy Supply Company one half of their amount respecting the auxiliary pumping unit purchased from the company.

ALLIES CAKE AND CANDY SALE

Interesting Event Arranged For Knox Church To-night

The latest organization to step out for Red Cross Funds is the Bible class of young women presided over by Mrs. Andrew McKenzie, in Knox church.

For the past two or three weeks they have been making preparations for an "Allies Cake and Candy Sale." The result of these efforts will be seen in the Lecture Hall of the church tonight, when a splendid decorative display has been arranged by the A.S.K. Bible class and the ladies.

The various stalls of the Allied nations have been portrayed to good effect, and as far as possible dainties for the respective nations will be sold by a bevy of saleslades from the class.

A musical programme is being furnished by the band of the 93rd Battalion and others—the whole display making up an interesting evening's enjoyment. The admission is free.

MEETING HELD IN WARKWORTH

Community will Endeavour to Raise $10,000 For Patriotic and Red Cross Purposes

A meeting in aid of the Patriotic Fund and Red Cross Society was held in Warkworth on Wednesday evening. His Honour Judge Huycke of Peterborough was one of the speakers. The meeting was largely attended. An effort will be made to raise at least ten thousand dollars for patriotic and Red Cross purposes.

From present indications, it is believed a good representation of recruits will be secured from Warkworth and the surrounding vicinity.

RECORD RUN FOR THE BIRTH OF A NATION

NEW YORK, Nov. 1 D. W. Griffith's masterpiece, The Birth of a Nation, is to close its sensational run at the Liberty Theatre, November 27th. At that time 715 performances will have been given, constituting a record.

The Griffith film is another record at Worcester, Mass., the Elm Theatre there reporting that a total of twelve presentations realized the remarkable sum of $16,000. The capacity of this house is 2,262, and of this number only 189 seats were priced at $2. There was no agitation on the part of the negro race, and after the initial performance only very minor changes were made by the Worcester city officials, one of which Manager Whitbeck, after consultation with the authorities, succeeded in restoring.

Final Blow In Russia Is Held Up Till Spring

Czar's Men Prepare for Great Drive Timed With Allies—Teutons Claim Gains Near Dvinsk

RUSSIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 11.—The Germans will wait for Dvinsk and Riga. They hope to start in the Spring the final conquest of Russia.

The Russians are determined that the invaders shall have neither city. At both points the antagonists are equal in numbers, and such equality has invariably guaranteed the Russians success everywhere hitherto, even when the Germans had the superiority in heavy guns, provided the latter was not overwhelming.

In spite of the loss of roughly a score of divisions on the Russian front the Germans still dispose forces aggregating 800,000 bayonets and 80,000 sabres. With the aid of their numerous guns and innumerable Maxims and miles of barbed wire, the Germans can hold out on the various sectors from which men have been transferred.

In the words of a high Russian authority:

"The second stage of the war was concluded with the final stoppage of the German invasion. The third stage will begin when we proceed to drive back the invader. Any offensive we undertake in the meantime necessarily will partake of the character of a preliminary operation to the great blow which we co-jointly with our allies, will deliver in the Spring."

TEST CASE IN FAVOR OF PATRIOTIC FUND

The Monthly Allowance Withdrawn When Government's Separation Scheme Went Into Force

The Executive of the Patriotic Fund possesses absolute and uncontrolled discretion in the matter of distributing the funds subscribed for the purpose of assisting the dependents of those who have volunteered for active service. And the Courts must not interfere with that discretion by ordering the executive to distribute or not to distribute the funds in any given amounts.

Such was the holding of Mr. Justice Maclennan in the case of Dame Florida Mercier vs the Canadian Patriotic Fund. Dame Mercier, widow of Joseph Marcotte, as is known, came before the court with a petition asking to be authorized to take suit in forma pauperis, against the Fund. She has two sons who have enlisted in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces, one being with the 15th Army Service Corps, now in Belgium, and the other with the 60th Battalion, at Valcartier. In May last, the Patriotic Fund reduced her monthly allowance from $25 to $5. She claimed she had the right to receive the former amount for the last six months and during the term of the service of her sons. The present proceedings were in the nature of a test case, on the issue of which depended what action would be taken in some 2,000 other similar cases, according to counsel for the Fund.

The administrators of the Fund represented that they had reduced the allowance by $20 per month in May last, because on that date the Government paid a separation allowance of that amount to the mothers of Canadin soldiers on active service; that the petitioner had received the same amount from the two sources as she had always received, and that in any event she had no valid and enforceable right of action in the premises.

How the Information Bureau of Red Cross Performs Its Work

The Information Department at the headquarters of the Canadian Red Cross Society in London is a vital link in the line of communication between the soldier in hospital and his friends and relatives at home. Only too often when a soldier is missing or has died on the field of battle it is the only medium whereby a soldier's relatives can learn details of his safety or of his last moments.

This Dept. carries on an immense correspondence with reference to the wounded in hospital. The disembarkation officers at Dover, Sandwich and other ports, and the commandants of every military hospital, in France and England are supplied with Canadian Red Cross post cards, blue in colour, already stamped and addressed to the London Headquarters. As soon as a wounded Canadian soldier reaches a hospital the news of his arrival is despatched to London.

The Dept. has a large staff of officers, both English and Canadian in all parts of France and England. One of these is given the name on the blue cards, visits the soldier, finds out his needs and makes a weekly report to the Information Dept. These reports sometimes number 500 or 600 a day. A staff of assistants make use of this information to write letters to the relatives in Canada until the prisoner is able to conduct his correspondence himself. These letters are signed by one of the Hon. Secretaries, and stamped with the name of the Commissioner, Col. Hodgetts.

The Blue card is also sent at once to the parcel Dept. which immediately forwards an individual parcel to the man in hospital. With it goes a stamped post card with the words: "Is there anything more we can do for you?" Additional parcels are sent containing what the soldier has expressed a wish for.

The material for all this work comes from the Red Cross branches in Canada, without a steady stream of supplies the system would break down in no time. It is the untiring workers in every province and town in the Dominion who provide the sinews for the Red Cross war and make its benefficent action possible.

Four Munition Shops Burned

Campaign of Fire Against United States Plants

TRENTON, N.J., Nov. 11.—Fire, believed to have been of incendiary origin, early today destroyed a four-storey wire rope mill, at the immense plant of the John A. Roebling Sons Co., where war orders are being filled.

In addition to the factory, about twenty houses were destroyed, and for a time the conflagration threatened to wipe out a section of the city.

The total loss is estimated between $500,000 and $600,000. The entire building was a mass of flames before the firemen were able to begin an effective fight.

Men at work when the fire broke out escaped. Workmen on the fourth floor smelled smoke, and almost before the alarm could be sounded flames were shooting upward from the ground floor of the building.

One of the mills at the plant was destroyed last January, with a $1,500,000 loss. At that time, Charles G. Roebling, head of the company, charged that agents of a foreign Government were undoubtedly responsible.

The destroyed building was a new one, 900 feet long and 700 feet wide. The entire plant has been under a strong guard ever since the pro-German agitation against the shipment of war supplies to the allies became intense.

Fire destroyed part of the Bethlehem Steel Company's plant, with loss estimated at $2,000,000.

One of the buildings of the American Synthetic Colour Co. at Stamford, Conn., was wiped out, with $40,000 damage.

Two English scientists have decided that the sence of smell in man is weak when compared with animals because of the human practice of kissing.

Women's Council Preparing For Return Of Peace

In the Meantime Are Taking an Active Interest in the Needs of the Present

The Mothers' Club held their regular monthly meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday afternoon at which they decided to hold a sale of home-made cooking, in the near future, at the market hall, to obtain funds to help the Association, and to send greeting cards to all members of the Y.M.C.A. who are serving their King and country. Over one hundred boys of the Y.M.C.A. have gone from the city.

After the business meeting Mrs. (Dr.) Middleton gave a vocal solo accompanied by Mrs. Porter, and an instrumental duet by Misses Viola Palmer and Hazel Gillespie, after which Mrs. (Dr.) Neal gave a talk on the annual meeting of the National Council of Women recently held in Toronto, at which she was a delegate. The workings of the local National and International were explained. Mrs. Neal stated that this year's meetings were particularly important for two reasons, first because they marked the coming of age of the Canadian National Council (secondly the March joness of Aberdeen, the founder of the Council in Canada, was present. Besides her helpfulness in the various sessions and her splendid addresses given at the different meetings, many very pleasant social affairs centred around her visit. There were present women from Vancouver to St. John and although these were women foremost in patriotic work in their own cities, still none of the various lines of work of the Council had been neglected. Their policy was not so much an aggressive one at the present as one of preparation and readiness for the time when peace shall return again. Some of the subjects discussed were: "The Care of the Mentally Deficient," "Laws For the Better Protection of Women and Children," "Immigration," "Citizenship," "Supervised Playgrounds," "Recreations and Social Centres," "Public Health," "Education," "Equal Moral Standard," "Fine and Applied Arts" and other subjects. The talk was very interesting and instructive and highly appreciated by all present. After a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Neal a social hour was spent and refreshments served. The members appointed to act on the committee for food sale are asked to meet at the residence of Mrs. Canniff, 342 Stewart street, on Monday evening, 15th, at eight o'clock. E. Canniff, Con.-Sec.

What Must I Pay For Glasses?

A question worth asking these hard times. Who does not know of some friends who has paid far too much for their glasses? No one will have cause to complain of the reasonable prices charged by Dr. W. H. Lacey, B.D., of the Peterborough Optical Parlours, for his glasses, whatever style, and in addition you are getting the very highest quality excelled by none, and equalled by a very few. Glasses sold by us are not the expensive one to help that some people imagine. "See Us and See Better." 410 George street. Phone 1169 or 1484. Opposite Examiner Office.

THE RED CROSS SOCIETY WHY WE SHOULD HELP

Question 1.—What is the Red Cross Society?

Answer.—It is an International Society which helps the Medical Departments of each Army and Navy to look after the sick and wounded and prisoners of war.

Question 2.—How does the Red Cross Society help the sick and wounded men?

Answer.—By providing the Army Medical Department with additional hospital stores of all kinds, from ambulances to drugs and bandages; by sending out extra nurses, orderlies and volunteer assistance, by equipping, wholly or in part, hospitals, hospital ships and trains.

Question 3.—Why does not the Government do all this work?

Answer.—Because in common with all other civilized nations, the Empire recognizes the value of voluntary effort for the care of the wounded as permitted by the International Convention of Geneva, 1864.

Red Cross work thus relieves the taxes, and allows people to give instead of only paying; and provides a properly organized channel for personal service to the suffering men.

Question 4.—Why should I give my money to the Red Cross Society?

Answer.—Because, if I stay at home, I can help the men who fight, through this Society, when they need help most.

Question 5.—What will happen if everybody in Canada subscribes generously to the Red Cross?

Answer.—Unnecessary suffering will be saved by a sufficient supply of all hospital stores and drugs; men will be returned to the ranks instead of being invalided and others who might never have seen home again will be returned to the arms of their families.

Question 6.—Why should I assist the wounded soldier?

Answer.—Because if the wounded soldier received immediate attention his injuries may not be permanent and he will not be a permanent charge on the community.

Question 7.—Why should I, enjoying the comforts of a home contribute to the Red Cross?

Answer.—Because if I am not prepared to risk a life at the front I should be prepared to try and save a life at the front.

CARE SHOULD BE EXERCISED IN PACKING PARCELS FOR TROOPS

The following instructions are sent out by the Post Office Department, Ottawa, Canada

The public is urged to exercise every care in packing parcels for the troops, as careful packing is absolutely essential to ensure delivery of the parcels in good order.

Parcels sent abroad require a higher standard of packing than is necessary in the Canadian Parcel Post and this applies with even greater force to parcels for the troops. Those which are inadequately packed run great risk of damage or loss of contents.

Thin cardboard boxes, such as shoe boxes, and thin wooden boxes, should not be used; nor does a single sheet of ordinary brown paper afford sufficient protection. The following forms of packing are recommended:

(1) Strong double cardboard boxes, preferably those made of corrugated cardboard and having lids which completely enclose the sides of the boxes.
(2) Strong wooden boxes.
(3) Several folds of stout packing paper.
(4) Additional security is afforded by an outer covering of linen, calico, or canvas, which should be securely sewn up.

The address of the parcel should be written in ink on the cover preferably in two places.

The address of the sender of the parcel should also be stated in order that it may be returned if undeliverable. The contents of the parcel should be stated in writing on the cover.

In the case of parcels sent to the Mediterranean Force, they should be very strongly packed. They should be as nearly round as possible, and well padded with shavings, crumpled paper, or similar protective material. The outer covering should consist of strong linen, calico or canvas, and should be securely sewn up. The use of wooden or metal boxes with square corners is undesirable, as parcels so packed are liable to injure other parcels in transit. No perishable articles should be sent, and anything likely to become soft or sticky, such as chocolates, should be enclosed in tins. influence of an anaesthetic, to make irrational statements or to give expression to something that had troubled them prior to the administration of the anaesthetic. "The statement made by the deceased might have meant anything or nothing," said Dr. Sutton.

Had Pretty Hair.

Mrs. Scea was the next witness called. She told of a number of conversations that passed between herself and Mrs. Lindsay concerning the pregnant condition of the girl prior to her death. Witness was present on the day of the funeral. She arrived while the service was in progress. Some time during the same day witness was shown a small tin box said to have contained pills, and which it is claimed, were used by the deceased for the purpose of relieving a pregnant condition. Mrs. Scea was told that the unborn child of Lily May Lindsay had pretty hair and pretty eyes. It was buried in a box by Sandford Lindsay. Witness said she heard Mrs. Lindsay say to her husband—"mind what I say and stick to it." Sandford Lindsay replied "All right," and then left the house to go for the coffin.

Committed for Trial.

In summing up the case for the defence Mr. Gordon contended there was insufficient evidence to warrant the woman being committed for trial. He said the Crown had failed to produce prima facie evidence to show that the child had actually been murdered.

Crown Attorney Hatton did not agree with the counsel for the defence. He said there was ample evidence upon which to continue the prosecution of the accused in a higher court.

Magistrate Langley said that the case was so close he would have to reserve his decision for an hour in order to enable him to review some of the evidence. This he did with the above result.

Charge of Murder.

When the hearing was resumed this afternoon Sandford Lindsay was called on to answer to a charge of murder arising out of the death of his fourteen year old daughter, Lily May Lindsay, which, according to the doctors' testimony, resulted from a criminal operation. Doctors Sutton, Holdcroft and Munro were in court to give evidence.

On Charge of Incest.

The preliminary hearing of the charge of incest against Sandford Lindsay, of Dummer, was concluded yesterday afternoon, when the prisoner was committed for trial. Two other witnesses were heard for the Crown. The defence, at this hearing, did not submit any evidence.

Mrs. Sarah Hubble, sworn, said she lived at the head of Stoney Lake, having resided there since she was ten years of age. She was picking berries with Mrs. Newall one day last summer. She saw the prisoner and his daughter in the berry patch too. This, in part, concluded the cross examination by the Crown Attorney.

In answer to Mr. Gordon's query, "Wasn't Mrs. Newell quite a talkative old woman?" she replied, "Everyone was good to her and she certainly was not looked down upon."

Further, she said she didn't see the improper conduct spoken of by Mrs. Newell, nor did she hear the girl's cries. She didn't remember Mrs. Newell telling her anything about the accused's conduct.

To Crown Attorney Hatton, witness said that she had a very poor memory. She kind of thought Mrs. Newell made some remark, but what it was, she couldn't say. She wouldn't like to say anything about anybody's character.

Mrs. Hattie Wilding, only sister of Mrs. Lindsay, was called to prove that the deceased girl was the daughter of Sandford Lindsay. She was the first one who handled Lillian May Lindsay when she was born, and she held her hand when she was dying.

RUSS ARTILLERY EFFECTIVE

German Company Was Reduced 75 Per Cent. Within Three Days.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 11.—A notebook kept by a German soldier who was captured by the Russians in the sector to the south of Dvinsk shows that in three days his company was reduced from 285 men to 70. Trenches were destroyed daily by the artillery fire, the occupants often being buried so deep that their bodies had to be dug out, while the men along the firing line frequently were compelled to work the entire night restoring the destroyed trenches. Other entries complained of lack of adequate clothing and food supply.

Mr. R. H. Turner has received a card from Mr. Bruce Rickey, a member of one of the Highland Regiments in Canada. His regimental number is 135391, and he is at Bramshott Camp, Hants, England. Bruce was formerly a member of the Peterborough Lacrosse and Football Club, and when he gets into a scrimmage there is bound to be something doing.

Sergt.-Major Harry Wilford of the 84th Battalion and formerly of C company of the 57th Regiment, is spending a few days at his home here. Sergt. Major Wilford accompanied the 84th on its march from Niagara camp to Toronto.

The Kingston Standard says: The three batteries of field artillery are comfortably situated in the Dry Dock barrack. Each battery has good rooms for quartermasters' stores, and for orderly officers. There is an abundance of light and good ventilation throughout the building. The batteries find place for the drilling of recruits around the building, and it is quite convenient to the cricket field.

The Kingston Standard has the following: Lieut. Fred Ingledew, of Kingston, now taking the Provisional School of Infantry in the city, was recently included in the list of officers recommended for the 109th Battalion under Lieut.-Col. Fee. He will be given the machine gun section of the new battalion, which will be recruited largely in and around Kingston. Lieut. Ingledew attended the machine gun school conducted at Barriefield camp. He will go to Lindsay at the close of the Provisional School of Infantry in about two weeks.

The 59th Split Up.

KINGSTON, Nov. 11.—It has been decided that the 59th Battalion will be distributed as follows: Two companies and headquarters in Brockville, one company in the Gananoque Armouries and one company at Cornwall. The battalion will be moved as soon as the alterations and improvements can be carried out in these places.

Fugitive in the Trenches.

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 11.—Bert Slade, a Port Stanley man, escaped last spring from the Elgin County Jail in St. Thomas, where he was serving a year sentence for assaulting C. Parker, a Port Stanley man. To-day a St. Thomas resident received a letter from Slade who is now in France in the trenches. Shortly after his escape he enlisted in Toronto and is doing his bit for the British Empire.

Quarters For 110th.

STRATFORD, Nov. 11. — Quarters have been secured for the 110th Perth County battalion in the old Kemp factory on Ontario street. Major Bishop Divisional Militia Department Engineer, has recommended the building and it will be renovated.

Units Get Canteen Profits.

OTTAWA, Nov. 11.—It is announced that there is to be no more private profiteering in England. Henceforth each corps as in Canada, will conduct its own canteen instead of farming out the privilege, and the profits will go to the unit.

Dr. N. H. Sutton will leave here on Sunday night for the east from where he will sail for the Old Country. He has received word to report to the War Office, where he will be notified as to where he will be stationed, as a member of the Army Medical Corps. Dr. Sutton is the sixth Peterborough doctor to leave for active service, Drs. Frederick, McPherson, Young, Kelly and G. Greer being already in the field. Dr. Frederick is now on Lemnos Island in the Mediterranean, Dr. McPherson at Bromley Convalescent Hospital, England, Dr. Young, Medical Officer with the Second Canadian Engineers, and Drs. Kelly and Greer are on duty in France.

Col. Sergt. W. H. Targatt of the 57th Regiment, has joined the 93rd Battalion and has been promoted to the position of company quartermaster sergeant of B company.

There are approximately 2,800 soldiers drilling in Kingston at present time. This number is made up as follows: 59th Battalion, 1,300; Batteries, 500; R.C.H.A. 250; R.S.A. 250; C.M.R., 200; Departmental, 300.

out of a pocket near his. He took it and drank the contents. He didn't know who owned the coat.

Chief Thompson told him he would lay a charge of theft against him.

Charges Withdrawn.

Wm. J. Martin, who a week ago was remanded on a charge of stealing a gold watch valued at $45 from Nick Rousos, came up before Magistrate Dumble this morning and was allowed to go, there being no evidence against him.

In the case of a young man charged with assaulting a member of the 93rd Battalion, the charge was withdrawn, the complainant having to pay the costs amounting to $2.60.

James Victor pleaded guilty to a breach of the traffic by-law and was fined two dollars. He was driving south on George street and didn't keep as near to the right as required by the by-law.

A local young man was charged with refusing to assist Constable Blade in the arrest of a prisoner last night. He didn't plead nor elect, and was remanded until to-morrow morning. He was allowed to go in the meantime.

COPS IN SERBIAN VALLEY FELL INTO INVADER'S HANDS

MILAN, Nov. 12.—Magrini, special correspondent of the Secolo, with the Serbian army, has sent another vivid despatch describing conditions in Serbia, based on information of the Serbians who reached Monastir from Nish. "We left Nish two days after the Government had departed," said one. "At the railway station there was a great crowd of fugitives who came from Pirot and Knasevatz. When the train arrived, a scene of indescribable panic was witnessed. The crowd took the station by storm, and made a dash to obtain places on the train. Some travelled on the roofs of carriages and others in open trucks. Those who could not find places in the train started on foot for Pristina. The roads were blocked with fugitives whose sufferings increased hour by hour."

Owing to the truce of last Summer between Serbia and Austria, after the overwhelming winter defeat of the latter, many Serbian soldiers were spared to attend to the fields. Consequently there were good crops, especially in the Morava Valley. In the Pozarevtz and Shadatz regions there were vast quantities of grain when the new offensive started, and all these hard won stocks fell into the enemy's hands, being sent away to Austria and Germany. The Serbian authorities are now faced with a serious problem of feeding the civilian population and the army.

COBOURG'S BLUFF IS APPARENTLY CALLED

Lakeshore Town Worried at Prospect of Having to Raise a Company---Expected Somebody Elses' Soldiers Would be Sent There For the Benefit of the Merchants

Cobourg, the town that has been getting so much credit for securing recruits for overseas service, is a disappointed community just now. When it was announced that one company of an overseas battalion was to be stationed there, there was general jubilation. The Cobourg people expected that 250 men, some place else had recruited, would be sent there and the merchants prepared for a harvest. It was a rude jolt when when the truth gradually began to sink, in that Cobourg was expected to recruit a company on its own account. The Government evidently figured that a town which claimed to have already raised 900 men, would have little difficulty in securing a company of 250, but the Cobourg people evidently don't like the look of the task. As a matter of fact it looks as if Cobourg's bluff has at last been called. Ever since the war broke out Cobourg has been advertising itself at the expense of the district on the loyalty of its citizens. As the headquarters of the 40th Regiment, which consists of two companies, at Cobourg, a Company at Campbellford a Company at Brighton, a Company at Norwood, a Company at Grafton, a Company at Colborne, and a Company at Castleton, all the recruits from these different Company centres were mobilized at Cobourg, and that A squad of 40 from Campbellford Colborne, Grafton, Cobourg, etc., would leave to join a particular unit and next day would appear a loud blast in the Toronto dailies. "Forty more Cobourg recruits leave." The same thing happened with the artillery. The 14th and 24th Battery recruits were mobilized at Cobourg and although Peterborough sent 9 men to Cobourg to fill up the battery the whole lot are counted in Cobourg's "800". Now that Cobourg is left on its own resources, nine recruits in two weeks is the record. Campbellford has already raised 20. Port Hope has twenty-five, etc., but Cobourg is panic-stricken at the thought of undertaking to raise a Company. Meanwhile Peterborough has asked the Government for permission to raise a whole Battalion.

The Cobourg World has the following amusing reference to the matter:

"Are the soldiers coming to Cobourg," is what everybody is asking. Nobody seems to know. Last Friday a meeting to promote recruiting was called by the Mayor at the instance of the recruiting officers sent here, and at which there was somewhat of a lively time. Those who had received contracts for supplying provisions to the Armouries and their friends were confident that the soldiers were coming, while the recruiting officers sent here were equally confident that the soldiers were not coming. However, it was decided that recruiting ought to be encouraged if the soldiers did not come. Very strong criticism was expressed by all if the soldiers were not sent after the promises and statements that had been made by officials and expenditure of from $2,000 to $3,000, as was stated. Mr. Guillet and others spoke of communications they had received stating that the soldiers were coming. Some of the merchants had already put in a large supply of provisions to meet the anticipated demand of the soldiers. But the recruiting officers sent here said the soldiers were not coming, while the local officer said he had authority for saying they were. Mr. Munson was not present so coulu not give any information at the moment. A resolution was moved and seconded that encouragement and aid be given to recruiting at once, believing that the Government would keep their repeated promises with Cobourg. After the meeting it was stated that the soldiers were not coming.

The first of the week Mr. Munson went to Ottawa, and on his return a report was circulated to the effect that the soldiers were coming, and had been expected until last night.

The World interviewed Mr. Munson over the 'phone yesterday and he evidently did not expect the soldiers to come, except only those who would be recruited in the United Counties.

War Will Not Be Over Until Britain Puts Into Action One Million Men

The End Not Likely to Come Before Next Summer—Frederick Palmer, Canadian War Correspondent Returns From Front

NEW YORK, November 12. Frederick Palmer, the war correspondent, who has been where the shells have been bursting during several months, arrived yesterday on the liner St. Louis with impressions of his experience that he has not sent in his despatches. He said that the war would not be over until the British had put in action more than one million men who have not fired a hostile shot in a year. Nobody at the British front believed the end would come before next Summer. The execution of Miss Cavell, he said, did more for recruiting than all the Zeppelin raids. Mr. Palmer happened to be in France when the news of her death was received, and its effect on the troops was electrical. Her death gave her a Joan of Arc character that appealed to the French heart.

"It takes five hours to get from the trenches to London,' Mr. Palmer said, 'and what a contrast. Everybody is quite cheerful at the front. They have only to fight and die for England, and not to bother with politics. London will not believe you if you bring any good news from the front. The British are spreading all their news broadcast. The Germans are suppressing theirs. The British wash their linen on the public parade, and the Germans wash theirs in the cellar with the lights turned off. If that steel curtain which is drawn over Germany were lifted the revelations might amaze the world. Only peace however will lift it.

SUBMARINE CAMPAIGN ENDED.

"The lesson of the efficiency of the British navy is the same as that of the German army: tireless industry and no amateur interference with the professional experts. Sheer hard work and brains put an end to the submarine campaign. There was no magic about it. None of the dream plans of lay inventors proved practicable when tried out.

"It was the professional naval mind that had the brains to cope with the submarine.

"The British are a stubborn people and they do things in their own way. In order to encourage recruiting they talked pessimism. Now they are advising that the financial situation is serious in order to make the people economize. If I know anything about war and my experience at the British front counts for anything, then the talk that the British have fallen down in this war is nonsense. Their own new army had to wait on rifles and even uniforms to supply their allies. But this is one of the things the censor cut out, lest it offend the allies.

"I think the organization and equipment of the new army formed entirely of volunteers, is a military marvel. There have been costly mistakes, but the rank and file of the army in France have put up one of the most splendid fights in all history. I have watched the British army grow and improve. I do not know what the relations of the British and French Cabinets are, but I do know that the relations of the French and British soldiers were never so good. Different as are the races, they have fought their way into each other's respect."

THE CHAMPAGNE EFFORT.

Mr. Palmer said he was over the Champagne battlefield, and he believed that the French might have broken through but for the heavy rains, on the second day of the attack, which was made to relieve the pressure on the Russian side. "The Germans knew that the attack was coming, and they brought 300,000 reinforcements from the eastern front and concentrated them against the French and British armies. That front at Champagne was five times the length of that at Gettysburg, with at least ten times the number of men engaged. Tactically what the French tried to do at Champagne was what Pickett tried to do at Gettysburg: to break a solid front. A quarter of an hour of such fire as the French directed against the German trenches would have wiped out the Union army, placed as it was in the face of the Confederates at the second day of Gettysburg. The French kept up their fire for 72 hours.

"I haven't heard a British or French officer or soldier mention the possibility of any compromise with Germany. The French have a saying that the ghosts of their dead soldiers would haunt them if they stop fighting while there is a German on the soil of France."

Young Ladies' Branch of the Red Cross Fund Held Successful Sale

The auxiliary branches of the Red Cross Fund continue to do a thriving business. On Thursday afternoon and evening the members of the W.I.T.U. Club held a sale and tea at the home of Miss Ruby Carr, 333 Reid street with the result that another $25.00 was added to the fund for the benefit of the Red Cross. The home was prettily decorated with the club colours, red and green, and "mums." Tables laden with home-made candy, tea, and sandwiches were prepared, and the attendance was very gratifying to the young ladies, who compose the club. Their names are as follows: Ruby Carr, Hazel Gillespie, Florence Emmerson, Helen McDonald, Lillie Tranter, Edna Thompson, Alberta Rehill, Gladys Yelland, Ina Duncan and Viola Hill. The amount secured is to be handed over to the South-end Red Cross Fund. In the evening an interesting programme was provided the guests when a number of vocal and instrumental pieces were rendered. Rev. Mr. Mackenzie of Knox church sang two vocal selections to the delight of all present. Two little "stars" also made an impression, little Lillie Logan in two piano duets, and little Mary Menzies sang "Tipperary," and "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall."

LAKEFIELD'S GIFT IS ACKNOWLEDGED

Mr. J. H. Cummings of Lakefield has received a letter acknowledging gratefully the receipt of $119.45 the amount subscribed on Trafalgar Day by the citizens of Lakefield for the British Red Cross. Lakefield has done well both in providing men and in furnishing funds.

RECENT GAINS UNITE RUSSIANS ENGAGED IN RIGA SECTION

Enemy Evacutes Positions Gained at the Cost of Great Sacrifice---German Women Fight

LONDON, Nov. 12. The Russian offensive has resulted in the capture of more than 4,000 prisoners during the past 48 hours.

The Germans admit that they withdrew troops from ground west of Riga which they gained only a few weeks ago at considerable sacrifice and that the Russian fleet in the Gulf of Riga is supporting the Russian army. By their recent gains the Russians have established a connection between their forces on the Gulf of Riga by way of Kemmern and Lake Babit to Olai, which is halfway between Riga and Mitau.

"German troops have systematically evacuated the forest district to the west and southwest of Shedli, west of Ro[illegible] became [illegible] formed into swamps by the rains," says the official announcement at the German army headquarters, but the Russian official explains that the enemy was driven from the forest as the result of an attack in which the Germans lost several thousand prisoners.

The official communication states that, according to supplementary information, 1,500 men, 21 officers and 11 machine guns were captured in the fighting at Kosko in addition to 2,500 men previously reported.

Russian Plants Not Affected.

The correspondent of the Times at the headquarters of Gen. Ruzsky, northern Russian army, says the premature advent of winter has not affected [illegible] as the rivers and ground have not yet frozen. In the Dvina Valley there has been no interference with railway work and supplies are coming satisfactorily. The correspondent adds that the refugees who recently encumbered the entire region have disappeared, thus relieving the pressure on the railway system.

Short of Rifles Only.

"Russia is now suffering only for want of rifles, and when she is properly supplied, at least two million additional soldiers will be thrown into the field with results which only next Spring's campaign can tell. This is the opinion of a prominent American mining engineer, who has just returned to London after spending six months in the Russian Empire, mainly in Siberia, where he is the chief engineer of an important group of mines. Describing conditions in Russia he said: "The depression which prevailed outside Russia during the great German drive through Poland was never really manifested in that country and the only thing that could cause revolution now would be the conclusion of an unfavourable peace with the central powers.

The Russian personnel [illegible] imaginative industrial, and the losses suffered in the war have not greatly impressed him. Even the generally-admitted shortage of rifles, the wastage of which has been unprecedented, is not causing the Russian much concern, as the staff has realized that the rifle used by infantry is not an effective arm. The Russian army is now well supplied with heavy guns and munitions and the infantry is being supplied with thousands of machine guns.

REVIEWS GREEK ARMY.

Prince George, at Salonica, Shows Allies How His Troops Look.

SALONICA, Nov. 10. In celebration of the third anniversary of the capture of Salonica from the Turks, Crown Prince George today reviewed 9,000 Greek troops of all arms. British, French, and Greek spectators watched with deep interest the display of Greece's military material.

The streets and houses were decorated with flags and streamers, and all the ships in the harbour were dressed.

MEET ON BATTLEFIELD.

Quebec Brothers Found Each Other After Year's Fighting.

QUEBEC, Nov. 11. A very touching incident, in which two Quebec brothers, Messrs. Joseph and Charles (Chubby) Power were the heroes, has just come from the front. [illegible] "somewhere in Northern France."

The two Quebec boys were [illegible] with the Canadian overseas forces for a long time, Joe going over with the first contingent and Chubby leaving shortly afterwards, and subsequently being granted commissions.

The two brothers were in different corps and had not seen one another for nearly a year, when one night recently, as one corps was leaving the trenches and being relieved by another, Joe and Chubby met. One brother was about to take the other's place in the trench.

The night was dark, but not too dark for the boys to recognize each other, and the meeting was most touching. The [illegible] well-known members of the Quebec [illegible] Cummings.

Innis Claims $2000 From Insurance Co.

Two Cases on Docket For Non-Jury Sittings Tuesday Next

Then non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court will open here on Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock before Mr. Justice Sutherland. Only two cases appear on the docket. Garnett Innis is plaintiff in one case, claiming $2,000 from the Anglo-American Fire Insurance Company, to cover a fire loss at his livery barn on January 10th last. He held a policy for $3,300 for which he had paid $33 premium for insurance from April 29th, 1914, to April 29th, 1915. The defendants say that Innis filed proofs of loss for $600 on January 29th and then refused to accept this amount. The damage is overstated, they assert, and also that they were not made aware of all the conditions at the place insured. Bennett and Goodwill represent the defendants, and Gordon and Widdifield are acting for Mr. Innis.

The other case concerns a Dourro real estate transaction. William Henry Down claims $1,646.27 for unpaid purchase money and interest on a written contract signed by the defendant Nov. 17, 1908, by which he covenanted to pay $2,000 for a broken lot, No. 23, con. 5, Dourro. The defendant, Isaac Freeburn, claims that shortly after entering upon possession of the property he learned that two acres of it had been previously sold by the plaintiff and also that Down had lost by length of possession another six acres. Freeburn claims that these eight acres are more valuable than the rest of the property. He is prepared to pay the purchase money less $500. Dymble and Johnston are acting for the plaintiff, and Hall and Hall for the defendant.

Home from The Front

Signaller Henry Edward Brand, of the 10th Battalion, First Canadian Expeditionary Force, has arrived in Peterborough, after being invalided home as a result of wounds received at Festubert in May last. Signaller Brand enlisted in Calgary. He used to reside with W. J. Conway of Ennismore, and is well known in and around Peterborough. He is now visiting friends in Ennismore prior to his return to Calgary.

After being wounded at Festubert, Signaller Branch was sent to England and subsequently returned to his regiment, where he later developed heart trouble as a result of shell explosion.

He then went back to England, and after appearing before the medical board, was returned to Canada with an honourable discharge.

THE WOMEN OF FRANCE

Not even America so ardently loves and longs for peace as France—peace for her children! Yet not a woman in the throngs I questioned gave me an un-Spartan answer. So inflexible is their pride of country, so consecrated their resolution, that if a ministry should attempt to betray France with an illusory peace, in the absence of the men, the women, I believe, would rise and make a revolution! I will quote but one of a hundred letters shown me, without comment, for comment would be futile. It is from a mother to the head of a great ammunition factory, where her two sons had been transferred from the front to give their trained services.

"I have just learned that you have asked the superintendent to keep my sons away from the most dangerous experiments in the charging of the shells. I can't tell you how offensive this demand is to me. I consider that my sons should go where there is the most danger to be incurred.

"They should do so, first, because they are the nephews of one of the owners. The duty is to give an example or courage to the employees who may be haunted by the memory of the terrible catastrophes which have taken place lately, which were the result of the inexperience and imprudence of those who were directing the operations. They should assist in all such experiments, even were they more dangerous than they are in reality, because my sons are soldiers.

"You know that I only consented to advise their leaving the front because you assured me that their presence in the factories would be more important than in the trenches, and that there would be certain dangers to be met. The first accident that occurred at the factory decided me to grant your request. I beg of you not to change now in any way the duties of my sons.

"When war was declared I felt clearly all the sorrows which might visit us, and I promised myself that I would give my children an example of courage. My daughters will not see me overwhelmed by misfortune; my sons know with what pride I have seen them and with to see them face the worst dangers.

"Sorrow has visited both you and me already in its cruellest form. Do not let us ask for pity. Let us go to the end of the Calvary without flinching."

I will not give the signature, for in justice, if I gave it, it should be signed—

GERMAN CRUISER UNDINE SUNK IN THE BALTIC

SWEDEN DIVIDED IN WAR FEELING

Court, Military Party and Most of Press For Germans but Socialists Are Pro-Allies

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A Stockholm despatch to the Times says:

"While it undoubtedly is true that the preponderance of sentiment here is pro-German and anti-Allies, this sentiment has been exaggerated. What is true is that the court and military party certainly are pro-German and that the Germans through their intelligence and persistent propaganda, have dominated most of the channels of publicity to such an extent that even if a majority of the population favoured the Allies it would be difficult for their views to find expression.

"If any intelligent and sustained effort has been made to win public opinion in Sweden for the Allies by means of publicity its effects certainly are not observable. The socialist party, however, is avowedly and openly for the Allies, and, though the socialists are not strong enough to dominate the country's policy, they are strong enough to exercise a great restraining influence to prevent other parties from forcing through any programme which would jeopardize Swedish neutrality.

"I am unable to discover any talk of peace here or any feeling that German success has brought the end of the war in sight."

GREECE ADDS TO ARMY.

Will Put Into Training All Citizens Not Hitherto Drilled.

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 11.—Despatches received from Athens say the Greek general staff has decided to put into training all citizens who have not done military service.

Why Tolerate Catarrh?

You have noticed—no doubt—that any cold aggravates nasal catarrh and the flow of mucous annoys you that such objectionable matter could find lodgment in your head. To ignore this catarrh when the cold subsides is wrong because it continues to slowly injure the delicate linings of the nasal passages and clog them up.

To correct catarrh, cleanse the nostrils frequently with a solution of warm water and salt, insert vaseline on retiring, and take a spoonful of Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month. Scott's acts through the blood to feed the tissues, and contains soothing glycerine to check the inflammation and heal the sensitive membranes.

Montenegrins Aid The Serbs In Checking The Advance Of The Teutons

Austro-Germans Meet Unexpected Obstacles in Balkan Drive at Several Points, According to Reports From the Front

LONDON, Nov. 13.—That the Teutonic armies in Serbia are meeting with unexpected checks at several points is indicated in the reports received from the front in the near East. The Serbian army in the north is making good use of the protection afforded by the mountains at its back, while to the west the Montenegrins are holding the Austrian columns which were counted on to aid in cutting off the retreat of the Serbs.

Reports by way of Berlin say the Germans have captured 4,000 more prisoners, but the Serbs deny that these were a part of the Serbian army. The Austro-Germans declare they are advancing along the line west of Nish. The Serbian government, according to a report from Athens has been removed to Krusevo.

The reports from Southern Serbia are conflicting. It now is known that the French did not reoccupy but simply made a cavalry raid into the town of Veles, destroying the Bulgarian ammunition stores. The French, however, are advancing on the west side of the Vardar River and at the same time are repelling Bulgarian attacks on Krivolak.

A new British division having landed, the force which is to be under command of General Sir Charles Carmichael Monro is spreading out toward Strumitza, where encounters with Bulgarian patrols are reported.

With the arrival of Field Marshal Lord Kitchener, who should soon be on the scene, a further development in the campaign is expected, and it is possible that the Gallipoli army will become more active.

A despatch from Athens declares to be untrue a report that the Germans are occupying the entire line from Kralievo to Kraguyevatz and Petrovac. Important Serbian forces arriving from Mitrovitza have reached the Kutenanik defile, where they occupied the railway station to which the Bulgarians, bound from Uskub to Prisrand, had advanced.

Operations extending to the northwestern front now are becoming the key to the situation, as Serbian troops sent from the north to Krusevo and Monastir will pass there.

So long as the Serbian army remains intact, which it has done thus far, it is the feeling of military men here that there is a good chance to turn the tables on the Germans and their allies. The Teutons, the military observers say, can hardly send further reinforcements for the near Eastern adventure, their line against Russia already having grown dangerously thin, as is evidenced by the Russian successes both in the north and the south.

The Germans admit that they withdrew troops from ground west of Riga which they gained only a few weeks ago at considerable sacrifice and that the Russian fleet in the Gulf of Riga is supporting the Russian army. By their recent gains the Russians have established a connection between their forces on the Gulf of Riga by way of Memmern and Lake Babit to Olai, which is half way between Riga and Mitau.

CHURCH BELLS PEALING START PEACE RUMOUR

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 13.—Rumours that Serbia has applied for a separate peace have suddenly sprung into general circulation, but so far as can be ascertained they are without the slightest foundation.

The Associated Press, on investigating the rumours, found one amusing explanation of them. The bells of the Protestant Churches had started pealing simultaneously and some one seeking the reason for this conjured up the theory that it was the beginning of Serbian peace negotiations. The conjecture soon developed into a report, the fact being ignored that the bells were being rung on the occasion of the meeting of the Synod of the Prussian Evangelical Church.

Insane, He Quits Train At Night

ALTOONA, Pa., Nov. 13.—Clad only in pajamas, an overcoat and shoes, Ben E. Barber, twenty-seven years old, a Harvard graduate, staggered into a railroad telegraph tower at Gallitzin, ten miles west of here, at one o'clock this morning. He became demented while on a Pennsylvania Railroad express from Boston to his home in Reno, Nevada, and left the berth of a sleeping car while the train stopped, wandering along the tracks to the tower. Dr. E. C. Ferguson took charge of him.

While bringing him to the hospital here Barber became violently insane. At the hospital he was placed in a padded cell. Authorities here communicated with his parents.

To Place Brussels Under Martial Law

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A message received here from Rotterdam reports that travellers arriving there from Belgium say that the German authorities have decided to place Brussels under martial law, thereby depriving the Belgian coal authorities of their control, says the Exchange Telegraph Amsterdam correspondent.

The correspondent adds that the reason for the measure is not known.

COAL $20 PER TON IN PARIS; NO SHORTAGE

Supply is Cut Down, But Consumption is Cut by German Occupation.

Paris is in no danger of shivering this winter though it will have to pay rather dearly for its warmth. Monsieur Marcel Sembat minister of public works, assures the public that there will be plenty of coal available and supports his views with a few conclusive statistics.

France consumed 100,000,000 tons of coal a year before the war, 20,000,000 tons of it came from Great Britain and 10,000,000 from Belgium and Germany. The latter markets are closed to her now but her consumption has decreased from 60,000,000 to 40,000,000 tons by reason of the German occupation of the industrial regions of the north and east. Her coal production has diminished in the same ratio being 20,000,000 tons as against 40,000,000 tons, so she has to depend on Great Britain and the United States for the 20,000,000 tons that she lacks. The receipts at French ports which are less than a million tons a month a year ago, rose to 1,500,000 tons in August. Statistics of subsequent receipts are incomplete, but it is thought that they exceed 2,000,000 tons per month, sufficient to meet current needs and accumulate a small surplus.

Coal prices have shown no response to the increased receipts. The best qualities are firm at $20 a ton delivered at domicile while inferior grades and industrial coal bring $15 a ton. The city gas company profiting from these high prices has supplanted coal with gas in a great many families, furnishing the heaters free of rental.

OXO

In the Kitchen

OXO CUBES are a most efficient aid to the cook. They are handy and uniform in size, flavour and food-value so that the right quantity to use can be judged to a nicety. It is surprising how quickly a cook can prepare her soups and savouries with OXO CUBES. The OXO CUBE way of cooking is as great an advance on old-fashioned methods as the electric cooker is on the coal-fire.

Soldier of Fortune ——— by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1913, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

This murder—or was it suicide?—had occurred within ten minutes. I turned the man over, revealing a bearded face, the features prominent but refined. He was no ordinary rough, and his clothing was of excellent material. He had been shot in the back of the head.

It was murder then—murder! Even as I struggled with the horror a sudden gust of wind extinguished the lamp and I gripped the table, staring about in the haunted darkness. A moment and my eyes adapted themselves to the new environment, the moonlight streaming through the open window and across the man's body. With heart quaking like a frightened girl I stole across the floor and glanced out. A single story extension, probably the back of a roof, was below. Kneeling upon this the assassin could easily have entered the room. Beyond the pale moonshine revealed a patch of grass, a wood or tangled garden, and behind these a dense forest growth. To the right of the garden I could dimly distinguish a row of small cabins, the negro quarters. Coombs would have a guess as one of these, and they were so close that even if asleep at the time the report could scarcely fail to beat the report of the gun in the silent night. Yet there was no light along the row of huts, no sign of human presence.

Seized by sudden terror, I caught up the extinguished lamp, scarcely breathing until again outside in the hallway, the door closed behind me. Trembling in every limb, I felt my way along through the darkness, clinging myself to the wall. What could I do? What might I do? I knew nothing of the house or where to find Sallie. I was not even sure of her presence. Indeed, the very memory of her snaky eyes gave me new horror. And Coombs! Suspecting him, as I did, it would be the height of folly to seek him out yonder in the dark. There was nothing left but to await daylight, to remain on watch, endeavouring alone to formulate some plan of future action.

God only knows how glad I was to discover the open door to my own room again. There were matches there on the table, but my hand trembled so I struck three before the wick of the lamp caught fire.

CHAPTER VI.

I Get into the Game.

I SAW the affair now from a new viewpoint. I was not so sure, so certain, that I understood the entire truth.

Coombs was no plantation overseer, but a mere Texas bully. The very appearance of the man told that, and those neglected, weed grown fields were another proof. What was he here for, then? And Sallie! Lord, I could despise that Texas rough, but the snaky eyes of the woman made me shiver and look about apprehensively. Then there was the dead man. There was wrong somewhere surely—cowardly crime, murder!

With the first return of daylight I would seek out Coombs, tell him what I had seen and compel him to confess the truth. Then I should know how to act, how to approach her and explain. My nerves steadied as I sat there in the silence, and my mind drifted to the woman sleeping across the hall. Then I also fell asleep in the chair.

The gray of dawn was on the windows when I awoke, my body aching from its unnatural position. With loaded pistol in my pocket I slipped into the hall. The faint light revealed its shabbiness, the grimy rag carpet and discolored walls. Some spirit of adventure led me the full length until my hand was upon the latch of that last door. I could not resist an impulse to look upon the dead man again by daylight and thus assure myself of the reality of what seemed only a dream. All was exactly as I recalled it to memory—the stained walls, the dirty floor, the table littered with cards, the overturned chair and the motionless body of the dead man. From the wound in the head a dark flow of blood stained the floor, and as I bent closer I noticed the eyelids were lowered over the dead eyes. Shot as he had been, killed instantly, the hand of the assassin must have performed this act. Then surely this killing had been no common quarrel, but a planned assassination, the culmination of some prearranged plot.

This knowledge, while it set my heart throbbing in realization of new danger, yet served also to stiffen my nerves. My thought was not so much concerned with myself and my own danger as with that of the young woman whom I was bound to protect.

I closed the door on the silence and stole quietly downstairs. There was no movement, no sound in the great house. The front room, hideous in its grimy disorder, was vacant, and I opened the front door noiselessly and stepped forth into the spectral gray light of the dawn. The first glimpse about was depressing enough. The house itself, big and glaring as it was, was nevertheless little better than a ruin. Several of the windows were broken, and the steps sagged and trembled under my weight. The front yard, a full half acre in extent, was a tangled mass of bushes and weeds, a high, untrimmed hedge shutting off all view of the road. From the foot of the steps a narrow passage trampled into the dirt circled the corner of the house, disappearing within a few feet.

Convinced that this must lead to the rear and possibly the negro cabins where Coombs slept, I followed its tortuous windings, although half afraid to desert my guardianship of the house even for this purpose. Still there was little to be feared so long as Mrs. Bernard remained securely locked in her room. Perhaps by the time she aroused and appeared below stairs I could find a reasonable explanation of all this mystery—something to smile over, rather than fear.

I emerged into a somewhat clearer space of ground at the rear. The kitchen was an ell, constructed of rough boards, but with shingle roof. The door stood ajar, and I glanced in, only to note the rough table, the pots and pans used the night before still unwashed.

There was nothing there to interest me, and I crossed a narrow space of grass to where a broken picket fence was visible amid a fringe of weeds. No description can fitly picture the gloomy desolation surrounding that ramshackle place. Evidently this fence, now a mere ruin, had once served to protect a garden plot. But I saw merely a tangled mass of wild vegetation, so thick and high as to obstruct the view. Narrow footpaths branched in either direction, and I chose to follow the one to the right, thinking thus to skirt the fence and learn what was beyond before approaching the negro cabins on the opposite side. To my surprise I found myself suddenly standing on the bank of a narrow bayou, the water clear, yet apparently motionless, the opposite shore heavily timbered. Owing to a sharp curve I could see scarcely a hundred yards in either direction, yet close in beside the shore a light boat was skimming over the gray water. Even as I gazed, the fellow plying the paddle saw me and waved his hand. In another moment the bow grounded on the bank and its occupant came stumbling up the slight declivity.

He was a medium sized, wiry looking fellow, with olive skin and small mustache, dressed in brown corduroy, a colored handkerchief wound about his head in lieu of a hat. As he came to the level where I stood he stopped suddenly, staring into my face.

"Sacre! I thought eet vas Coombs. Who are you, m'sieur?"

"I came in last night," I replied evasively, "and was just looking about a bit."

The black eyes searched my face, and I noted his right hand touch the hilt of a knife in his belt.

"What water is this?" I asked, ignoring his action. "Bayou?"

"Oui, m'sieur."

"Are we near the sea?"

"Twenty-seex mile. You not know where you are? 'Tis odd you not know, m'sieur."

I laughed, enjoying his bewilderment, yet not realizing how to turn it to better account.

"Oh, no. I came by train in the night and am a little hazy as to location. You live about here?"

"Som' time. Then off again—sailer. Whare Coombs? You know, m'sieur?"

"No, I don't," I acknowledged. "Asleep in his cabin likely."

The creole, for such he undoubtedly was, made a swift resolve.

"'Tis like, m'sieur. I find out. Maybe you come too."

The last was more of an order than a question. I gave it no apparent heed, but turned in the direction of the cabins. I had no reason to avoid Coombs. Indeed, I desired to see him, and I had no intention of permitting this lad to suppose that I feared his veiled threats. Without so much as glancing back at him I advanced along the footpath, my hands in my pockets. Yet my mind leaped from point to point in eager speculation. Little as I liked Coombs this creole was even more dangerous. The one was a rough, the other a venomous snake. So far as the original purpose of my adventure was concerned it had already largely faded from recollection. The swift recurrence of more startling events dominated.

"Ze right; turn to ze right, m'sieur," said a voice behind me, and then I saw Coombs standing before the door of the second cabin.

"What does this mean, Bronsard?" he growled savagely. "Where did you pick up that fellow?"

"At the landing," the creole hastened to explain. "How could I tell? He said he knew you, m'sieur."

"Oh he did, hey? Well, all I know about him is that he blew in here last night with a [illegible] to be

SHARP ATTACK REPULSED

Dangerous Condition Relieved Just in Time By "Fruit-a-tives"

MR. F. J. CAVEEN

632 Gerrard St. East, Toronto.,

For two years, I was a victim of Acute Indigestion and Gas In The Stomach. It afterwards attacked my Heart, and I had pains all over the body, so I could hardly move around. I tried all kinds of medicines but none of them did me any good. At last, acting on the advice of a friend, I decided to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. I bought the first box last June, and now I am well, after using only three boxes. I recommend 'Fruit-a-tives' to anyone suffering from Indigestion, no matter how acute". FRED J. CAVEEN.

Simple Indigestion often leads to Heart Attacks, Catarrh of the Stomach and constant distress of mind and body. If you are bothered with any Stomach Trouble, and especially if Constipation troubles you, take 'Fruit-a-tives'.

years' service and took possession of the place. I reckon it's about time I saw some papers to prove what yer are, young feller, 'fore yer go snoopin' round at daylight. What's yer game anyhow?"

The man's bluster gave me my clew. The thought suddenly occurred to me that for some reason he was more afraid of me than I of him.

"You can see my authority, Coombs, any time you are ready to exhibit your own," I returned coolly, leaning back against the side of the cabin and staring him straight in the eyes. "If you are the overseer here, then it is my money that is paying your wages, and from the look of things you'll not hold the job long at that."

Coombs did not cringe, but my tone brought him uneasiness.

"The niggers won't work," he returned gruffly. "Thar ain't a nigger on the place."

"Apparently white men enough hanging around. What's the matter with the negroes?"

"Ghosts," and the fellow laughed. "Maybe yer've seen sum?"

I straightened up, stung by the sneer in his voice.

"No, but I've seen something more to the point—a murdered man."

"What!"

"Just what I said. There was a man killed last night in that back room upstairs. Shot in the head through the window. I heard the shot and investigated. His body lies there now."

I saw Broussard's snaky eyes flash across toward Coombs' face, but the latter remained motionless.

"It's a d—— lie!" he ejaculated roughly. "There is nobody there!"

"Easily settled. Come with me, and I'll show you."

Rather to my surprise neither objected to the test, and we tramped in single file toward the house. Some precaution kept me at the rear, and I followed silently to the room of the murder.

There was the furniture as I remembered it, the dirty walls, the opened window. But the overturned chair stood against the wall, the cards were stacked on the table, and there was no body lying on the floor. Coombs let out a harsh laugh.

"Well, where's yer dead man? I reckon yo don't see none, hey?"

"No," I insisted, "but I did see one—twice. The body lay there where the stain shows on the floor. It has been carried away within half an hour."

"A likely story. Who could do the job? Nobody round this shebang but Sallie an' me. I sure ain't been in yere, an' I reckon it wan't Sallie. So cut it out, young feller. After breakfast you an' I'll have a talk an' find out a few things. Come on, Broussard, an' let's talk over that matter o' ours."

The two went down the stairs together, and I closed the door of the rear room and stepped out into the hall. Sallie was in the kitchen, for I heard her voice questioning the men as they passed through. Out of the window I caught a glimpse of them both disappearing through the weeds toward the bayou.

That dead body had not moved itself. Human hands had accomplished the deed during the brief period of my absence outside. Whose hands could have done it? Not those of Coombs, surely, for he could not have passed me and attained the house while I was in the garden unseen, nor Sallie, for she possessed no strength to more than drag the dead man to some nearby covert. With the possibility of this in mind I searched the vacant rooms of that floor, closets and all, thoroughly, but to no result. There was therefore but one conclusion possible—unknown parties were involved. We were not alone in the house in spite of its apparent desertion.

I paused in doubt before Mrs. Bernard's door, convinced this was the truth. Should I tell her frankly the story of the night, my vague discoveries, my suspicion? I surely had no right to deceive the woman or keep her with me. I had determined myself to face it out—to risk life, if need be, to learn the truth. But I had no right to involve her further.

I rapped at the door twice before there was any movement within. Then her voice asked who was there, and at my answer she came out fully dressed, fronting me with questioning eyes.

"The night has rested you," I said smilingly, my heart beating in swift appreciation of her beauty. "Are you ready for breakfast?"

DRY, TICKLING SENSATION
IN HER THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?
The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.
Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.
Mrs. Joseph Hiley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, and coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say "Dr. Wood's" resulted in a complete cure."
There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."
"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty five years.
It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

GOLD FOR INJECTIONS

Stubborn Wounds Receive a Valuable new Treatment

Injections of colloidal gold are being used in France with great success in the treatment of the infected wounds which have been so plentiful in the present war. According to the Revue Scientifique, MM. Cuneo and Rolland have thus treated a series of wounds in which the phenomena of infection persisted after surgical treatment. The gold was administered by the intravenous method (2 or 3 cubic centimetres), by intramuscular puncture (up to 50 cubic centimetres), or even by injections in the peripheral zone of the infected region. In cases of wounds penetrating the abdomen, the authors have successfully employed colloidal gold as a preventive of infection.

Bungalow Made of Cardboard

Bungalows and other toy houses are made of heavy cardboard boxes. The picture shows the roof, chimney, front and one side of the bungalow before they are put together, also the finished house.

Doors are cut on three sides and panels and knobs painted on them. Shutters, window boxes and flowers, shrubbery, etc., are all painted on the flat cardboard.

The chimney is made separately painted red and lined with white.

BIBLICAL ARTILLERY

Great Work of Monster Guns in Olden Times Described

R. O. Wynne-Roberts writes in the Canadian Engineer: Engineers have been busy from Biblical times to the present in building guns. It is recorded in the Old Testament (II. Chronicles 26:15) that there were "engines invented by cunning men to shoot arrows and great stones." An interesting statement given in the Encyclopaedia Britannica is that the Turks, when they besieged Constantinople in 1453, used a great force of artillery and also some monster pieces. Some of the latter survived for over 350 years and engaged the British squadron in 1807 when a stone shot weighing 700 pounds cut the main mast of the admiral's flagship in two. Artillery was employed in early wars, but its mobility and position in warfare were first established by a Swedish officer, Gustavus Adolphus, in 1631. The artillery branch of the military service was not developed and organized in England in the early days as it was on the continent of Europe, for it is stated that in the time of Queen Elizabeth the gunners in the London Tower were old men, some 90 years of age. Yet, it was in good Queen Bess's time that the Spanish Armada set sail from Spain for England and was defeated in 1588 when the British proved the power of their cannon and their skill in handling them.

IF BACK HURTS· BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood. Then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage, or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy, and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys, and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

SERBIAN NATIONAL HYMN

God of Justice! Thou Who saved us
When in deepest bondage cast,
Hear thy Serbian children's voices
Be our help as in the past!
With Thy mighty hand sustain us,
Still our rugged pathway trace,
God, our Hope, protect and cherish
Serbian crown and Serbian race!

Bind in one links our kindred,
Teach the love that will not fail,
May the loathed fires of discord
Never in our ranks prevail.
Let the golden fruits of union
Our young tree of freedom grace;
God, our Master, guide and prosper
Serbian crown and Serbian race!

On our sepulchre of ages
Breaks the resurrection morn.
From the slough of direst slavery
Serbia anew is born.
Through five hundred years of durance
We have knelt before Thy face
All our kin, O God, deliver!
Thus entrusts the Serbian race.

Complete Motor-Car Baths

A new use of the motor-car is now being tried at the front—portable motor-car bathing outfits for soldiers. The motor-bath-car carries twelve folding baths made of specially prepared waterproof canvas, and provided with strong iron frames, which keep the canvas tightly stretched whil ethe baths are being used. When travelling the frames fold, so that the baths can then be packed away in a small space. The baths are placed in rows of six each side of the car, and covered by a tent made of drawing out canvas "blinds" fixed to the top of the motor-car, and fastening them to tent poles. Two boilers, each of which can boil two gallons of water a minute, are mounted on the bath-motor, paraffin sprayed under pressure being the fuel used. Water is supplied from a fifty-gallon water tank carried on the car, itself filled from the nearest water supply by means of a long hose and hand-pump.

UNIQUE INCIDENT IN TRAGEDY OF WAR

Winnipeg Men, One English, the Other German, at Death Grips in Trenches

WINNIPEG, Nov. 11—Two Winnipeg residents, one an Englishman, the other a German, in death grips in a German trench in Flanders. This is one of the caprices of fate which was recently staged on the great battlefield, and happily to relate, the Englishman is the survivor to tell the tale.

No similar incident has yet been recorded in this great war of surprises, and the circumstances connected with it are worthy of a place in the most thrilling chapters of romance which will prove not the least important feature in the histories of the fight.

The Winnipeg soldier has returned to his home in North Winnipeg after being discharged from further active service owing to wounds received while fighting at Ypres. He left Winnipeg with the first contingent, and when joining the train at Valcartier he took farewell to a number of his friends at Winnipeg. Among these gathered at the depot to see him off was a German who for several years previous had been his next door neighbor in North Winnipeg. In this capacity, too, they had been exceptionally good friends, and in the soldier's reminiscences of Winnipeg, when filing in the trenches, he frequently turned his thoughts back to the happy hours he had spent with his German friend.

Terrific Death Struggle.

Then one night came the order to take the German trenches. The Winnipeg soldier took part in that great victorious drive. He reached the enemy trenches, and jumping over the parapet fell on a German. Both lost their rifles in the collision and the combat turned into a death struggle of the catch-as-catch-can style. It was pitch dark. Finally, the Winnipeg man gained the advantage, and had his enemy by the throat in a death grip. At that moment an illuminating shell passed over head. By its rays the triumphant Winnipegger was able to see the face of the victim. Imagine his amazement when he saw in those features the face of the man who bade him good-bye in Winnipeg in August of 1914.

The friends to whom the soldier was relating his experiences asked for the result of the fight. "Did you strangle him?"

The soldier replied: "Not a word passed from either his lips or mine. A comrade seeing by the light of that shell that I had lost my rifle stepped over and bayonetted the German. We held the trenches all night, and dawn confirmed my suspicions that my former friend was dead. I felt positive he recognized me, and all that concerns me now is the question: "How did he get over there?"

No Cause for Hilarity.

At a dance given by a social club there was a man who met with a mishap on the floor, due to his lack of skill in dancing.

A little later the man sought out one of the guests and said:

"Sir, you are the only gentleman in the room."

"Thank-," replied the other drily. "May I inquire what motive has led you to seek me out for this complimentary outburst?"

"Why," explained the man, "when I tripped in the tango just now and fell sprawling to the floor incidentally ripping out a large section of my charming partner's gown, you were the only one in the place that did not laugh."

The other smiled grimly.

"The explanation lies in the fact that the lady is my wife, and that I have paid for the gown."

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

MAKING A MAN.

Hurry the baby as fast as you can,
Hurry him, worry him, make him a man,
Off with his baby clothes, get him in pants,
Feed him on bran food and make him advance.
Hustle him as soon as he is able to walk,
Into the grammar school; cram him with talk.
Fill his poor head full of figures and facts,
Keep on a jumping them in till it cracks.
Once boys grew up at a rational rate,
Now we develop a man while you wait.
Rush him through college, compel him to grab
Of every known subject, a dip and a dab.
Get him in business and after the cash,
All by the time he can grow a moustache.
Let him forget he was ever a boy,
Make gold his god and scramble his joy.
Keep him a hustling and clear out of breath,
Until he wins nervous prostration and death.

Mother, wife, daughter, sister, is it not in your power to make some one happy? Do you abandon thoughts of self sufficiently to make the happiness of more consequence than your own? Do you use all your gentle arts and influence to attain an object so desirable? Then you do not have to seek your own contentment. It comes to you in the realization that there is one heart, at least, dependent upon you for happiness. And if you realize also that the variation of a tone carries weight, that the expression of a smile, a glance, the significance of a word, an action may make or mar the sunshine of a day for that one and if you regard this trust more sacredly than the keeping of the most precious jewel—then you need not feel the rivalry of stranger women nor rumships, not any other business or pleasure. Thus the charm of your presence gladdens the spot made most holy on earth, bearing the sacred title of home.

If you have any doubt in your mind as to the good that can come to you by living in the sunshine way, we ask you to try for one day and prove by personal experience whether or not if it is worth your while to scatter sunshine. Begin at once by trying to make those about you in your home happier. Keep a sharp look-out for little opportunities of helpfulness. Be courteous and kind whenever you speak or are spoken to. Be pleasant to everyone everywhere. Be willing to sacrifice your own personal enjoyment if by doing so you can make another person happier. Do all this and see when night comes if your own heart is not full to overflowing with peace and joy unspeakable.

DUTY.

How many times we could make our mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers happy! But for the lack of thoughtfulness we so oftentimes forget our duty until it is too late, and we make our lives a sorrow. In their disappointments, trials and troubles we could often soothe and help just by doing our duty. We forget the disappointments which comes upon others, but are continually looking at those which come upon ourselves, and thereby neglect our duty. We do not think that everyone bears as great, or greater burdens than we. If we could forever keep in mind the times that we have felt depressed, and how we wished for a kind, sweet word or smile, and, too, how we rejoiced to see our mother's and father's sweet face smile upon us, or give just one word of cheer. Then after we get this word of cheer, why do we forget our duty?

HOME COURTESIES.

In the close relations of members of the same household and the constant contact through long association, there is apt to be a lack of the friendly greetings and delicate attentions which are given to visitors and strangers in the household. Children are commonly not trained to see courtesies in their treatment of parents and one another. Husband and wife do not preserve their first gracious care of each other. But thoughtful and loving little services sweeten and pour the oil of joy over daily experiences. When a husband or son is prompt and helpful in placing her chair for her at the table, what women does not feel happier?

An act of courtesy cultivates in its performer more appreciation and attachment. The spirit which prompts little attentions and the habit which preserves them will banish hard feeling, sharp words and alienations that naturally and easily come in times of difference of judgment or conflict of interest.

There is no fault so hard to overcome as the hasty temper. We may make any number of good resolutions, and then the first time we have any provocation away we go without an instant's warning, and before we realide what we are doing the unkind words have been spoken, and no matter how much regret we feel they cannot be unsaid.

TEA TIME AT COLLEGE

Frocks of Serge—Ribbon Trimmed

RUFF CUFFS INTERESTING

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Tea time at college, just at candle light, is perhaps the most enjoyable time of the day. The lonely girl from the West meets the lonely girl from the East, and friend-ships spring up which often endure through life. Many and varied are the topics of conversation at these late afternoon gatherings—clothes, of course, come in for a large share of attention, and often a girl with a small clothes allowance is given a hint or two which helps her to improve her appearance with little added cost.

The Girl With Deft Fingers.

College and boarding school girls often enjoy an hour or two of sewing now and then; it varies the monotony of study and enables them to add effective little touches of their own to frock and blouse, rendering them somewhat different, and more suited to their own personality. At tea the other afternoon, one girl wore a simple serge jumper frock made with short full skirt and sleeveless over blouse and an underwaist of dark blue crepe Georgette veiling emerald green crepe Georgette. The guimpe was made with a high collar finished at the top with a tiny frill of white and closed straight down the front with small dull gold buttons. Narrow black moire ribbon formed the girdle closing on the left side in a small flat bow with long streaming ends. Six bands of the moire ribbon had been set on to the skirt at graduated intervals, giving the effect of flounces and adding wonderfully to the appearance of the simple frock. The ribbon, which the wearer had herself applied, made the commonplace dress most attractive and unusual.

Ribbon Trimmed Serge Frock

Variety in Collars and Cuffs.

The simplest frocks or blouses may be made attractive and becoming by adding contrasting cuffs, or an unusual collar, these may be made removable and others substituted at will, thus achieving a pleasing change when the dress is becoming somewhat worn. It is an easy matter to fashion any number of these contrasting sets from bits of velvet, or ribbon (which is at the height of popularity for trimmings of all sorts just now), crepe Georgette, or chiffon. Nothing is softer or more becoming than a hemstitched collar of crepe or chiffon; it will add a dressy look to the plainest of costumes. There is great choice in the girdles, too, this winter. One of the popular notions is the narrow band of velvet, faille, or picot edged moire ribbon, drawn around the waist and tied in long ended flat bows.

Possibilities of Guimpes

Perhaps the greatest number of possibilities for varying the simple dress, when one has a limited supply of clothes, lie in the guimpe. These, as a rule, are charmingly simple, depending for effect upon the colour contrast, the soft sheerness of the material, and perhaps a button or two, or a jeweled buckle by way of trimming. The everyday dress of serge, taffeta, or broadcloth may have a variety of these guimpes for all hours of the day—for morning wear there will be one of plain black satin or taffeta; for afternoon and informal evening affairs, club luncheon and teas, a guimpe of crepe Georgette chiffon cloth or net, in a harmoniously contrasting shade will render the costume dressy enough and most becoming.

Home Health Club

By DR. DAVID H. REEBER

Getting back to nature: The scrap that is going on among our brothers across the big pond is helping the doctors to unlearn a great many things about the treatment of wounds and it has also brought out some very valuable information about the spread of preventable diseases that will be world-wide in benefits.

When I was about 20 years old I was one day helping in the digging of a well at the home of my mother's sister. My part of the job was to operate the windlass in hoisting the dirt, the men down in the hole did all of the work (?) One morning as I was about to let the empty bucket down to be refilled my attention was called suddenly to something else, the bucket was knocked over and went flying downward. In my attempt to stop it and prevent hurting the man below I was struck a terrible blow just above the eye by the protruding end of an immense iron spike that had been driven part way into the windlass to hold the rope.

I stopped the bucket in time to save the man below, but I was so stunned by the blow that I would probably have fallen in myself had it not been for an aunt who was standing nearby. She immediately examined the cut and then hastened to the house after telling me to keep my hands away from it and let the blood flow freely. She quickly returned with a spoonful of brown sugar and a bottle of camphor with clean cloths or rags for bandages. She placed the sugar on a piece of cloth folded to several thicknesses and a little larger than the wound, then she saturated sugar and cloth with camphor and bound it on the wound.

I resumed my work and although the cut was deep and perhaps an inch long, there was not the faintest sign of a scar left when it healed. The soreness and pain seemed to disappear almost immediately. The dressing was left on 24 hours and then repeated once only.

On the field of battle some one ran short of the modern surgical dressings and antiseptics and used the old-fashioned brown sugar with results that surprised the surgeons and nurses. In many other cases where dressings of any kind were impossible to obtain, it has been found that the sunshine and fresh air was a splendid healing agent while the blood that flows out of a wound is as good as an antiseptic as can be made by man. If a wound bleeds freely and is bound up in clean cloths without the loss of too much blood, the chance of infection is small.

In the case of old sores that have resisted all efforts of the doctors, we find that exposure to sunlight for an hour or so daily and then a liberal dusting of powdered calindula mixed with a little powdered boracic acid will bring about surprisingly satisfactory results. After applying this dry dressing the sore should be covered with sterile absorbant cotton which may be kept in place of bandages or surgeons plaster. This dressing may be applied twice daily.

Dear Doctor!: Am 50 years old, was never very strong but have been able to do the work of the family until last summer when I became sick with something like nervous prostration. Had no appetite and what I did eat did me no good. I felt like crying all the time. Have a burning sensation in my mouth and tongue, particularly on the right side; there is something like a granulated surface on the inside of the cheek and throat seems irritated, which makes me very nervous. Doctored all summer and have now stopped taking medicine. Am better than I was in hot weather, but get discouraged and sometimes think there is not much worth living for. Have had the grip several times very hard. Can you give me any advice.

MRS. S. P.

My advice to sufferers from nervous prostration is diametrically opposed to the ordinary treatment. If I am any judge of your condition from the description that you have given in your letter, you are not suffering so much from nervous prostration as from muscle prostration. You have been working on your nerves for years and working beyond your physical strength which has been kept up by your wonderful nerve power. I believe that you will agree with me that this is correct. The nerves have eventually given away to a certain extent, but they are still very strong, and what you need is physical as well as mental rest, a radical change in diet and a course of instructions that will give you control of your nerves and make them subservient to your will. How to do this is fully described in the Club book, Volume 2. The instructions are given under the heading of Dynamic Magnetism and are full and complete. If you will carefully observe the instructions you will very rapidly improve and the nervous prostration will be a thing of the past in your case.

The stomach trouble also needs attention. You should use the Compound Gentian and Charcoal Magnesia Tablets. Also always take just before going to bed, two tumblerfuls of hot milk. First heat the milk to blood heat by placing the milk in a double boiler then add a little scalding water, say about one-fourth its quantity, Sip it slowly with a teaspoon. Do this every night. Do not eat in the morning before 9 or 10 o'clock and make it a light meal; no meat should be taken at this time, but eggs, cereals and fruits are all right, then eat a good, hearty meal about 4 o'clock in the afternoon and the milk before retiring.

DISEASES OF THE NERVES

Are Due to Poor Blood and Only Curable Through the Blood

There is an excellent reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured the most severe cases of neuralgia, sciatica and other complaints in the group known as disorders of the nerves. This group also included nervousness and excitability. Each of these complaints exists because the nerves are not getting a proper nourishment from the blood. The reason why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders is because they make the rich, red blood upon which the nerves depend for proper tone. It is thus seen that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure nervous disorders because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood, and while they are doing this they strengthen and fortify the whole system against disease. Among the many who have found relief from pain through this great medicine is Miss Ethel Smith, residing near Burford, Ont., who says:—"Some years ago I was seized with a great pain in my right leg, between the hip and knee. It became so bad that I got no rest day or night, and often cried with the pain. The doctor said the trouble was rheumatism of the sciatic nerve. Liniments were used until they actually took the skin off, and still the pain grew worse and worse. Then all the other nerves in the limb seemed to be affected, and it kept jerking and twitching until it would have to be held to keep it still. Then the doctor put the limb in a paper mache case, but it was not long until the trouble began in my other limb and it had to be treated in the same way. I lay in that condition for three years with my whole nervous system so badly shattered that it would make me scream if any one walked across the floor. Then my throat became partially paralyzed and I could scarcely speak. During this time I had been attended by three different doctors, who did all in their power, but each said I would never be able to walk again. Then my father decided to get me Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Before I had used them long I felt them helping me. This so encouraged us that the use of the pills was continued and in a few months I was able to walk half a mile each day to get the mail. I used in all eighteen or twenty boxes of the Pills and they did what three years of doctoring had not been able to do. I am as well as ever I was in my life, and have had no return of the trouble. My family and friends think my cure was a miracle, and we give all the credit to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Loose, hip length jacket effects are among the most popular designs in the costumes of young girls and small women and both will find a pleasing model in the dress shown in the accompanying illustration.

The foundation of the style is the Norfolk jacket idea. There is a small, straight yoke across the shoulders in both front and back, and below this the material is full. The upper edge may be plainly gathered straight across, or the fulness may be pushed together to one or two points and here held in by smocking, which is perhaps the latest form of trimming for this and many other models.

There is a narrow belt at the waist, but it does not draw in the material, which flows freely on any lines it will. The sleeves are of the coat type and are full length with a cuff at the wrist, but they may be shortened to the elbow with the same finish.

The skirt is entirely separate from the jacket and may be worn with other bodices. It has four gores and is fitted to the figure at the upper part. It may have either the raised or the regulation waistline. The closing is in the front and the lower edge measures 2 yards in the medium size.

In many of these dresses we see the jacket of a plain color such as Belgian blue, old rose, lavender, &c., and the skirt of white, but both may be of the same goods. In using gingham a combination of plain and plaid or striped material will be found excellent.

The dress pattern, No. 7303, is cut in sizes, 14, 16, 18 and 20 years. Medium size requires 2¼ yards of 36 inch dark material and 2⅜ yards of 36 inch light material.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A MODERN GALATEA.

"Hearts Have Changed Little Since Pygmalion's Time."

By CRITTENDEN MARRIOTT.

[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

As Wykoff entered the parlor a young man who was warming his hands at the fire looked up.

"Hello, Wykoff!" he said languidly "It's you, of course."

Wykoff did not seem any better pleased at the meeting than did the speaker. "Humph!" he remarked disgustedly. "I might have known I'd find you here, Meredith."

"It's mutual," returned the other with a gesture of resignation. "I can't for the life of me see how you can afford to neglect business this way, old man. Maybe, though, you have seen Forbes this morning."

Wykoff shook his head. He did not seem in the least interested.

"He was looking for you," went on Meredith. "I don't know what he wanted, but I imagine from his manner that it was something important. He said he would be at his office till 5 o'clock. It's nearly that now, and you had better hurry if you want to see him."

"Forbes can wait. Look here, Meredith! I'm tired of seeing you hanging around here all the time. I wish"—

Before Wykoff could explain what he wished a girl swept into the room, holding out her hands in grave welcome. "How do you do, Mr. Wykoff" she said quietly. "How do you do, Mr. Meredith? I seem to be honored this afternoon. Will you ring for the tea, Mr. Meredith? Sit down, Mr. Wykoff. You look troubled. I hope nothing is wrong." Her tones were calm. Any one could see that she took little interest in the affairs of others.

"Wykoff isn't troubled, Miss Curtis. That's his way of expressing extravagant joy. He was just saying how pleased he was to see me here."

The girl glanced at Wykoff, who was plainly seeking for some retort—and finding none. Airy persiflage was not in his line.

"You must not tease Mr. Wykoff," she said gently. "When is that sister of yours coming to see me, Mr. Wykoff? I want"—

The sentence was never finished, for with a rush a small girl bounded into the room and flung herself on Wykoff. "Oh, Mr. Wykoff!" she cried. "Come right out and sculp my snow man. You promised you would." She caught his hand and tried to drag him to the door.

"Bessie! Let Mr. Wykoff alone," interposed Miss Curtis. "You ought to be ashamed of yourself."

A gleam came into Meredith's eyes. "Out of the mouths of babes and sucklings," he quoted gayly. "Positively you are getting quite a reputation, Wykoff! Keep on and maybe you'll get a real client some day—somebody who wants to be 'sculped' in marble, to adopt Miss Bessie's charmingly expressive word."

Wykoff winced. No one knew better than he that so far he had not made a moneyed success in his art; sculptors have little honor in western America. He had known Meredith all his life and, being tongue tied himself, had greatly admired the other's glibness until he himself had become a target for it. He hesitated now, angry all through, but fearing if he spoke at all he might say more than he intended.

Little Bessie, however, had no such scruples. Deliberately she fixed her eyes on Meredith. "I don't like you," she deposed positively.

"Bessie!" Miss Curtis was scandalized.

"I can't help it, Sister Mary. I don't like him. So there!" She turned to Wykoff. "You promised," she reiterated wistfully, "and I've got a snow pile all built and"—

Reluctantly Wykoff rose. "I really did promise, Miss Curtis," he declared "and I suppose I must keep my word."

He spoke sorrowfully, for he hated to leave the field to his rival, even though all he could do was to stand and take punishment and pretend he liked it.

But if Meredith expected to profit by the other's disappearance he reckoned without his host—or his hostess. Miss Curtis talked on in the grave, quiet way that had stirred the heart of more than one man, but she gave him no chance to bring up the question which lay nearest to his somewhat sophisticated heart—the question he had come resolved to ask before he left. Finally, when the conversation began to languish, she rose, declaring that the house was abominably hot. She insisted on going out to see what Mr. Wykoff had done with the snow man.

Meredith made no demur. Wise in the ways of women, he knew better than to try to force the conversation. In the girl's existent mood he did not fear Wykoff and welcomed rather than otherwise the chance to break some shafts of wit on what he deemed that gentleman's sluggish intellect. Wykoff, he thought, afforded an excellent foil for his own brilliancy.

When he and Miss Curtis reached the front door neither Wykoff nor little Bessie was in sight. A line of footsteps, however, led across the snow to where a clump of evergreens stood in the corner of the lawn, and toward these the girl led the way.

Her feet sank soundlessly in the deep carpet of snow, and they rounded a bush and came upon Wykoff before he heard them.

Bessie had disappeared, and Wykoff was alone for the moment—and yet not alone. Before him rose a splendid figure—the figure of a goddess or of a woman of heroic size, on whose exquisite features, smoother and fairer than ever sculptor cut from living marble, rested a look that made Mary Curtis catch her breath—the look of one who, capable of all things, was yet imprisoned in an icy shell from which no lover's kiss had called her. One arm hung by her side; the other, bare to the elbow, was raised in warning—or was it invitation? From her slim neck the Grecian drapery ran down in pure flowing lines to the trampled snow which had given her birth.

As she gazed, open eyed, Wykoff dropped his knife and stretched out his arms to the statue.

"Galatea!" he cried. "Galatea! Come to life! Come to life!" His words trailed away indistinguishably.

Meredith shook off the spell that had for an instant bound him in spite of himself and burst into a laugh that jarred.

"Bravo, Wykoff!" he cried. "That figure's great! Really, I didn't know you had it in you! It's a good likeness too! Of course it doesn't do Miss Curtis justice, but"—

"Hush!" Gently but firmly Mary Curtis pushed him aside and stepped forward. A strange new look burned in her eyes, a look of wonder, perhaps of rapture. "What were you saying of Galatea, Mr. Wykoff?" she asked gently. "I could not hear you distinctly."

"He was making love to her!" chuckled Meredith. "Fancy old Wykoff making love to a snow woman. Playing Pygmalion to an icy Galatea. You can't deny it old man"

Mary Curtis did not even turn her head. Her eyes were fixed on Wykoff. With a shade of wonder in them she waited for him to answer.

At last he spoke. "I don't want to deny it!" he choked. "I want to tell it! I want to cry it out so that Galatea cannot help but hear and heed. If I could say it as I think it, I know she would wake to life and answer me. But I never shall say it. I shall never dare to say it. I—"

Mary Curtis raised her hand. "Perhaps you have said it," she answered softly. "Hearts have changed little since Pygmalion's time. Perhaps Galatea may not be so frozen as you think! Perhaps"—

With a cry Wykoff caught her in his arms. "Galatea!" he cried. "Galatea!"

"Well, I'll be hanged!" Meredith was staring open mouthed at the two. "Don't mind me," he continued. "I was just going away."

Mary Curtis disengaged herself, laughing. "Don't go, Mr. Meredith," she protested. "We want you to"—

"To be our best man," interrupted Wykoff.

Curious Lore About Mandrake.

Perhaps the most extraordinary of the properties attributed to mandrake are those which it shared, in common with the rastrivtreva of Russia, of enabling housebreakers to pick locks, which is certainly one of the most amusing developments of the solar theory. "Love," it is said, "laughs at locksmiths," but the connection between the mandrake and "burgling" seems a little forced. There is a tradition that the moonwort will unshoe horses if they step upon the plant, and similar powers have been attributed to the vervain and the mandrake. It is, on the other hand, still part of the rural lore of Oxfordshire, Buckinghamshire and Hampshire that the root will improve a horse's condition, but this seems to be founded upon the identification of the mandrake with the bryony, which played such a great part in old English herbalism. It is, however, more than doubtful whether the plants belong to the same class. But both are alike in the curious wealth of legend which surrounds them. East and west meet in their folk and flower lore.—Chambers' Journal.

Harmless.

A district visitor was paying calls on the folk in a row of cottages and was shocked by the conduct of a shabbily dressed old gentleman who passed from door to door in a great rage and threatened the occupants with all manner of dire penalties.

"Dear me, what a peculiar old man!" she exclaimed to one of the tenants. "Why do you permit him to abuse you in that fashion?"

"Oh, we don't mind in the least, ma'am," answered the tenant, with a twinkle in his eyes. "We're quite used to his little ways by now. He's been a harmless lunatic for ten or eleven years."

"You don't say so! Poor old fellow! What particular form does his madness take?"

"Optimism, ma'am. He comes for the rent every Monday and actually allows himself to fancy that he'll get it!"—London Answers.

The Faust Legend.

For 1,400 years the Faust legend—the sale of a human soul to a devil—has existed. The first recorded hint of its vitality is given in the sixth century story of "Theophilus." That story suited the early Christians in their efforts to stamp out the necromancing devices of evilly disposed persons prone to seek power by unholy means. The association of the name of Faust, however, with the legend is not more than 400 years old. The likeliest prototype of the modern Faust is the man of the same name who in Cracow boldly proclaimed himself a professor of magic. In the sixteenth century stories Helen of Troy was bestowed by Mephistophales upon Faust, and not until the middle of the eighteenth century does there appear a shadowy Margaret, in the form of a "beautiful but poor girl," who afterward develops into the Margaret of Goethe.

About Baby

III.

BABIES are frequently over-fed. Their capacity for food is very small—at birth 1-oz., at two months 3-ozs.

It is the amount of food digested that nourishes.

Do not feed Baby just because he cries, probably the reason is indigestion from over-feeding, not hunger.

The nature of the Food should be right as well as the quantity. Doctors and nurses throughout the world recommend

Acceptable Toys for the Children

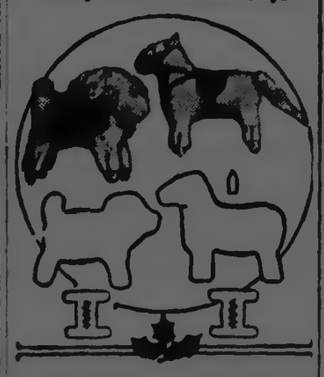
Doll's House of Cardboard

A flat box of strong cardboard and some red, white and green water-color paints are required to make this doll's house. A view of it is given in the picture above, also a picture of the roof and of the front and one side. The roof and chimneys are to be made separately.

Two large, square openings are cut out at the front and above them an oblong is cut on three sides. Bent outward this forms an awning that is painted in red and white stripes. A door is cut in the side and panels and doorknobs painted on it. Openings are cut in the roof to hold the chimneys and it is painted in green squares to simulate shingles.

The house and chimneys are painted red lined with white to simulate bricks. White paper pasted over the windows will look like shade. After the parts are made they are fastened together with paper fasteners.

Easily Made Animal Toys



Animals, that please the little ones, are made of canton flannel or plush, and stuffed with sawdust. Pins with black heads, beads, or regulation artificial eyes are used, and bits of lamb's wool or fur provide the required hair. A dog and pony are pictured here, made of white canton flannel, also outlines of patterns for cutting them. Each animal is made of three pieces, the two sides and a piece to be sewed underneath. This last has a slit in it for turning the figure right side out after the pieces are machine stitched together. After it is stuffed this opening is sewed up. Almost any animal may be made in this way.

GALLIENI CUTS RED TAPE.

Gives Officials Scope for Decision and They Must Show Results.

PARIS, Nov. 11.—Minister of War Gallieni has struck a death blow at the traditional red tape of the army administration in a circular to every military head in which he declares too much time and paper are wasted in referring small questions all the way up the official ladder to the minister. Hereafter he will deal only with questions which involve his responsibility as minister. The circular states that only those able to exercise the fullest initiative will be retained in the service.

"I shall not hesitate to punish any one who from ignorance or nonchalance tolerates incompetence," says the minister. "Office methods must be modernized, typewriters and mimeographing machines being used as extensively as possible. Soldiers and civilians should be replaced by women typists and stenographers recruited by preference from among the wives, mothers, daughters and sisters of soldiers killed and wounded."

GIRLS! HAVE WAVY, THICK, GLOSSY HAIR FREE FROM DANDRUFF

Save Your Hair! Double Its Beauty in a Few Moments —Try This

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

BRASS KNUCKLES AND HAND KNIVES NOW USED IN WAR

Mr. E. Alexander Powel, Back from Front in France, describes Great Conflict

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—Mr. E. Alexander Powell, war correspondent and lecturer, who was on the firing line in France for several months, arrived on board the Lafayette. of the French line Mr. Powell brought with him 3,000 feet of moving picture film taken by officers of the French army, a duplicate of which will be kept as a matter of record in the French archives. A personal letter from the French Minister of War vouches for the accuracy of the pictures, and also states that Mr. Powell is to take the pictures to the French Ambassador at Washington, and they will later be shown throughout the country.

Mr. Powell describes the first three days' fighting of the Battle of Champagne, which began with the famous French bombardment on September 25 and is still in progress. "A million and a half men took part in the battle and two hundred and fifty thousand were lost during the first three days, according to Mr. Powell. "It was not so much the ground gained by the terrible bombardment that the French and British troops looked for as for the moral and political effect. It clearly demonstrated that the German line could be pierced.

"When General Joffre began operations for the opening of that battle he began preparations on a frazer military scale than ever before made in the history of the world. He took months to bring the three thousand guns into position and station them. He built railroads up to the French trenches to carry the ammunition and had each gun supplied with two thousand shells. He also had fifty miles of special trenches dug. His orders were to concentrate the fire on the German trenches for a distance of three miles back and along a firing line of fifteen miles. He wanted the German trenches ground to a powder, and on September 25 began his battle. Incessant firing for three days and nights continued. It was one continuous roar for seventy-two hours. The gunners kept their ears stuffed with cotton and stood on their toes to avoid the concussion. When at the end of the third day the firing abated, General Joffre had accomplished his purpose and for fifteen miles along the line of fire and for three miles back a strip of territory larger than Manhattan had been cleared of German trenches.

"So complete was the work of the guns that for the first time in the war cavalry was used, and so level was the ground where the German trenches had been that the cavalry found no difficulty in charging over it. The infantry also charged over the same ground. The infantrymen were strange looking objects, particularly the French, who wear the steel shrapnel proof helmets and the gas masks. They also carry a pair of brass knuckles into which is fitted a knife. In dashing into the German trenches the French infantryman drops his rifle and engages in a hand to hand conflict, in which the knuckles knife plays a deadly part."

Mr. Powell declared that six months of incessant fighting in Northern France has caused but little difference in the relative positions of the Allied and German armies.

As for the British blockade, it is not at all differ nt in principle from that with which the North starved out the South in the Civil war. Confederate historians bitterly complained that England respected our blockade though it was not effective as to any Confederate port. We also searched ships and intercepted British cargoes consigned to Mexican ports on the doctrine of the continuous voyage, which we invented, our contention being that such shipments were really intended for the South, England saw the reasonableness of our position and used no such vigorous language in her protests as we now use to her. The British claim moreover that their submarine operations in the Baltic virtually blockade that sea, thus meeting our objections that the blockade of Germany is not an actual effective blockade.

We believe that the Allies value our good opinion, and desire and intend to respect our rights, and that no just grievance of ours will be unredressed. We believe that a less aggressive note would have been quite as effective as the present "vigorous" note and in somewhat better taste, considering the diplomatic politeness of our futile representations when another belligerent sowed the seas with mines and torpedoed neutral ships and ships with American citizens on board. We are of opinion also that the mass of Americans realize that nations fighting for their lives and for our own ideals of civilization should be left as far as possible to conduct their own war in their own way; and that while insisting on our rights our attitude should be conciliatory and sympathetic and make allowances for the difficulties of their position as England made allowances for ours when she accepted the modifications of naval principles and practice the North was compelled in her desperate emergency to adopt.—Rochester Post.

U. S. AMBASSADOR IN BERLIN FEELS BLOCKADE EFFECTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—Truly, an ambassador's life in one of the warring countries is just one trouble after another.

Ambassador Gerard, at Berlin, has appealed to Secretary of State Lansing, it became know to-day, to intercede with Great Britain to hit her blockade just long enough for him to get some shoes and haberdashery for his personal use through from London. He cannot get what he wants in Germany, he said. Also the ambassador stated that he would like to have some gasoline, none being available for private use in Berlin.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses!

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read anything without glasses, and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully, now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy without glasses but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto. Fill a two ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Bon-Opto tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time. Bulgarians Routed In Attack on French

LONDON, Nov. 10.—A Daily News dispatch from Milan says that Signor Bassi, special correspondent of the Stampa, in Serbia, succeeded in reaching French headquarters at Strumitza and sends a thrilling account to the Bulgarian attack on the allied lines on Oct. 24. The enemy's intention was to cut the railway at Strumitza Station, (on the frontier,) and at noon he appeared on the hills overlooking the station.

General Bailloud made preparations for defense by occupying the heights on the Serbian side of the station. The main line was held by French infantry and Zouaves, with Chasseurs d'Afrique as reserves. General Bailloud's order of the day was: "Keep cover. Take great care of your lives and don't get yourselves shot uselessly, which means preserve the strength of France and utilize it to good purpose. If at a certain moment it is necessary that you should all be killed be assured that I shall let you know."

At 2 o'clock exactly the first Bulgarian shrapnel burst over the station. The terrain where the action developed, between Valantero and Strumitza Station, is rough and stony, and was made more difficult by an incessant rainfall. Across this ground while the artillery maintained a heavy fire the Bulgarians advanced to attack, four regiments strong. They adopted the German method of close formation in the attack, which was led by several parties of bomb throwers and Macedonian comitji.

The French allowed the enemy to advance without replying. When they were only a few hundred yards away from one end of the French line there burst suddenly a hurricane of bullets. The Bulgarian mass of men was mowed down terribly. The advancing line was bent, checked, twisted, and then the French 75s entered into action, sending out a storm of shells with uninterrupted fury, while at the same time machine guns were crackling in the terrible battle concert. The Bulgarian advance was immediately arrested.

The artillery and machine guns continued pounding the enemy positions until it was seen that the impetus of the attack was broken. The French did not let the opportune moment slip, passing at once from the defensive to the offensive. A general advance and attack were ordered all along the line. The French Legion and two battalions of Zouaves jumped out of the trenches and rushed enthusiastically on the enemy with their bayonets.

The Bulgarians were chased out of their trenches and pursued up the mountain slope toward the principal crest of the Plausplan Mountains. They were obliged to abondon the dead and wounded with arms and munitions, including two guns, which could not be removed because of having been damaged by the French fire.

At 7 o'clock the Bulgarians again passed over the frontier, followed by the French, who occupied the summit of a frontier hill, bringing the guns within range of the town of Strumitza. Since this feat of arms the French have not been molested and are gradually extending their left wing.

PARALYZED LIMBS.

To-day it is sleeplessness, headaches, digestive trouble, and irritability. Next thing you know some form of paralysis has developed. Mr. Alex. Hossburger, 10 Moore Street, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Nervous trouble developed into paralysis of the limbs so that I became helpless. Doctors failed me, but after using ten boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I resumed work and now feel better than I did for twenty years."

COOLS DOUGHTY WARRIORS

Seasickness Causes U. S. Boys to Lose Desire for Battle.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Seasickness has resulted recently in counteracting the fighting ambitions of several American youths. The latest of these is Hugh Roland Smith of Woodburn Ky., who sailed Aug. 6, from Mobile, for London on the Russian barque Christiane, anxious to do his bit in the allies' trenches.

Recently Smith appeared at the American Consulate and was overjoyed when aided to get a chance to work his way back to America. He said, "Believe me, Kentucky looks good." His family, not counting on the effect of seasickness on his war fever, had cabled the consulate to have him kept out of the army because he is a minor.

At the American Consulate it is learned that since the war began 88 minors have been sent home after release from the army on appeals of relatives, and that twelve others could have done so, but didn't care to give up soldiering.

Ready to Treat.

Bill Butterfield was just recovering from a long spell of drinking and felt disgusted with himself.

A well-known temperance man caught him in the mood, and Bill was persuaded to go and take the pledge.

There was joy in the Temperance Hall that night when Bill took the total abstinence pledge.

All formalities gone through, Bill looked at his pretty pledge card, and a badge they had given him, and said to the chairman:

"Now, what have I to pay?"

"Pay!" said the chairman, "oh, nothing. We are amply repaid by making you a teetotaller."

"Oh, but I must pay something," protested Bill.

"Not a penny," said the chairman.

"Well, then," said Bill, "let's go across and have a couple o' pints on it, anyhow."—Tid-Bits.

MAMMA! DON'T YOU SEE YOUR CHILD IS SICK, CONSTIPATED

Look at Tongue! Move Poisons From Liver and Bowels at Once.

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Syrup of Figs" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious "fruit laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside" cleansing. Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look and see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Co.

CHIEF'S WIDOW WAS MURDERED

Buffalo Detective at Work on Case Seeks Details From Two Men Who Found Mrs. Parkers Body on Road.

BATAVIA, Nov. 13.—The autopsy performed on the body of Mrs. Orrie Parker by Coroners E. E. Snow and W. B. Waterhouse at this place, together with the investigation of the case thus far conducted, has convinced the authorities that Mrs. Parker was attacked and murdered.

Detective Thomas O'Grady of Buffalo, who yesterday was called upon for assistance to solve the mystery, arrived here with several operatives this morning. Accompanied by Justice George W. Babcock, they immediately left for the Tonawanda reservation, where a third investigation will be conducted.

Fred Forbes, a white man, and Charles Scrogges, an Indian, have given information which may be important. Mr. O'Grady will question John Hammond and Joseph Brackett of Gasport, the two men who informed the authorities they found the body of the woman lying in the road. He wants to get their story first-hand.

It was said this morning at the office of the district attorney that one or more arrests might be made before the end of the day.

Mrs. Parker, who was about 60 years old, was the wife of a famous chief of the Tonawanda Indian tribe.

TAKE "CASCARETES" IF HEADACHY, BILLIOUS AND CONSTIPATED

Best for liver and bowels, bad breath bad colds, sour stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, bilious-ness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver, delayed, fermenting food in the bowels of sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excessbile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Allies Smashing Through The Bulgar Lines

BRITISH SUB SUNK AT THE DARDANELLES

FRENCH FOLLOW UP VICTORY BY SMASHING ATTACK ON BULGARIANS

Reinforcements Are Being Rushed at Top Speed and Allies Will Endeavour to Break Through Enemy's Centre as the Quickest Means of Getting to the Aid of the Hard-Pressed Serbians---French Artillery is Much Superior to the Bulgarians'

GERMANS ON DEFENSIVE IN THE EAST

PARIS, Nov. 13. Following up the reverse they inflicted on the Bulgarians in the Veles district in Serbia, the French are making strenuous efforts to-day to smash their way completely through the Bulgar line as the quickest means of getting to the aid of the desperately pressed Serbian army west of Nish. Reinforcements are being rushed to the French front at top speed. Forces have been detached from the body of the British troops engaged in an attack on the Bulgar left wing, in the Dorian Lake region, to add impetus to the Allied drive at the centre. Along the Vardar River, the French artillery is playing an important part in the fight. It is much superior to the Bulgarian's batteries.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The following official statement was issued by the French War Office:

"From the 6th to the 10th of November there were many reconnaissances without any serious engagements. During the day of November 10th the Bulgarians subjected the railroad station at Krivolak to violent bombardment. Upon the left bank of the Cerna we have captured the villages of Krusevo, 25 miles north of Monastir, and Sierkovo. In the region of Valandovo and Rabrovo no event of importance took place during the day of November 11th."

SALONIKA, Nov. 13.—The entire Bulgarian force operating west of Vardar, Southern Serbia, has been endangered by simultaneous offensives undertaken by the Serbian and French troops. The Serbs have retaken the offensive in Supagora district, and have defeated the Bulgarians at Katchanik Pass, inflicting such heavy losses that the invaders were demoralized. Two French cavalry raids have cleared the ground between Krivolak and Veles.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—In a report on additional credits to be asked of the Chamber of Deputies for 1915, the Budget Committee estimates that the military expenditures for the first seventeen months of the war will be $4,287,712,200. The bill providing for a new French loan was passed by the Chamber of Deputies last night.

LONDON, Nov. 3.—The Germans and Austrians are losing a little ground here and there all along their Eastern front to-day. They are not in general retreat, but are nearly everywhere on the defensive, and are not maintaining it very strongly. The Russians attacks are particularly vigorous in the north, in the Riga and Dvinsk regions, where Marshal Von Hindenburg is opposing them in Volhynia, and against the Austrian line in Galicia strong attacks are also being made. The gradual collapse of the German offensive is attributed by British experts to the weakening of the Austro-German forces for the Balkan campaign, and probably in part to inadequate ammunition supplies.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Furious artillery fighting but no infantry encounters are reported on the Western front in the official communique issued to-day. The fiercest of the artillery duels occurred in the Belgian Boesinghe region, along the Calonne trench in the Artois, at Dompierre, between the Meuse and Moselle Rivers, and in the Apremont district.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The Evening Sun to-day says: "An Italian Cabinet Minister has informed the Evening Sun that it was a German, not an Austrian, submarine that sank the Italian liner Ancona, and that the Italian Government regards the Ancona sinking as the opening of hostilities by Germany against Italy without any declaration of war having been made.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—A London cable this morning says that German prisoners captured on the Russian north front report a quarrel between Von Hindenburg and the Kaiser over the failure of the former to capture Riga and Dvinsk because of the lack of men which the Kaiser could not supply because of the great need of men for the Balkan campaign.

BERLIN, Nov. 13. The British submarine E20 was sunk at the Dardanelles on November 5th, said a Constantinople official report received to-day. Three of the vessel's officers and six men were captured. The submarine was of the most modern type of 800 tons, and had eight torpedo tubes and two quick-firers. Its destruction is attributed to the recent anti-submarine precautions adopted by the Turks.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 13.—The loss of an Allied torpedo boat on the Saros Gulf coast, north of Gallipoli Peninsula, on Wednesday is reported to-day in delayed official services from Constantinople. The vessel went aground and sank.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The torpedoing of the Den of Crambia, 4,949 tons, owned by the Barri Shipping Co., was announced to-day. The crew was saved.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The destruction by a submarine, supposedly an Austrian, of the Italian steamship Firenze, 3,971 tons, with the death of six out of 33 passengers and fifteen of the crew of 111, is reported in advices from Italy to-day.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The British submarine E20, last in service in the Sea of Marmora, but unaccounted for since October 13, probably is lost, the Admiralty admitted to-day. A wireless from Germany says three officers and six of the missing vessel's crew have been taken prisoners.

THE ALLIES ARE NEGOTIATING WITH GREEK MINISTRY

Will Seek to Ensure the Allied Force Now in Serbia Against Unforeseen Circumstances

NO DECISION YET

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ATHENS, Nov 13. Negotiations between the Greek government and the Allied governments are in progress today to ensure the allied force in Serbia "against unforseen circumstances resulting from the present Greek attitude." It is believed "unforseen circumstances" means either demands by Greece that the allies evacuate her territory or wars spread by Turkey and Bulgaria on to Greek soil in retaliation for the Athens regime's failure to make such a demand.

THE CALL TO THE COUNTY OF PETERBORO'

A complete battalion by the time the spring training season comes—750 more recruits by the end of next April. That is the task before the city and county if the 93rd Battalion is to be purely a Peterborough unit. It is a man sized job—a proposition that will require earnest, sincere effort, and a spirit of co-operation and civic pride throughout the county, but it can be accomplished if the people of Peterborough County will get the proper viewpoint and look upon the matter as one in which they are directly interested.

Just let us tell what it means—750 men by the first of May. It means an average of 35 recruits a week steadily through the next five and one-half months, which is just slightly under the average enlistment rate in Peterborough since August 1st last. To complete the battalion in the time specified we must maintain the same pace until next May as has been set in the past few months. It means more than that because every recruit of the 35 per week must join the infantry while out of the 540 men enlisted here since August 1st 160 were were for the artillery or Mounted Rifles, so that the infantry enlistment for the period under consideration averaged only 25 a week. That average must be increased 10 men a week to complete the 93rd by spring.

THE CITY'S GOOD RECORD.

The City of Peterborough has set up an enviable record so far in recruiting. In regard to the infantry the 57th as a city unit was expected to recruit only in the city, and as a matter of fact over 90 per cent. of all the infantry recruits who have left Peterborough were resident in the city. The same condition applies to the artillery recruits, while for the Mounted Rifles, which as a cavalry corps might have been expected to draw largely from the country districts, the city once more supplied four-fifths of the men. In fact up to the organization of the present battalion Peterborough city received no assistance to any appreciable extent from the county in recruiting any of the quotas she was called upon to supply. The Lakefield recruits went to Port Hope as part of the 46th, the Norwood and Havelock men were with the 40th of Cobourg, and with the exception of a few men from the immediate countryside Peterborough was thrown upon its own resources. The city arose to the occasion, supplied what recruits were asked, and The Examiner has no doubt that she will continue to offer her sons.

But the 93rd Battalion is not a city affair—it is a county regiment, and the townships must awaken to a sense of their responsibilities in this respect. True Peterborough County, although large in area, is peculiar in one sense, and that is that the City of Peterborough is the only large centre. That perhaps throws more responsibility on the rural districts, and some sections of the county have utterly failed to comprehend their duty to the Empire. Other parts have done magnificently. Lakefield is one bright example to the rest of the county, turning out seventy of her best young men—a fine record. Keene also stands out prominently, but the fine showing of those two small places only makes that of other sections the more noticeable.

PLENTY OF MATERIAL.

Throughout the townships of Peterborough County there are hundreds of young men, farmers and farmers' sons; strong, healthy, the kind of material that make splendid soldiers. At the Norwood Fair there were enough young men of military age, and apparently of military fitness, to make two battalions. These are the men that must be awakened to the needs of the hour. Many of them apparently do not realize there is a war on. True they are not brought so closely into the spirit of the thing as are the people in the city. They have not the inspiration of martial music and of seeing troops in khaki, but surely by this time they must realize that their services are needed. The argument that they are needed on the farms is in a sense nonsense. In France the women and the old men do the farm work, and many of the young men could be spared here.

How many men have enlisted from Smith Township excepting those from Lakefield? And how many from Otonabee except from the Keene district? How many from North Monaghan except those living just outside the city? How many from Douro? Or Ennismore? Or Dummer?

MUST BE ORGANIZATION.

To ensure the success of the Peterborough County Battalion there should be a recruiting organization in every township: The county should be organized as it is by the political parties in election times. Each polling subdivision should have its committee at work, and the encouragement of enlistment should be pushed in every way possible. The men are there, hundreds of them. Many of them have not realized the danger. They must be reached and quickly. Public meetings do a good deal, but they must

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Word has been received to the effect that Gunner Thomas Miller of the Second Battery, First Field Artillery Brigade, has been officially reported wounded. On November 7th, Gunner Miller was admitted to No. 23 General Clearing Hospital at Etaples, suffering from a gunshot wound in the knee. His home is at 188 Reid street this city. Gunner Miller is a member of the battery to which Lieut. Harold Matthews is attached, and for some time has been orderly to Lieut. Matthews. He was one of the best known members of the Peterborough quota, and was in the same brigade as them, although not in the same battery. He was a member of the 24th Field Battery before war broke out.

The following letter, received to-day by the Examiner, gives some interesting news about the Peterborough boys of the 39th Battalion:

The Examiner, Peterborough.

Sirs,—Just a few lines to let you know the boys are all O.K., and are now getting ready for the Germans. Some of the Peterborough boys have gone before, but those that are left are going together. We expect to have a "big blow" before we go and when we get over to France. It will be hard for those who are at home but by the time you receive this, we will be having a couple of pot shots at the German. The boys that can not come with us are on permanent jobs, so they will have to stay behind and follow up later on. When we get out of here there'll be lots of room over here for some more of Peterborough's boys. The names of the boys who are going are as follows:

STEERAGE IS EMPTY

LIVERPOOL, Nov. 13.—Though she had 800 emigrants booked for passage to New York, the American liner St. Paul sailed from here to-day with her steerage nearly empty. The expected passengers cancelled their passages by telegraph owing to the Government's efforts to prevent the departure of men eligible for military service.

Lake Erie Vessels Are Lost In Gale

Special to The Examiner:

ERIE, Pa., Nov 13.—The grain steamer Perry, coming loaded to Erie, is reported to have gone down outside Erie Harbour. Three rescued men were brought in by lifesavers at six a.m.

Rough weather is given as the cause.

The freighter Philip D. Armour, of Erie, was sunk off Waugameers early this morning while being towed by a tug. The freighter took the tug to the bottom with her.

PRIVATE HAROLD HENRY WITH THE 26TH BATTALION

Mr. Wm. Henry of the Children's Shoe Store received a letter to-day from his son, Private Harold A. Henry, on service in France. He was recently one of a draft from the 39th to the 26th Battalion. Private Henry says:

"I have arrived safely in France and am getting along fine. We had some trip from England. The sea was awful rough and I was sick as the mischief. We are at the base now, but are waiting orders to proceed on to the firing line which I hope will not be very long. We passed quite a few German prisoners on the way to the camp, and I think I would face any one of them. We work rain or shine over here. You should see me dressed up in my fur skin and rain coat. You would think that we were some kind of animals, but the worst of it is that when we move from one place to another we have an awful pack to carry.

BUSINESS IMPROVING.

There are evidences that "good times" are coming once again. A manager of a local bank states that the 4th of November collections showed a decided improvement over last year, showing, in turn, that more money is circulation and that business is taking on a greater activity. The improvement may be slight, but like the step-by-step progress of the Allied armies, it is in the right direction. This improved prosperity is due in large measure, perhaps, to good crops and fair prices; but a good deal of it is the reflex result of large expenditures in the matter of making munitions, and a general free expenditure of money for war purposes, this for the first seven months of the year aggregating 54 millions. Even the large amounts donated for patriotic purposes, comes back to the general public through the purchases that such funds are expended upon. There is no reason for discouragement, either in respect of commercial and financial conditions, or in the conditions of the war we are waging, or helping to carry on. There seems to be considerable money in Canada yet. The Monetary Times, a reliable financial authority, holds the opinion, that the forthcoming Dominion Government loan for 50 million could be subscribed four times over in Canada.

NO CONSCRIPTION PROBABLE

The despatches tell us that conscription if not virtually begun in Great Britain, is foreshadowed. That is, young unmarried men who do not enlist voluntarily may be subjected, if the necessity arises, to some form of compulsion. There are two kinds of compulsion, and in one sense conscription as a synonym for compulsion has been in force in both Britain and Canada, since the war began. The compulsion of a sense of duty has been enough so far to keep enlistment up to the needs of the occasion. When that fails then those who have not voluntarily yielded to the call cannot complain if measures are taken to compel them to do their duty. As applied to Britain and Canada, it cannot be claimed that compulsion is inevitable. There has been a magnificent response to the call for voluntary service, and that will continue, and may be improved by measures to force slackers to do their duty. Thus volunteers will not feel that they are doing the whole of the fighting, but that the duty of service is being equably distributed. The proposal to bring the slackers into line does not mean that Britain has abandoned the voluntary principle. So far conscription even in a modified form is not adopted in Britain. In that country as in Canada, it remains with the young men to decide whether or not they will come under conscription. It is not probable that at the present satisfactory rate of recruiting in this country we shall come to compulsory service, and it is probable that Lord Derby's hint at possible conscription measures is intended more as a preventive of the necessity than a statement of determined policy.

MUNITIONS MORE THAN MEN

Eighteen German soldiers blown to pieces by an accidental explosion during ammunition test at Fort Machorelette. The Kaiser will be angry at this loss of explosives.—London Advertiser.

BUSY BEES OF WOMEN.

It did not need the convention of Women's Institutes in Toronto to show the amount of work done by Ontario women in the interests of helping to comfort the wounded or sick soldiers, in the fighting line or in the hospitals. The convention only served to emphasize the prominence Red Cross work held in the minds of the members. Whoever moves through Peterborough with his eyes open and his ears cocked, and sees what is to be seen, and hears what is to be heard, can bear testimony to the insatiable industry, and feverish activity that fairly obsesses the female part of our population, and becomes a sort of benign monomania. In every home we see something doing; and that is an index of what is going on in every home where homes have female hands that can knit socks or roll bandages. The chief topic of social gatherings, tea-drinkings, etc., is not these days hats and feathers and furbelows; these are soon exhausted, or exchanged for histories of what individuals are doing in the way of Red Cross or allied work for the soldiers of the allied armies. If one were to peep into the door of the lecture hall of the Public Library on certain afternoons, we should see the whole large room filled with tables at which women by the score are working as for dear life, preparing dressings and other articles used in Red Cross work. The intentness of their application to their work is shown by the fact that they are so absorbed in it, that they even forego the passion of woman—talk. We even see women knitting in street cars and at concerts. This may represent an exaggerated type of female industry, and may as it sometimes does, incur the charge that it is done for effect. But is, no matter what the object, it's effect we are after, and if the effect takes the form of warm, well-knit soldiers' socks, with or without gussets in the heels, the possible little vanity of display of industry is excusable and useful as vanity seldom is. It would perhaps be just as just to say that the recruit dons khaki for effect. In both cases we hear the reproaches and comments chiefly from those who neither knit socks nor wear khaki. In this good old grumbling world we always find the arm-chair or boudoir critic—as a type of the class that does least and talks most; knows it all and knows the least; the bilious malcontent, who sees all the acts and motives of his fellow-men through jaundiced vision — a marplot and mischief-maker who discredits the soldiering trade because he is not worth the fighting his betters have to do for him, while he is permitted to have a place in the community of men and women that count.

THE VALUE OF TREE LIFE.

Why is there not a greater appreciation in the public and individual mind of the benefits and advantages of tree growth? If there were we should take greater care of our forests and of the shade trees in our streets. Everybody who reads and thinks must realize the modifying effects of forests upon climate and rain fall. Thus forests have a direct relation to our success in the growth of crops, and the equable character and comfort of our climate. In the past the settler has regarded trees as enemies to be cut down and burned. The result of a general prevalence of this point of regard has been the baring of our areas of trees, bringing in its train a greater area under crop, but a crop yield that is less satisfactory on account of the almost universal absence of tree belts or clumps.

Our lack of appreciation of the value of trees is shown by the forest fires that every year sweep our thousands of acres of woodland and destroy millions of valuable trees, and destroy value to the extent of millions of dollars directly, and do a much damage indirectly, through loss by advance of the prices of lumber. A booklet issued by the Canadian Forestry Association shows that every month between April and December, 1,400 recklessly created forest fires occur. Every twelve months more than 12,000 forest fires occur in Canada. The actual loss during the summer months of 1915 was more than ten million dollars.

Not only the owners of these forests have an interest in preventing these losses. The chief reason of the high price of lumber is the scarcity of available sources of lumber. This is the main reason why a few years ago lumber was $15 per thousand that to-day is $35 per thousand. Therefore no citizen, even if he never sees a forest, escapes the penalty of the loss of forest wealth by reckless putting out of fires, and failure to extinguish fires. The money value of the lumber industry in Canada is 200 million dollars per year, and it is asserted that two-thirds of every dollar taken out of our forests by lumbermen goes into wages, to buy food and clothing, and a thousand other things that stimulate manufacturing, call for other expenditure in wages; keep shipping and railways busy, benefitting the whole community of every calling.

We see, apart from other reasons, the wickedness of forest fires which are as a rule started by human hands —by the careless settler, or by the neglect of campers and hunters to put out the fires they kindle, which left alone, produce forest fires; so that a moment's thoughtlessness and carelessness produce fires that do thousands of dollars' worth of damage, a big price to pay, for neglect of a minute or two of work in putting out a camp fire. No spark of fire should ever be left behind by a camper or hunter.

Most of this carelessness and consequent criminal destruction of forest value comes from lack of thought; from a failure to appreciate the value of tree growth.

Coming from the forest to the city we find that city authorities do not think to the extent of realizing the benefit and beauty of tree growth in our streets. The city cuts down scores and scores of trees, but has never been guilty of planting a street tree. In this regard they are worse than the Germans; for the German forestry practice is to plant a tree for every one that is cut down. It is time that the aldermen should come to take a larger view of their responsibility in this regard. As is often been stated, Peterborough has, thanks to the public spirit of citizens, a splendid stand of street trees. Many of these have been long planted, and are reaching the end of their growing period, through time or neglect or improper care and trimming. Many trees have died, and here is an opportunity for the city undertaking the replacing of them with new trees. On all of the newer streets there should be planted by the city, which controls the streets, trees of the proper variety, at proper distances, and in proper lines. The cost would not be much; would be as nothing compared with the beauty and benefit, and comfort, that would result.

THEY MUST HURRY.

Whatever may be the precise nature of Lord Kitchener's mission to the Near East, to which Mr. Asquith made such pointed reference in his Guildhall speech, we may be quite sure that it presages disappointment for the central empires. It may be diplomatic, it may be military, it may be a great deal of both, but in any case if the Teutonic dash for Constantinople is not accomplished before K. of K. gets on the eastern battlefield it is not likely to be accomplished at all. — Montreal Herald.

BUYING A WAR BOND.

There will be peculiar gratification in holding a Canadian war bond. The opportunity will come at the end of the month. It will be available equally to the man with a hundred dollars for investment and to the big corporation. There will be no middleman. The government will sell its bonds direct to all applicants. The bonds will be purchasable by instalments and that still further facilitates a substantial response from the socalled small investor who, in the aggregate, can do great things. In buying a Canadian war bond we are lending money to our own government to help finance Canada's share of the great war. At the same time, we relieve to that extent the tremendous financial burden placed upon the Imperial government in financing its own war operations, those of some of the Allies and of the business of certain neutrals. The first impulse to purchase is naturally a patriotic one. Money has been donated in millions of dollars for purposes connected with the conduct of this war. Now the Dominion government will ask for the loan not the gift, of money for the prosecution of its share of the struggle. For that loan it will pay an attractive rate of interest. If the loan is for $50,000,000 it will be oversubscribed with ease. Monetary Times.

The young man in the bureau of information laid the railroad guide down and looked reproachfully at the woman who had turned in a volley of questions. "Madam," he said, "you can't possibly take all these trains you are asking about." "I know it," she replied, serenely, "but as long as I didn't have anything else to do I thought I'd just see for myself how much you railroad men really know about your business."—Philadelphia be followed up if results are to be obtained. The Speakers' Patriotic League whose sincere, earnest, untiring work has been responsible for the big boom in recruiting, might consider the question of a county convention as it were, inviting the reeves and councils of the townships to attend a meeting to organize the county for recruiting purposes.

The Call To The County Of Peterborough

And the people of Peterborough itself must not rest on their oars. Splendid as the young men of the city have responded there are many more who have not yet heard the call. The city must continue to do its share as it has in the past, and every citizen should get in behind the Peterborough Battalion scheme and see that it is made a success. There is a great tendency to look upon the matter as a thing apart from one. "How many recruits are THEY getting?" is a frequent question. It should be "How many recruits are WE getting?" It is our battalion, not somebody else's.

A HAPPY FAMILY.

The idea of a battalion, of eleven hundred men from Peterborough, and Lakefield, and Smith, and Dummer, and all the other familiar places is one that should appeal to every young man. Over a thousand pals going off together, not in drafts as the artillery and rifles have been going, and scattered through many units, but as a battalion with Peterborough officers at the head, and a spirit of a "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" spirit to it all. It is to be a battalion of which the county will be proud if the conduct of the men already enlisted is to be taken as a criterion. A happy family is Lt.-Col. Johnston's force—an unit where a drunken man in uniform is such a novelty that the whole battalion feels disgraced when one is heard of, and talks about the thing for days—a unit where the men respect and admire their officers, and the officers are proud of their men—a happy, well-behaved bunch of citizen soldiers.

The 33rd want between 700 and 800 of the same kind. It is up to Peterborough County.

Quaint Old Proclamation

On the age-yellowed 104th page of Deed Book No. 9, in the vault of the county clerk's office, is to be found an emancipation proclamation which antedates Lincoln's famous document by about 30 years. It is phrased in the quaint legal terms of the period, but was just as effective as the most modern indenture recorded by County Clerk McVey to-day and meant a whole lot to one Minnedab Moore—just as much in fact as Lincoln's proclamation meant later to all of Minnedab's race in this country.

Such a deed is now an antiquarian curiosity and for that reason is one worth printing. Here it is with all its musty flavour of 81 years ago:

"I, Samuel Butcher, of the county of Wood, State of Virginia, for diverse and sundry good causes me thereunto moving, and for the further consideration of the sum of one dollar, to me in hand paid by Minnedab Moore, a slave, the property of the aforesaid Samuel Butcher

"Now, This Indenture Witnesses, that the said Samuel Butcher doth hereby set free, liberate and emancipate the said Minnedab Moore, now my property as a slave, in as full and complete a manner as by the laws of Virginia I am allowed to do. Said negro slave, Minnedab Moore, is now of the age of 39 years, slender made, five feet ten inches high, a small scar just above the left knee, with a scar on the right side of his head a little behind his ear, of full black colour.

"Given under my hand and seal, this 19th day of August, 1834.

"SAML. BUTCHER."

Following is the certificate of John Stephenson, Jr., then county clerk, that the above deed was acknowledged in open court by the maker.

Minnedab Moore, the slave thus manumitted, was undoubtedly originally named Aminadab, but this had been corrupted into "Minnedab," and "Minnedab it remained. He was given, or bought, a tract of land on the very top of what came to be known in local geography as "Min Hill," from his occupancy of it. There he built a log cabin and made a comfortable living for years by burning lime. This tip is hereby referred to the County Agricultural Improvement Society, with no charge whatever. "Min Hill" is now known as McKusick's Knob. It is in Slate district and is the second highest point of land in Wood county.

The old deed of emancipation was chanced upon the other day by Attorney Ben H. Butcher, great-grandson of the man who made it. Mr. Butcher states that his great grandfather in this manner practically freed all of his slaves long before the Civil War. He was a man of liberal views and broad sympathies and took the question of slavery according to what he thought was right.—Parkesburg, W. Va., State Journal.

ONE MILL ON THE DOLLAR FOR RED CROSS PURPOSES

A most successful Red Cross organization meeting was held at the Methodist church, Rosemath, Alnwick township, Northumberland county, last evening.

Reeve Sherwin occupied the chair and several splendid musical selections were rendered. Eloquent and effective addresses were delivered by the Reverend Mr. Dawe, the Reverend Mr. Washington and Messrs. C. H. Pennefather and F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough.

At the conclusion of the address it was resolved unanimously to request the Township Council to levy a rate of one mill on the dollar for Red Cross purposes, and that a canvass of the citizens be had in addition, so as to raise a sum worthy of the township. Great interest and enthusiasm was shown and strong committees were appointed to carry the work to a successful completion.

To save firemen carrying hose high into buildings a standpipe has been invented from which water can be turned on at any floor by valves at the street level.

THE KHAKI WEAVER

From early morn till late at eve
The Khaki weaver stands;
With thoughtful mind and watchful eye
As well as active hands.

Their task is not an easy one,
As those who know can tell;
Yet they can be depended on
To do their bit right well.

Each day brings many troubles, which
Annoy and tantalize;
But still the way they push ahead
Gives reason for surprise.

For just as things are sailing on,
There comes an awful crash;
There's something wrong—the shuttles kiss
And there's a nasty smash.

And when the loom goes on the bum,
And the filling will not run,
And the threads they take a breaking fit,
There's not much time for fun.

The Harness says—I'll have a skip,
The Shuttle says—I'll fly.
The Web shouts out—I'll have a bump;
Bravo! the Bobbins cry.

And then the picking-stick groan out—
"In me there's no more prick;
My back is broke, so you must find
Another picking-stick."

These are but some, they are not all,
The trials they endure;
There's not a weaver in the land
But what could mention more.

Yet on they go, week in, week out,
All trials they overcome;
It's dauntless spirits such as theirs
That keeps things on the hum.

Doing their bit for the Empire, sure,
As well as the boys that fight.
Should they obtain the Victoria Cross?
Say! Who has a better right?

—C. Justice.

"Did you see the Doge's palace? The Grand Canal?

"Really, I don't remember."

"Yet you say you were in Venice."

"Of course I was in Venice. There's a label from Venice pasted on my suit case."

Four years ago I had a haemorrhage and after that I was examined by three doctors, who all said that I had consumption and was for a long time offered an examination permit by the City doctor and visited by City nurses. Takes Well Earned Rest After Fourteen Months In The Air

One of ten left from the original seventy-five amateur aeronauts who joined the ranks of the British flying squad at the outbreak of the war, Lieutenant Archibald B. Ford, the twenty-two-year-old son of the English "Blotting Paper King," is here on unlimited leave.

Fourteen months in active aviation work of range-finding and wireless work, having two observers killed in his aeroplane, and bring himself twice strictly wounded have told on the young pilot's nerves, and he does not intend returning to his work with the Royal Flying Corps.

On the subject of the war, he did not wish to talk, his reticence being accentuated by his own modesty and the fact that he was an army officer. Finally, however, he told of some of his experiences, and showed among his souvenirs of the battlefield a miniature Mauzer automatic gun of .30 calibre, firing ten shots, which he took from a captured aviator; a clip of rifle cartridges, which he had cut from the clothes of a dead German soldier, and the nose of a twelve-pound anti-aircraft bomb, which he had found imbedded in the framework of his machine after a flight over the enemy lines.

"The thing about aviation that is most telling on a man's nerves," said Lieutenant Ford, "is the seemingly interminable wait for the first big shell from an anti-aircraft gun. When one gets over the enemy lines a hail of small bullets usually strikes him. But that doesn't matter much. We know where most of the big aeroplane guns are, but we don't know when they are going to fire. After the shooting of all skin disorders thick and fast, but the strain is over. All sense of fear is gone. It is the fact that there is nothing to holding to his course that makes the waiting so enervating."

Aviators Work Hard.

"English aviators go up each morning and evening, spending six or seven hours a day in the air, regardless of weather conditions. They patrol the thirty-four mile battle front, extending from the coast to Switzerland, and often fly as far as Brussels, a hundred miles from their own lines.

Lieutenant Ford spoke of the superiority of the English aviator corps over that of their adversaries. He pointed out that he had seen but two hostile "Tauben" over the British lines in two months, and that these had been brought down easily. One pilot said he had been but a fortnight in the service and had made only four flights. The captive told them he could make only a right turn. The lieutenant praised the type of machine guns with which the German aeroplanes were equipped.

Canadians Make Record.

"The Canadians are making a wonderful record in this war," continued Ford, after a thoughtful pause. "The Canadians sprang something new a short time ago. Prowling about at night, they planted a couple of bear-traps of their own manufacture near the German lines, and were rewarded with two human captives. Chains were attached to the traps, and, squealing like stuck pigs, the Teutons were hauled into camp.

Madge—Gossip doesn't pay.

Marjorie—I'm beginning to agree with you, my dear. The last secret I heard cost me over two dollars for extra telephone tolls.—Judge.

FIGHTING IN THE GARDEN OF EDEN

By LOVAT FRASER

We learned recently the surprising news that a mixed British and Indian force was within a hundred miles of Bagdad. Should our troops reach their goal they will have performed one of the most dramatic exploits in the history of war. They will have marched over 400 miles from the Persian Gulf, through the lands of Adam and of Noah, to seize the place which even the Turks still call "the glorious city." Unless the Allies take Jerusalem there could be no more striking episode in the conflict beyond Europe.

The operations which have thus developed began modestly enough last November with a joint naval and military advance from the head of the Persian Gulf up the Shatt-al-Arab, the river formed by the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates. After one important action the expedition reached Bussorah, sixty miles from the sea, and perhaps the oldest seaport in Asia.

From the quays of Bussorah daring Arab navigators sailed many centuries ago and sacked Canton, in the days when Arabs held the secret of the sea. It was the port whence Sindad the Sailor, whose chronicles are plainly the exaggerated record of many genuine voyages, roved the Eastern seas. Nelson himself has left on record that he visited Bussorah as a lad in the Seahorse. Yet though the East India Company had warehouses there never before has the port flown a European flag.

The British chased the Turks fifty miles farther up the river to Kurna. One column went up the River Karun into Persian territory to save the Admiralty oil-pipe line. Another has recently pushed its way for a hundred miles through the swamps and lagoons formed by the old channel of the Euphrates and shattered a large Turkish force at Nasiriyeh. A third column has steadily advanced up the Tigris and is now at Kut-el-Amara, only 100 miles from Bagdad by land, though 200 by the winding course of the river. Long before it reached Kut the expedition was well past the worst obstacle—the shallows and rapids—on the Tigris. Though the river is at present at its lowest there should be good water all the ways to Bagdad, if we are relying on water transport, which is not clear.

An Endless Flat.

The region in which our troops are now operating is of extraordinary interest, although the immense alluvial plain between the Tigris and the Euphrates contains not a single hill and hardly a tree. It is an endless flat yellow expanse of the silt of countless ages, the richest soil in the world, the grainery of early civilization, where wheat grew wild when man first found himself. Somewhere in this area lies the traditional site of the Garden of Eden. The Arabs place it at Kurna, where our troops have been encamped since January; but Sir William Willcocks pins his faith to Mit a place far above Babylon on the River Euphrates.

There are very few corners of the world where the British Army has not marched and fought before, but this is one of them. For a parallel to the European invasion of Chaldea we have to go back to the days of Alexander the Great. The British force is traversing land over which, if we are to accept the inviting theories of Sir William Willcocks, the ark of Noah must have floated. It has passed by the sites of cities where dwelt the Sumerians, that wonderful race whose very existence was unsuspected by scholars until recent years. It is to-day within a two hours' run "by armoured motor-car" of the enormous series of mounds which are all that is left of the mighty city of Babylon. It should soon be tramping through the desolate ruins of Seleucia, where once the Greeks ruled over half a million souls. Its footsteps will ring within the gigantic vaulted hall of Ctesiphon, the last relic of the winter palace of the Parthian kings.

And then at last it all goes well, the expedition will sight the gilded dome and minarets of the mosque at Kasimin and all the flat-roofed houses of Bagdad, standing amid groves of date palms and orange trees. From the first chapter of the Book of Genesis it will pass at a stride to the very heart of the Arabian Nights, and sweep through the shady bazaars where Maroun Al-Raschid loved to roam.

The fall of Bagdad would resound more loudly throughout the East than all the battles fought between Warsaw and Ostend. Bagdad was once in the eyes of all Asia the most splendid city in the world. It was the home of the Caliphate, the centre of Islam, the abode of Moslem literature and art and science, a capital which is said to have had a population of 2,000,000. Tradition survives decay in Asia for more than in Europe, and though the Bagdad of to-day has shrunk to a place sheltering about 120,000 people, it still has a fame and a prestige surpassingly older than any city in India or China; it is mentioned in the records of Assurbanipal and Tiglath-Pileser, and on one of its quays may still be traced an inscription of Nebuchadnezzar King of Babylon.

Shattered German Dreams.

Let it never be forgotten that we British were in the Persian Gulf, and thus on the border of these ancient lands, before the Turks. Though the Turks extended their rule long ago to the borders of Mesopotamia, they are comparatively new-comers in Chaldea. They took Bagdad less than 300 years ago. They have never really conquered the Lower Tigris and Euphrates. Below Bagdad they have been tax-gatherers and sentinels and nothing more.

The loss of Bagdad would inflict an irreparable blow upon Turkish prestige, but the greatest result would be that it would strike at the very heart of the German dreams of ultimate dominion in Eastern Europe and Western Asia, which largely contributed to bring about the present war. The Bagdad railway was one of the central features of German world policy. The dreams are shattered, Great Britain is nearing Bagdad, and at Brussorah she holds the gate by which Germany had expected to emerge upon the shores of the Persian Gulf. With a revival of irrigation Chaldea ought to become again one of the granaries of the made an Eastern Hamburg. These questions belong to the still distant period of peace.

The advance on Bagdad is a daring feat of arms, but it must not be forgotten that the Turks may send reinforcements down the Tigris. The army of India, which has heavy normal responsibilities, is endeavoring to do a great many things at once.

There are only two important land campaigns in which the Allies have been completely successful. One of these is South-West Africa; the other is the campaign at the head of the Persian Gulf. With both these campaigns the British War Office has had nothing whatever to do, and it has only effectively interfered once. Its interference consists of refusing to sanction the publication in England of the Persian Gulf despatches. Could pettiness be carried farther?

WORRY Upsets the NERVES

Far more women than men suffer from nervous disorders. And little wonder, when you come to think of the thousand causes of worry and anxiety which come daily to the woman in the home.

Particularly to those who are nervously energetic the many demands of society, the numberless details of home life, and the exacting attention required by the children, sooner or later wear on the nervous system.

You begin to worry, and worry upsets the nerves. The more irritable the nerves become the more you worry. And thus is formed a vicious circle, and there is no end to your troubles. Since the nervous system holds in control all the functions of the body there soon arises a thousand little ills to make life a burden.

Nervous headaches, spells of indigestion, irritable temper and attacks of the blues tend to make you feel miserable. You cannot rest by day or sleep at nights, and what reserve force you have rapidly disappears.

It may not be convenient for you to get away for a change and a rest, but there is within your reach Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and there never was found a nerve restorative which could be compared to it.

Use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food regularly and you will soon be able to take a cheerful view of life, enjoy your daily work and forget to worry. For with good health comes new energy and strength, new hope and courage, happiness and success.

Women everywhere are praising this great food cure, because it lifts them out of this terrible nervous, irritable condition, and by its reconstructive influence enables the bodily organs to properly perform their natural functions.

COMMENCEMENT AT COLLEGIATE REFLECTS SCHOOL'S 1915 SUCCESS

Music Was Prominent in the Programme and Was a Noteworthy Departure in Regard to Students' Orchestra — Honour Roll in Scholarship, Athletics and on Battle Field.

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

The first public appearance of the students' orchestra was a pleasing feature of the annual commencement exercise of the Collegiate Institute, last night. The young musicians who compose this organization deserve every encouragement. They were heard in several numbers and received a well-merited encore. Their work was uniformly good, a credit to themselves and to the Collegiate, and with perseverance and the improvement that is bound to follow, the orchestra should be an inspiration to the other pupils possessed of musical talent, and an additional aesthetic influence upon the student body as a whole.

In this connection the several vocal selections by a chorus of pupils from Miss M. Armstrong's class in the Central School was a further indication of the recognition which music is receiving in the Peterborough Schools. Citizens who have hoped for just these ventures must have been delighted with the children's achievements. The teachers and pupils now engaged in this pleasant and profitable work are, to a certain extent blazing a trail which with attention and direction from the proper authorities, should attract larger classes in future years.

This year's Commencement was an interesting and successful as ever, and in respect of the splendid showing made at the midsummer examinations proved a timely testimonial to the application of the students and to the efficiency of Mr. H. R. H. Keenor and his staff. The audience was composed of scholars with their parents and friends. While they were directly concerned, it should be of interest to the citizen taxpayers to know and appreciate the work the Collegiate is doing. Particularly satisfying to adult observation was the pleasing presence on the part of the pupils and the little touches that designate lady-like and gentlemanly bearing. After all, the measure of a school is found in the plus qualities which it develops. Peterborough Collegiate's academic work is evidenced in the departmental examination results, but the broader field of the Institute's training are deserving of special mention.

Mr. John Crane, in the absence of Mr. B. E. Ackerman, chairman of the Board of Education, proved a capital chairman. In his brief remarks he pointed out the necessity of accomodation in the school for gymnasium, manual training and domestic science classes. At present this work is taken up outside the building. Gymnasium facilities for the boys are obtained at the Y. M. C. A. but it would be preferable to have these classes in the school. Who can say concerning the Collegiate graduates at the front that their development was not, in a large measure due to their gymnasium work while at school?

Mr. Crane presented to Miss Alice MacKenzie a gold watch for having obtained the highest marks in the county at the last High School entrance examinations. This is an annual gift from Captain J. H. Burnham, M.P., whose absence last night was occasioned by the military course he is taking at Kingston.

Athletic Prizes.

The presentation of the athletic prizes was well placed when Mr. A. D. Hoey, B.A., was chosen for the pleasant duty. Incidentally he urges the parents of the students to take a more active interest in the annual field day. The prize winners were as follows:

Staff Cup—Jack Green, Senior Champion.

Senior Champion-hip Medal—donated by W. W. Hall, Esq., Jack Green.

Junior Field Champion-hip medal—donated by H. R. H. Keenor, B.A.—Hubert Martin.

Winners of First Place in One or More Events—W. Read, A. Thomson, C. Elliott, H. Crane, C. Flowers, R. Pogue, A. McLeod, H. Young, G. McClelland, E. Smythe, H. Tudhope, Marion Nelson, Alma Dobbin, Phyllis Young, Burness Pidgeon, M. Pulking horn, Gladys Collinson, Margaret Turner, Hazel Davidson, Marion Shelton, Irene Knapman.

The Nicholls Scholarships.

In presenting the Nicholls scholarships, Mr. Duncan Walker paid a fitting tribute to the memory of Mrs. Nicholls. Commencement Day was not only the occasion marking the successes of the various branches in the school's work, but it was also a memorial to Mrs. Nicholls, who had given generous benefactions to this city. She could not have wished her donations to have been used for better activities. Mr. Walker congratulated the Principal and staff of the Collegiate Institute upon the wholesome spirit in the school and upon its scholarship. The citizens of Peterborough he said, appreciate what the Board of Education has done in the provision of buildings and teaching staffs. They are receiving full value and ample return for every cent expended.

The following Nicholls scholarships were then presented by Mr. Walker:

Honour matriculation ($20.00)—Miss Ila Giles.

Faculty Entrance, Part I ($20.00)—Clarence McKee.

Faculty Eentrance, Part I ($20.00)—Miss Virginia Coughlin.

Consistent Work.

That the local Collegiate Institute has been a consistent winner of University Scholarships is shown by results of the departmental examinations from 1910 to 1915, when the following students won scholarships for which the Collegiate students of the Province competed:

Miss K. Burnett, A. Rosborough, Miss G. Yenney, W. Adamson, Miss M. Anderson, G. Mowat, M. Huycke, Miss I. Giles, F. Soward.

The Collegiate's Honour Roll.

The Commencement programme, which, by the way, was admirably arranged, concluded with a list of Collegiate pupils who have been wounded or killed in action on the battle fields of France and Belgium. It is a splendid showing, but does not indicate the number of Collegiate boys who have responded to the call of duty by enlisting. However, the list of graduates who have sacrificed themselves is as follows:

Major George Bennett, killed in action.

Private Herbert Carpenter, killed in action.

Private Charles Dean, killed in action.

Private William Gibson, killed in action.

Private George Minorgan, killed in action.

Private Max Smith, died in England.

Private Merton Adams, died while in training.

Captain Charles Ackerman, wounded in battle.

WIRE TROUBLE WAS THE CAUSE

Wire trouble caused by the high wind was responsible for the desultory ringing of the big bell used in connection with the fire alarm system. This usually happens on a windy day. It is caused by the hanging wires being thrown together in such a manner as to make a connection which reacts on the bell in the clock tower. The trouble lasted for upwards of an hour.

"Uncle, won't you try ducking for an apple in the tub?"

"I'm getting a trifle old for those sports. I wouldn't, however, object to ducking for a slice of apple under the proper conditions, say in a hot toddy."

The Artist's Tone is the EDISON Tone

There is no such thing as an "Edison Tone." There is, in the New Edison, a Bonci Tone, a Spalding Tone, a Destinn Tone, an Anna Case Tone—each separate and distinct; each faithful to the distinctive character of the artist. But the New Edison has no tone of its own. It is merely a perfect vehicle for the reproduction of the artist's work. There is no foreign sound, no "talking machine" tone. Mr. Edison has eliminated all these. The music of the New Edison is nothing but the pure, unaltered, life-like tone of the original artist. Come in and hear your favorite record today on the New Edison. We will be glad to play it for you without obligation.

"ENLIST" IS THE MESSAGE PTE. D. H. DARRAH SENDS

Peterboro Boy Who Enlisted With the 8th C. M. R. is Now at the Front With the 1st Canadian Mounted Brigade.

DON'T MIND THE TRENCHES

Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Darrah have received the following letter from their son, Pte. D. H. Darrah, No. 11301, 1st C.M.R. brigade, machine gun section 2nd division, B.E.F., France:

Dear Father and Mother,—Just a line to let you know I am still alive and well. Hope these few lines will find you all the same at home. I wrote you a letter six weeks ago telling you I was leaving England for France, then I wrote you another from France, also a field card. Hope you got them all right.

I haven't received any mail from anyone since I came to France, only a letter from Garnett Powell, and that was written Aug. 24th. It went a good many places before I received it. I hope to hear from all soon. If my friends have written me tell them I havent received them and to write again, as I am always glad to hear from my old town.

I have been in the trenches and I don't mind it as much as lots of the others do. There is no kick coming at all. We haven't had much rain and that makes it a lot better for us.

I met a lot of Peterborough boys, also some from Marmora and Campbellford. I saw Art and George Peters and Dan White. Mr. Hayes is still in Shorncliffe and as far as I know the rest of the 8 C.M.R. are there, too. I suppose you heard Bert Mason had typhoid fever. I saw Charlie Powell awhile ago; he is now back in the hospital.

PTE. D. H. DARRAH

How is Evelyn getting along? Remember me to Father McAuley and Father O'Brien, and mother don't worry, as I am all right and in the best of health, thank God, and hope to be with you all again. Remember me to all at home, also Thomas, John and Teresa.

I wrote to my uncles in Methuen and Havelock and have not received any letters as yet.

Well this letter isn't very interesting to outsiders, but will give all to know I haven't received any news since I came to France, not even from home, and I hope to get mail soon; also tell the Peterborough boys to wake up and enlist, as the country needs their help.

Well I guess it is time for me to close. Hoping to hear from all soon I remain, your loving son,

DAVE.

SOCIALISTS CRY OUT IN FEAR OF GERMAN FAMINE

Already Bitter Need Rules in Many Families, Says Pronunciamento

BERLIN, via London, Nov. 12. — The Vorwaerts, organ of the German social democratic party, publishes a two column pronunciamento from the Executive Committee to the Social Democratic Party, declaring the government measures thus far for the regulations of the food supply and prices are only half measures. It demands the fixing of maximum prices for all important foodstuffs.

"Prices so adjusted that every war profit for the producer, in wholesale as well as retail trades, is made impossible, and even the poorest are placed in a position to obtain the necessaries of life required for their nourishment." The pronunciamento begins as follows:

"The rise in the prices of foodstuffs has become unbearable. The prices of all important provisions and other articles of daily necessity, such as fuel, clothing and footwear, have reached an exorbitant height. With anxious fears the people of the labouring class and up to the circles of the middle classes look forward to approaching winter. Already bitter need rules in many families.

"Must there be so much selfish lust for gain, and capitalist greed of profits rage unrestrainedly in the unreined free play of forces? Must millions be in want so that those shameless producers and dealers who coolly take advantage of war conditions can enrich themselves at the nation's cost?"

The pronunciamento answers the foregoing questions in the negative. It says the foodstuffs on hand are adequate, but they must be rightly distributed. The prices for swine just established, it asserts, are too high, and beef prices are not regulated.

The committee demands in addition to the fixing of prices for other foodstuffs also "an equal distribution of the foodstuffs on hand in equal rations among all the empire's inhabitants, as is done with bread, in order to avoid preferential treatment of the rich who are able to pay."

FLOUR IS UP TEN CENTS

Comment on The Market Situation—Several Commodities Are Up

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs appear in Canadian Grocer.

The event of the week in the grocery market was the advance in sugar, on Tuesday, which amounted to 25 cents. This came a little as a surprise, but was, as usual, the result of the firmness in the New York market, where both raws and refined were higher. This makes once more a comparatively high basis for sugar.

English sundries, such as jams, pickles, sauces and so forth, are up a nickle this week. The wonder is that they have not been higher than they are now, long before this, for many were practically prohibited from export, being required for the troops. Freight difficulties, too, have added to the firmness and strength of British products of this kind. Chocolate and cocoa are up two or three cents a pound. This week, in fact, sees advances in more lines than has been the case for a long time.

Dried fruits do not show any appreciation at this writing, but the market on all of them is certainly firm. In the case of most lines they are so nearly allied that strength in one often lends strength to others. Take the firmness in currants, for example: this means a corresponding and sympathetic firmness in raisins. So, too, did the firmness and strength of Valencias; not only did it put prices up on Valencias; but it imparted general firmness to the tone of kindred lines, seeded and seedless raisins and such. All along the list dried fruits are firm and high. Prunes the crop of which turned out much less than was first anticipated, are firm and high. Peaches are much in demand. Even dates, a line which is not a big seller, is firmer by reason of the fact that expected shipments did not arrive yet.

Flour is up a dime this week. This is in sympathy with the position of wheat which, in a few weeks, has gone up fourteen cents. It is claimed that the flour market is now in about the right proportion to the price of wheat. Rolled oats are up and firm at the new levels. Apparently the heavy rains in Ontario played havoc with the crop and that, coupled with a good demand, has boosted the price.

Beans and peas are very firm, and we should not be surprised to see an advance at an early date. Crops have been short and the former's don't seem to be particularly anxious to get in what crops they have got.

Molasses, which are so spectacular in its behavior some few weeks ago, has started in again with the same antics. Last week saw a rise of three cents in Ontario and at present all levels are firm and quite strong.

A GERMAN SAID IT THIRTY YEARS AGO

The following extract from the life of that distinguished German, the late Prof. Max. Muller, writing during 1884 and 1885 must greatly interest everyone at the present time:

"When one reads the discussions in Parliament one might easily fear for England; but they are mere fireworks. The nation is of good old stock, and woe to him that forgets this. England will never be conquered, never before the last Englishman, the last Scotsman, the last Irishman—aye the last Australian, the last Canadian, the last Newfoundlander, the last Sikh—aye the last Yankee, has fallen.

"Every man in Europe is now a soldier. England is the only land that has not taken to arming the people. Drive England into a corner, and tomorrow every man is a soldier. There may be jealousies between her colonies, but if it came to extremities, the colonies would allow no hair of England to be touched. Even India, which was formerly a danger, has shown that England's enemies are her enemies."

Will Moving Pictures Supplant Novels?

It is the fashion to attribute to the motor car and the motion picture all social phenomena no otherwise accounted for. The former has undoubtedly increased our national restlessness, and it has robbed the evening lamp of its cozy bookish intimacy. The screen drama makes possible the "reading" of a story with the minimum amount of effort.

A generation bred upon the movies will be impatient of the tedious methods of writers who cannot transform character by a click of the camera, but require at least 400 pages to turn the trick. It is doubtful whether any of the quasi-historical novels that flourished 15 and 20 years ago and broke a succession of best selling records would meet with anything approximating the same amiable reception if launched to-day. A trained scenario writer, unembarressed by literary standards and intent upon nothing but action, can beat the melodramatic novelist at his own game every time.

A copyright novel of adventure cannot compete with the same story at five or ten cents as presented in the epileptic drama, where it lays no burden upon the beholder's visualizing sense. The resources of the screen drama for creating thrills are inexhaustible; it draws upon the reavens above, the earth beneath and the water under the earth; and as nothing that can be pictured can be untrue, the screen has also the great advantage of plausibility.—Meredith Nicholson in the Atlantic Monthly.

The Drama entitled "The Last Loaf," which was given under auspices of Charlotte Street Ladies' Aid Society recently, is to be repeated, by request, on Tuesday Evening, Nov. 23rd, in the Lecture Room of the Church. Admission 25c.

Early Closing Gives Apparently Slight Benefit To Hotels Near George and Charlotte St. Corner

One seeming result of the early closing of the bars is the centralising of the evening traffic in the hotels near the junction of the street railway lines at George and Charlotte streets. Thursady night, for instance, a visit to some of the bars between 7.30 and 8 o'clock revealed the fact that twenty men were getting an early nightcap in the White House when the count was made and there were twenty-three at the Empress. Figures for other bars were five in one, six in another, four in another, etc. The Munro House showed fifteen, the King George sixteen and Montgomery House seventeen. But the bars adjacent to the Charlotte and George street corner ate catching the bulk of the trade collected by the street cars. And there is little time left before the closing hour for the working man who comes up town after having supper and making himself presentable. On the evening the new regulations went into force the bars were lined up two and three deep like lines of Prussian guards. It was something of an expression of loyalty on the part of the "gang," a rally around John Barleycorn's flag. But the first enthusiasm soon began to lag and it is now apparent that only the habitual drinkers with a real genuine thirst who are keeping the cash registers in the bars timed up. The bulk of the night drinking was done between eight and eleven o'clock, and the hotelman's recent deficits from the saloon end of his business is most deeply appreciated by himself. The general impression is that the hotelmen are strictly abiding by the amended law. Of late the general evidences of intoxication have been noticeably missing from the streets. Visiting officers from other towns have favourably commented upon the sobriety of the soldiers stationed here and what they termed the generally good conditions seen by an observer.

New Baggage Regulations

Trunks With Two Bulging Sides Will Not be Accepted

VALUE LIMIT IS $100

OTTAWA, Nov. 13. — Various changes regarding baggage regulations have been agreed upon by the Railway Commission. The railway companies recently prepared a revised form of the regulations, and copies were sent to the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and almost every Board of Trade in Canada. The regulations thus revised were gone over in a conference with the railway companies. Later the matter was set down for regular hearing and changes were agreed on. Regarding the regulation as to the restriction in the shape of baggage a great deal of evidence is set forth, and it was made the rule that trunks with two bulging sides will not be accepted for transportation. All must be rectangular.

It has been determined that canoes and skiffs are not articles falling into the category of baggage. There are other ways by which canoes may be forwarded, and the old rule barring them as baggage will stand.

The limit of $100 as liability for damage to baggage was upheld by the commission. It does not appear unreasonable that the railway companies should protect themselves as an insurer of baggage. This applies to the $50 limit on children's baggage.

A draft rule which has been submitted to the traffic representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association and various Boards of Trades and which is now approved of by the Board of Railway Commissioners, deals with the liability of the carrier of baggage in case of damage or loss. The new rule, which is the most important in the decisions, says that in the case of baggage or other articles booked upon a through ticket to any point in Canada for conveyance to another point in Canada over any railway other than the I.C.R and N.T.R., the carrier checking such baggage shall be liable to the extent provided for in these regulations for any loss, damage, or injury to such baggage caused by the act, default or neglect of the connecting or other carrier to which such baggage or other articles may be delivered in Canada. The carrier must pay the amount claimed as evidenced by any receipts, judgment or transcript. The liability ceases as soon as the baggage is delivered to the next connecting carrier.

Kincardine, Ont.—"My child's trouble began with a rash around the ears. This spread over the surface of the body turning to small sores which were itching and burning. The rash also appeared on my child's face and for the time disfigured him. The itching was so intense that it constantly caused him to irritate the eruption. He was restless and fretful at night.

"The first two applications of Cuticura Soap and Ointment stopped the burning and eased the itching. In two months' time no trace of the trouble was seen." (Signed) O. Campbell, May 24, 1914.

THE BIGGEST THING THE BRITISH HAVE YET DONE

An Intimate Account of the Hand-to-Hand Fighting in the Recent Great Offensive—The Cunning of the Germans

A little corporal bandaged from head to foot, who is now in a London hospital, gave some vivid details of the great Anglo-French success in which he took part. His body is partly paralyzed, and he has lost his left arm.

"I had to leave it behind," he began, philosophically, but that's the way of war, and you've got to take things as they come. I'm lucky to get back at all, even as a cripple.

A Sing-Song—and Prayers.

"About nine or ten days ago the word went round that we might make a move at any moment. All the boys were in the best of spirits. The night before the battle there was a little concert arranged. One of our lads made up as old Daddy Christmas Tirpitz and sang 'I wouldn't leave the old canal for you.' The show was good fun, and we laughed our sides out, even though there might be no to-morrow for any of us. In another trench, not far away, a chaplain was holding an evening service, and it was a bit of a contrast to what was going on in our trench.

"Early next morning we got the tip to get ready. The big guns were booming and shrapnel was bursting over the place. Then suddenly came the word to advance.

"'Now, lads, come on,' shouted a young officer who looked more like a slip of a schoolboy. After that we were like a menagerie let loose. We did a sprint for the enemy trenches, and quickly we were at grips with the Germans.

A "Patriarch" Spared.

"'You're my man,' I said to myself as I selected a fellow as powerful-looking as Jack Johnson. He spotted me and sprang foward to hit me with the butt of his rifle. I dodged the blow and as quickly replied. My bayonet having dispatched him, I took on another, and down he went.

"My next encounter was with a German who looked more like a patriarch than a soldier. "Oh, don't!" he cried, as I dashed at him, and I hadn't the heart to finish the job. On we went until we came to the succeeding line of the enemy trenches. The Germans were piled thick on top of one another.

"At this moment it seemed as if we had marched into a well-prepared trap, for suddenly we were subjected to a terrific fire, mostly from machine guns. Then we noticed several battalions of the enemy advancing towards us. 'Again boys!' yelled my officer, and again we answered with terrific effect. A young German subaltern threw up his hands. 'For Gott's sake, don't!' he exclaimed in good English, and he fell on his knees. I thought he was genuine, but he turned out to be a cunning coward. He lowered his hands and made a dive for his revolver. 'That's your little game,' said I and I gave him far too merciful a death.

Six Germans Accounted For.

"A little further ahead we came across another scene. Our heavy guns had done some frightful havoc. The enemy had been literally blown to pieces. One of our fellows did a wonderful thing while all this was going on. He was set upon by half a dozen Boches. One by one he knocked them out and they never rose again. Then I saw him take a wounded German officer and fling him across his shoulder.

"In this act of mercy he was shot at, and although the blood poured from his head he still kept the German on his back until he could lay him down in a place of safety.

"There were many similar acts of bravery on the part of our men. The bravest of all were the chaplains, who stuck by the side of the boys even when the fighting was most furious.

For pluck you couldn't beat the men who officered us. I have told you about the youngster who cried to us, 'Now then, come on, lads!' He picked me up when I come a cropper. 'How did you get on, sir?' I asked him. I could see that he had copped a fair dose of shrapnel, and his left wrist was almost severed. 'Just a scrape or two, old sport,' was the reply.

"'How many prisoners did we take?' That's a question I couldn't answer right off, sir, but we took a large number of their guns and plenty of other stuff 'Twas a fine haul, I tell you. When they fetched us back we were told that it was the biggest thing which the British had yet done." —Montreal Standard.

LILLIAN GISH HAS BIG PART IN THE FAMOUS PICTURE

One of the most effective minor scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," coming to the Grand on Nov. 15, 16 and 17, shows Miss Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the "Great Commoner," who led Congress in Lincoln's time playing a guitar to solace a wounded rebel officer in the Patent's Office Hospital.

"I haven't known you long," says the little Confederate colonel, Ben Cameron, "but I have carried you about with me for years and years." He displays a half-faded daguerreotype of the girl, a picture she had given her brother, and which had fallen into Ben's hands.

Soothed by her kindness, Ben makes a rapid recovery. In the second half of the story, the scene of which shifts to South Carolina, they are sweethearts in the dread time of the second Southern uprising. To portray the fine flower of Northern womanhood throughout the whole troublous era is the task of Miss Lillian Gish, as Elsie Stoneman, in this play.

Miss Gish is of the "golden aureole" blonde type, which makes for photographic beauty. She is singularly graceful and her features never lose their piquancy in in or outside scenes. The eyes, before the camera are most expressive. The acting conveys sincerity as well as true feminine charm, at least so the New York critics thought.

Both Lillian and Dorothy Gish are the favourite actresses of the studios where D. J. Griffith, Director of "The Birth of a Nation," does most of his work. It took eight months to stage the civil war and reconstruction epic. As Elsie Stoneman figures in hundreds of scenes from the early wartime to the end of Reconstruction and her marriage to Ben, Lillian Gish had hardly an idle moment.

"Well, Dinah, how are you and your new husband getting along?"

"Firs' rate, Miss Betty. I been 'greeably 'prized in dat man."

"Does he treat you all right?"

"Yessum. He sho do, and I ain't had ter hit 'im but one time. I never seed er nigger learn as much as he do."—Birmingham "Age-Herald."

Regulate Kidneys AND Relieve Constipation

Gin Pills are acknowledged to have the largest sale of any proprietary medicine in Canada—an achievement solely due to their remarkable virtue as a Kidney and Bladder remedy.

But users of Gin Pills have discovered that this invaluable remedy also acts as a mild cathartic. The evidence of hundreds of letters we have received establishes the very logical fact that in compounding a medicine to heal and tone up the Kidneys and Bladder certain of the ingredients have a stimulating effect upon the other organs, especially the bowels.

It is important to know, in the case of constipated patients, that Gin Pills do not act harshly on the bowels; there is no griping, but a gradual and gentle restoration of the function. Try Gin Pills for constipation. In thus relieving the bowels, you safeguard yourself against possible Kidney trouble.

Gin Pills are 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50 at your dealer's. A trial treatment will be sent upon request, to 26

$40 For Red Cross At Knox Church Social

Red Cross funds received quite a boost last night at the Allies' sale in Knox church Lecture Hall. The sum of about $40 will give substantial aid to the funds of this worthy object.

With regard to the arrangements, Mrs. A. McKenzie's volunteer Bible class were responsible, and it is needless to say they acquitted themselves creditably as sales ladies and organizers.

The stalls were very tastefully arrayed with bunting and flowers and included, with attendants:

Canada — Miss Cora Peters, with Misses M. Goodfellow, L. Robson, and Mr. Byers as assistants—lunch.

Red Cross— Miss K. Tucker, with Misses E. Hall, M. Bulmer, J. Lang, —. German, C. Barlow, and E. Buckham—candies.

Ireland—Miss K. Hall, with Misses McGill, Long, Robson and Kirk as assistants—ice cream and cakes.

Scotland and England—Miss A. L. Henry, with Misses Comstock and Kennedy as assistants — cakes and flowers, and centre-piece auction.

France—Miss C. J. Ross, with Misses O. Fehr, F. Chiles, E. Williamson and B. B. Ross as assistants—pies and candy.

The 93rd band rendered several selections, which added to the evening's enjoyment.

How You May Reduce Your Weight

Overstoutness is very unwelcome condition especially in the present day, when slender figures are so fashionable, and every reader of this paper has noticed the tendency of some people to put on an excessive amount of fat.

If you happen to be one of those whose weight is more than it should be, dont try to starve yourself, eat all you want, but go to your druggist and get oil of orilene in capsule form and take one with each meal.

Oil of orilene increases the oxygen-carrying power of the blood and dissolves the fatty tissue, in many cases at nearly the rate of one lb. per day. Be sure to get oil of orilene in capsule form. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Any good druggist has it, or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Montreal, Can

Woman Was Hard To Handle

Local Man Fined Five Dollars For His Failure to Render Sufficient Assistance

In police court this morning a local man was fined five dollars for refusing, so it is alleged, to assist a constable while in the discharge of his duty. Defendant was represented by Mr. G. N. Gordon. Constable Blade claimed that while in the act of arresting Mrs. Kate Douglas on the evening of November 11th, he called upon the defendant to assist him in the name of the King. Defendant refused and coaxed and coaxed the constable to let her go. Mrs. Douglas resisted arrest and fought with the constable until Stewart street was reached.

"Coaxing the constable to let her go may be a crime in Germany, but it's not here," remarked Mr. Gordon.

Hard to Handle.

To Mr. Gordon, Constable Blade denied that defendant had attempted to assist him.

"That didn't prevent you from making the arrest?" inquired Mr. Gordon.

"No, but she was pretty hard to handle," replied witness. "It's pretty hard to handle a woman alone. I'd sooner handle you," he added to the amusement of the court.

Witness said that Mrs. Kate Douglas was known in police circles as a hard subject to handle.

Defendant was put in the box. He related the circumstances leading up to the arrest. He said the woman walked along all right until they got to Simcoe street. There the woman wanted to tell her husband. The constable refused and a struggle resulted. Witness was about to go and tell the woman's husband when he was called on to assist. He then turned back and went along with them to the police station. He caught the woman by the arm and told her to keep quiet.

Constable Recalled.

Constable Blade recalled that defendant urged the woman to keep quiet. He said that defendant might have taken the woman's arm after they passed Stewart street.

Mr. Gordon said that the onus of proof rested with the prosecution. He (defendant) evidently assisted, but not sufficient to suit the constable. "This case might have been tried before a jury, and no jury would convict this man on the evidence of a lone policeman," said Mr. Gordon.

Magistrate Dumble said he would emphasize the law by imposing a small fine.

Tobacco Heart

CURED BY

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Tobacco does not seem to affect all alike. Many men enjoy their smoke, live to a good old age, and apparently suffer no ill effects from the use of the weed.

There are others, though, on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results.

It causes palpitation, pain in the heart and irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, and the breath becomes short.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy that equals Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Nelson Young, Brampton, Ont., writes: "I have had, up to about a month ago, a very weak heart, which I suppose came from smoking cigarettes. When I heard of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as a cure, I immediately gave up smoking, and started using them. It does you justice to be the founder of such a great remedy. They made me feel like a new man."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MARKET FEATURES

Eggs Climb Skyward—Butter Plentiful—Fowl Galore

In the language of the nursery, "Eggs have jumped over the moon," and are still "out of sight."

"Have the hens stopped laying?" queried one purchaser, pointing to a basket of egg-fruit.

"No, they're just moulting," was the quick reply of Mrs. Farmer. The prices ranged all the way from 34 to 37 cents, the prevailing quotations being 35 and 36 cents; the lowest figure having been asked by a man on the outside market; but, one thing is sure, he would not have to take them home, for shrewd buyers were not long in "getting next."

Butter was very plentiful and brought thirty cents, though a few were asking 31 and 32, but it was noticeable that their baskets were a long time emptying.

Fowl continued to occupy a large share of the table room and sold at varying prices. Chickens ranged from $1.35 to $1.50 a pair, averaging 13c. per pound. Ducks weighing 4 3-4 lbs. brought $1 each. Geese varied greatly in size. One weighing 16 1-2 lbs. was held at $2.00, another weighing 11 1-4 lbs. was quoted at $1.25. Turkeys were somewhat scare, the choice ones being reserved for Christmas trade. One bird weighing 8 lbs. brought $2.00, while another tipping the scales at 14 lbs., was held at $3, but five obliging owner said she might be induced to part with her treasure for $2.75.

Several crates of live hens were offered on the "square" at $1 each (including the rooster).

Pears, by the basket, sold for 60c. Grape-fruit, three for a quarter.

Outside Section.

The splendid Fall weather had its effect on the wagon section, outside bring the farmers together in large numbers. The only thing lacking were the usual picturesque loads of hay. Vegetables occupied a very prominent place, and brought their customary prices. Potatoes averaged $1.40 a bag, while apples maintained their high level. The following are some of the quotations: Wealthies $1.25 a bag; Greenings, $1.25 a bag; Wolf Rivers, $3.50 a barrel, and Bellflowers, $4 per barrel.

Lamb sold at 14 cents for the forequarter, and 16c. for the hindquarter. Pork brought 14 and 16 cents, and mutton 12 1-2 cents; both were scarce.

Home-Made Cooking.

The "Cheerful Workers' Bible Class of the St. James' Methodist Church and the Ladies' Aid of Park Street Baptist Church sold samples of their baking, the latter serving hot coffee as well. The proceeds were in aid of their building funds.

Names on Baskets.

According to regulations governing the sale of produce on the market, each vendor is supposed to have his or her name in a conspicuous place on or near the goods offered for sale. Very few live up to it. Not more than a score of women had their names so placed. Only one woman had her name printed on the butter paper. When a name is so displayed a certain amount of confidence in the article is inspired in a discriminating customer.

Weight of Fowl.

While the market by-laws do not require the vendors to place tags on their fowl indicating the weight, it would seem to be "good business" to do so, for it is much more satisfactory to all concerned: to the purchaser in that she sees how much she is getting for her money; to the vendor in that she can tell to a cent what she should get for her fowl, and not be led to sacrifice them to a crafty buyer.

SPECIAL MEETINGS AT ASSEMBLY HALL

"The Rich Man and Lazarus" of Luke 16, was the subject of the address in the Assembly Hall, last night. Under the instigation of Satan the arch-enemy of souls, and the God of this world, this portion of God's word has suffered much in man's futile efforts to explain it away. In an endeavour to do this, many find satisfaction in concluding that the Lord Jesus was at this time speaking in parables. In the bare text the divine speaker one "who cannot lie" of whom even his enemies said, "never man spake like this man," emphatically says in v. 19: "There was a certain man"; in v. 20 "there was a certain beggar named Lazarus." Upon the supposition that it is a parable the lesson to be drawn therefrom are none the less weighty and solemn. Actual fact or parable it is a revelation of what lies at the termination of the careers of two classes of people. A glorious reality on the one hand and dread, but none the less real, on the other. One characterized by the statement in v. 28, "he is comforted," the other in v. 24, "I am tormented."

From other portions of Scripture such as Hebrews 1, 14, which, speaking of the angels of God, says: "Are they not all ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation," the implication is drawn that Lazarus was a righteous man, "an heir of salvation" as at the close of his earthly career angels were in attendance and escorted his soul to a conscious eternity of bliss.

From v. 19 of the chapter in question and the statement concerning his condition after death, it can be safely gathered that the rich man was one of those "who have their portion in this life," and, like the prosperous farmer of Luke 12 21, "was not rich toward God" as a conscious existence in eternal woe awaited him when his earthly course was run.

The series of special meetings will close to-morrow night by a gospel meeting, at 7 o'clock. All are heartily invited.—Com.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

PETHICK AND JANES WITH 40th BATTERY

The Toronto Star says:
The 40th Battery, Major Gordon Southam, O.C., which is located at the Exhibition grounds for the winter, has entered a team in the O.H.A. senior series under the new "soldier rule." They will play in the Toronto group with St. Michaels, Argonauts, Riversides, and perhaps Varsity and another team.

The 40th will be a "big noise" in military hockey circles, and will have the enthusiastic backing of every soldier in town. The Sportsmen's Patriotic Association, with its accustomed generosity, has offered to equip the 40th from head to foot for the O.H.A. season, and the offer has been gladly accepted. This is the first soldiers' team to be equipped by the Sportsmen's Association, and it will be done right. The 40th uniforms will be red, white, blue, and khaki. The body of the sweater will be of red with the figure of a shell in blue across the breast and the word "40th" in white on the shell. The knickers will be of khaki and stockings of red.

The 40th has a great bunch of players to select a team from, all from the O.H.A. and all an active service, responding to their country's call. The list is as follows:

Forwards: Quinn Butterfield, Lovering Jupp, G. C. McDonald, and Victor Draper, Orillia; Lieut. "Conny" Smythe, Varsity; "Mawk" Mackenzie, Hamilton; Ernie Iavigne, Midland.

Defence: Ken. McNab, of Orillia; Norm. Harvie, of Orillia; Wm. H. Connors, of Hamilton; J. L. Pethick, Peterborough; Jack Gooch, Victorias.

Goal: "Ted" Vorbould, of Orillia; F. Laughlin, of St. Pauls Juniors, Toronto; A. R. Janes, of Peterborough. Gooch and Janes are both members of suspended clubs at present, and will have to be reinstated before they can again play in the O.H.A.

WHY AVERAGES MEAN LITTLE

Fielding Figures in Baseball Give No Line on Real Worth of Players

Fielding averages in baseball do not teach much of anything. The reason is that they record only mechanical errors and make no note of the chances overlooked or of careless or bonehead plays.

It is seldom that the best player in a position ranks highest in fielding, according to the averages. This is because the fast and hustling performer tries for and reaches many balls that the mediocre player does not attempt to get. A shortstop like Herzog of the Reds or Bancroft of the Phillies will make errors on chances that inferior men do not even touch, allowing them to go as base hits.

MISJUDGED FLIES ARE HITS.

Then again, the fielding averages take no account of misjudged flies. In the recent world's series Speaker, perhaps the best outfielder in the country, allowed an easy fly ball to drop right in front of him and within a few feet of him because he lost the ball in the sun and did not know where it was coming. Stock, the batter, by good running, made two bases on it and was credited with a two-base hit, though Speaker would not miss that kind of a ball once in a hundred times.

Of course, losing a ball in the sun is not the fault of the fielder, but misjudged flies that ought to be caught are scored in the same way, as base hits and not as errors. It is the general practice to credit the batter with a hit on any fly ball that is not touched by a fielder, even if it is the easiest kind of a chance. A poor fly in the infield that falls untouched is a base hit.

NO COLUMN FOR "BONERS."

It is impossible to score errors of judgment under the present rules. Only mechanical wobbles are charged as errors, and so a great many bonehead and stupid plays never get into the records. The fielding percentages, therefore, do not give a true and accurate line on a player's ability. They are more or less interesting, but no club purchases a ball player because he leads in fielding his position.

Perhaps the man who is at the bottom of the list, according to the averages, covers more ground and is a better all-round player than the one who tops the roster.

WILL DOFF TOGS TO DON KHAKI

Sam Manson, the centre half of the champion Tigers, and George Meyers, one of the best scrimmage men in the game, leave on Sunday next for Niagara-on-the-Lake, where they will take up their six weeks' training for overseas service. They have been ordered to report on Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Neither will be lost to Tigers for their remaining games, however, as arrangements will likely be made to have them leave camp each Saturday. Manson resigned his position with the Canford Manufacturing Company, yesterday.

Percy Palmer, outside wing of the Tiger intermediates, will also go to Niagara on Sunday. This makes a total of four Tigers who will have gone into training within a week. Harry Robinson leaving last Sunday for Kingston.

REAL STORIES FROM PRISONERS OF WAR

By F. A. McKENZIE.

The publication of these real stories (the series of which this in one) from prisoners of war has brought me many communications—perhaps the most pathetic correspondence I have ever had.

One batch of letters is from the wives and mothers of men who are still prisoners. The second is from near relatives of missing men—hoping against hope that some trace can be found of their dear ones. The third is from horrified readers, startled as they may well be by the facts I have given, who inquire what can be done.

The relatives of prisoners of war can comfort themselves with one fact. Things are getting better all the time. On that there is universal agreement among all the men I have examined, and I have seen many more than those whose stories it was possible to give in detail. The friends at home can rely that in my accounts I have told the worst as well as the best. I have tried to give the whole truth without color or concealment.

Prison camps differ; hospitals for prisoners of war differ still more. In many hospitals that are semi-privately managed in Germany the treatment is as good as the wounded man could have at home. In others, French prison doctors and orderlies do their best to make the wounded at ease. The bad hospitals are very few, surprisingly few under all the circumstances. I refer here solely to those dealing with English prisoners.

One complaint which I have heard from returned men is that minor operations are sometimes carried out with no anaesthetic, and major operations with insufficient anaesthetics. I was sitting by the bedside of a badly wounded returned prisoner a few days ago. His splintered leg had been amputated and twice operated upon in Germany, and another operation was necessary here.

"I dread the thought of it," he said. "It's torture." I tried to comfort him by telling him that he would not feel it; I had been through it and knew. "But I do feel it," he said. "I recovered consciousness in the middle of the first operation, and though they deadened me I really knew all they were doing the second time." In other words, he was only partly anaesthetised. This may, of course, have been necessary if the man had a weak heart—or it may have been due to shortage of drugs or mere carelessness. I am afraid from what I hear that this case does not stand alone.

Need of Fair Publicity.

In the prison camps the visits of the American Ambassador at Berlin and his representatives have made a great change. Things are often faked to deceive the visitors. But the Ambassador and his men are shrewd men. In one prison things were dressed for them. A prisoner managed, however, to smuggle a bit of paper telling some of the facts, and a change in control came soon afterwards. Recent improvements do not alter the fact, however, that the lot of the prisoners is still incredibly bad, particularly when compared with the treatment of German prisoners here. We clothe our German prisoners warmly and sufficiently; they give the British miserably poor and insufficient garments. We feed them adequately; they half-starve the British.

The first way in which the lot of our prisoners can be improved is by fair and reasonably publicity. Many facts are known. Experience shows that publicity brings improvement. Let us give those Germans who behave decently full credit. But equally let us give to the world here and in neutral countries full details of the other side. There could be no more effective contrast than between the British prisoners and the German prisoners who arrive for exchange in Holland. On the one side we see men ragged, worn, thin from hunger; on the other, men properly clothed and cared for. The contrasting photographs should be published from Stockholm to Honolulu. Publicity may help to convince official German opinion. it is worth while to treat the men better.

But for immediate help we must depend on private activity and generosity. There are a number of organizations at work. Chief of these is the Prisoners of War Aid Committee, Savoy Hotel, of whose admirable and efficient management I hear much praise. The Church Army does much and does it well. Canadian prisoners are well helped by the Canadian Red Cross, which relies on the Canadian community and does not appeal to British aid. Various regiments have their own funds for helping their captured comrades, and there is a fund for naval prisoners. There are several smaller organizations.

Many people are now definitely sending supplies to one or more prisoners. This is a simple and efficient form of help. It ought to be possible to may our prisoners among twenty-five thousand families, each of which would send a package a week, and solve the problem.

What to Send.

What is it the prisoners want?

The chief needs of the prisoners are bread, meat, and tobacco.

Parcels advertised by stores, consisting as they do of jam, sweetmeats, chocolates, and cigarettes, are wholly unsuitable. Hungry men want solid food.

Bread is welcome, but it must be bread of the right kind. It takes from eight days to a fortnight to reach he camps. One prisoner told me that out of twelve packets of bread that reached him from a large London shop only four were not mouldy. Much bread is being sent from Switzerland. Even that does not always reach prisoners in an eatable state owing to the delay. Special breads are now being baked and these seem to meet the conditions best of all.

Meat, such as "bully" beef, bacon—preferably tinned—sardines, and tinned butter are all welcome, perhaps most welcome of all.

Books are a boon. They must not be in any way political. Adventure stories are in eager demand. The soldier loves sentiment. Anyone who has attended a concert given by the Tommies at the front knows that often the ultra-sentimental song draws the loudest applause. In selecting books, remember that there are some who will welcome really good literature. First-class travel books and selections are excellent. The soldier is, as a rule, an educated man.

Warm clothing will be a very necessary this winter. The blankets and coverings in almost every prison are quite inadequate. The clothing served out to our men is so miserable in quality, and inadequate in quantity as to be of very little use. Thick woollen undersuits, socks, caps, and the like, will be keenly demanded. The soldier who is a prisoner of war delights above all things to dress himself in khaki. He feels that in that way he is showing his colors still. Men whose military clothes have been taken away at the hospitals and have been served out with the regulation dress have, to my knowledge, saved every penny sent to them on the chance of buying a miserable, worn uniform coat.

Our own soldiers held captive in Germany have the first claim on us but no one can forget the much greater needs of the Russian, French and Belgian prisoners. There are according to Germany's semi-official accounts, 28,000 English prisoners in Germany, including presumably the civilians interned there, but there are probably at least ten times as many French prisoners and forty times or more as many Russian prisoners.

I have told something of the horrible lot of the Russians in my earlier accounts. It is impossible to exaggerate their need.

JUST A DEAD HINDU BEHIND THE BUSHES

Sentry Comes Upon Enemy as He Crept With Knife In Teeth

It was a cool and foggy night when a corporal with Musketier Hedtkamp and another comrade stood before Double Sentry No. 2 of Field Watch No. 1. In whispers Hedtkamp received the instructions, while the others were waiting, their eyes on the trenches from which the Gurkhas, Hindu troops, with their ever-ready circular knives, had attacked our men earlier in the evening. The attack broke down under our heavy fire, but the Hindus might break out again during the night.

So a strong sentry chain was established before the wire entanglements to secure rest to our worn out men in the trenches. The sentry who had handed over the instructions drew the attention of the relieving sentry to a clump of brushwood from which the most danger was to be expected.

"Yes I see," replied Hedtkamp, who did not possess too much courage.

The corporal said to him: "I rely upon you; keep your eyes open and the Iron Cross is yours, if you report in time any movement, unless an untimely Gurkha knife digs itself too deep in your throat."

Hedtkamp did not reply. He was already lying flat on the ground, which his predecessor had warmed for him. The corporal, with the men he had relieved, slowly crawled back to the camp.

Not a sound could be heard, and Hedtkamp and his comrades thought they were alone in the wide world. In a little while Hedtkamp lifted his head. Over in the shrubs something had moved. "Did you hear, Karl?" he whispered to his comrade.

"Yes, about ten paces to the left of the shrubs." "I bet you," Hedtkamp whispered, "that fellow is going to hide behind the shrubs."

Everything was quiet again, no sound from the other side, but Hedtkamp took his gun, ready to shoot. His comrade stopped him. "Don't alarm the fellow, we'll catch him." Already they saw iron crosses hanging on their breasts. Hedtkamp meant to explore the field and clear up the mystery, his comrade urged him not to leave his post. Hedtkamp grew impatient, telling his comrade he need not be jealous; if he caught the man he would divide the honors. Drawing his well sharpened side arm and taking it between his teeth, he slowly crawled to the spot where he thought he had seen something move. His heart beating, he stopped from time to time, listening; nearer he came towards the shrubs, but no sound came from that direction. His knees became sore, but he crawled on determined to solve the mystery. He had reached the shrubs, but no sound, no living soul near. Hedtkamp looked over the shrubs and what he saw looked like a white rock.

In this position he stayed till daybreak, when he looked over again. He saw not a white rock, but a Gurkha with white turban, the knife between his teeth. They looked at each other our friend ready to strike. The hand of the Gurkha was lifted half way, the knife remained stationary between his teeth. The Hindu was dead. —Hans Joachim von Reitzenstein in "Ueber Land and Sea."

LINGERING "BLUE BILLS" SIGN OF GOOD WEATHER

As a weather prophet Mr. Dan Whetung makes no claims of infallibility. However, he does know some of the signs that are recognized by the Chemong people. Although we have had a wonderful autumn and a real Indian summer, Dan does not expect to make a record for early ice trip across Chemong Lake. A week ago he observed that the wild geese were flying high, an old sign of a fine fall. To-day he states that "blue-bills" are feeding in the Chemong waters. These ducks are overstaying their annual visit, in other words are remaining much later than usual, another indication of continued fine weather. Besides the moon is far south this month. In fact it is a warm moon, Mr. Whetung adds, hence all the usual natural indications bespeak an open season until winter sets in.

The Peterborough Boys,
39th Bn. C. E. F.

Seats will be reserved at St. John's church to-morrow evening for the members of the 93rd Battalion who wish to hear Major Starr.

The 93rd Battalion will attend divine service at the Murray street Baptist church to-morrow morning.

Pte. J. Gibson of the 93nd Highlanders, Toronto, is spending a few days leave at his home here. Pte Gibson is a brother of Pte. W. F. Gibson, the Peterborough boy who was killed at St. Julien.

Pte. Hirst, one of the Peterborough boys in the 93nd Highlanders, is home for a few days on leave.

Another bandsman joined the band of the 93rd Battalion to-day in the person of Bandsman Leedham, a trombone player from the Salvation Army Band at Hamilton, Ont. He will report for duty on Tuesday. Bandsman Leedham is the third Hamilton musician to join the 93rd. The band of the Peterborough battalion is 3 strong.

Lieut. Hills, the Canadian Army Service Corps officer who is the supply officer here, has been advised that 3,000 drivers are required for the mechanical transport section of the British army, and men will be enlisted here for this branch of the service. Any local chauffeur who wishes to join the mechanical transport section should apply at once at the armouries for information.

The 93rd Battalion made a fine impression in its march through the downtown streets this morning. The marching of the men shows a steady improvement. A company was in command of Capt. Watt, while Capt. Lech was in command of B company for the first time.

Capt. R. E. Layfield, quartermaster of the 39th Battalion, is home on week end leave from Belleville.

Mrs. Angus McIntosh has received the following letter from her son Corp. Wilbert S. McIntosh, of the 16th Battalion, who was wounded some time ago and who is now in an English hospital:

Dear Mother,—Just a few lines in answer to your welcome letter which I recived a few days ago. I do not know what you think of this writing desk I am writing on—it is a soda box lid that the school children of King George School sent me, full of chocolates, and gum, which I enjoyed very much; not only that, but I want you to thank Miss Munro of Reid Street, for a box of apples that was sent to me, and which I enjoyed very much. It was real grand to get a Canadian apple. I gave them pretty near all away. I gave one to each of the Sisters who are our nurses, and one to an Australian, one to a New Zealander, and one to a "Cockney," that is, a Londoner, and kept the rest. I have not received the cake yet but have the box of candy which I enjoyed very much. As for the jam and jelly I have not got that either. I do not know where all the things go to. Mr. Wood sent me a parcel of papers and a magazine, and I have not got them. Then there is Mrs. J. F. Harvey, who is sending me a scrap book of odd pieces taken out of the Examiner and cuttings out of other papers which are very enjoyable to read. I wish you would please thank her, also. I do not know them, or I have not got their addresses. Well, I don't know what else to say except that I am getting up and seeing the places and going to concerts and other things. Do not send me anything to read as I get Canadian papers here from other patients and lots of magazines. I got a letter from Angus the other day and he is enjoying himself O.K.

Mr. and Mrs. McIntosh have asked the Examiner to express their thanks to the people of Peterborough for their kindness.

Some time ago the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club of Peterborough sent a package of comforts to the Peterborough boys in the 4th Battery 1st Brigade, at the front. Mrs. James Booth, 176 Sherbrooke Street, has received the following letter from one of the Battery boys:

Somewhere in France.
October 27, 1915.

My Dear Mrs. Booth,—It was my good fortune to become the possessor of the pair of socks containing the enclosed card. As it invites me to drop you a line, I will gladly avail myself of the opportunity of thanking you for a pair of excellent and much-valued foot coverings. It is a lot of satisfaction to us fellows out here, representing dear old Peterborough, that the thoughts, prayers and good wishes of the girls we left behind are constantly with us. Thank the club of ladies and the school children who so kindly sent us chocolate, tobacco, cigarettes, etc., in the name of the forty boys of the 4th Battery from Peterborough, and tell them their gift was both timely and much appreciated.

Very yours truly,
GEO. FINDLAY.

In yesterday's casualty list appears the name of Thos. Whalley of Millbrook, who was killed in action with the 15th Battalion.

REASON FOR GRIEF.

Why do ye look so sorrowful, Dennis?" asked one man of another.

"I just hear-rd wan man call another a liar, and the man that was called a liar said the other man would have to apologize, or there would be a fight."

"And why should that make you look so sad?"

"The other man apologized."

WHAT HAPPENED

"What is the cause of the tumpus over there?"

"A promising young player held the mirror up to nature. Nature took one look and fell in a fit."—Judge.

WEDDING BELLS

AKERS—SMITH.

On Wednesday the wedding of Miss Ethel Smith, 48 Lisburn street, to Pte. Reginald Akers, a Peterborough boy, serving in one of the Toronto overseas battalions, was solemnized. Akers is a former member of the 57th Regiment. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Jas. Price, and took place at St. John's Church. The bride was the recipient of many handsome wedding gifts, including one from her companions in the Auburn Woollen Mills.

KIRBY—McVITTIE.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wallis, Dufferin Street, was the scene of a very pretty wedding when their niece, Minerva Eveline McVitte, was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. Kirby, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kirby, Dowling Avenue, and grandson of the late William Kirby, F.R.S.C., Canadian novelist. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. B. Grobb, All Saints' Church, Peterborough. The bride, who was given away by her uncle, Mr. R. Walls, wore a gown of white charmeuse and lace, with a veil of white tulle caught under a becoming Juliet cap with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of roses and lily of the valley and wore the gift of the bridegroom, a diamond and platinum pendant. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Gladys McVittie, gowned in palest blue taffeta with trimming of pink and ermine. She carried pink roses and a shepherdess crook. The bridegroom was assisted by his brother, Mr. Jack Kirby. Mr. E. Elliott played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Miss Esther Maybee, cousin of the bride, sang "Entreat Me Not to Leave Thee." The house was lovely with pink and white 'mums, and after the reception the happy couple left for a short trip, the bride travelling in a smart suit of navy blue with hat to match and black fox furs. Mr. and Mrs. Kirby will reside in Peterborough.—Mail and Empire.

IS RETURNING.

Mrs. Bowman, Charlotte street, has sent notice to the Examiner Office this morning that a mistake was made in connection with charging Pte. Sheppard with stealing her watch. It has been learned that her little grandson handed the watch to Sheppard, who telephoned his wife last evening that he was returning to Peterborough to-day.

CHIMNEY FIRE

A chimney fire at 191 Lafayette avenue, owned by Mr R. C. Braund, and occupied by Mr. Frank Peters, gave the Fire Brigade a run shortly after eleven o'clock this morning. It was stated that there was nobody home and that a wood fire was left burning. The pipes were practically melted out. Neighbours sent in the alarm. No damage.

LOSS WILL RUN INTO MILLIONS

South Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 13.—The manufacture of guns of light calibre and for various war purposes, some for this country and some for England and her allies, was given a set back at the Bethlehem Steel Works when a fire gutted the No. 4 machine shop. The Steel Company in a statement, says it is as yet unable to give an estimate of the loss, but states that the fire was a serious one. According to estimates, however, the loss will run all the way from one million to four million dollars.

Cutting Down Expenses.

A great number of people have unfortunately had their earnings reduced since the war and consequently they deem it wise to cut down living expenses. One sensible plan is to eat less of the highly refined foods and meat and more of the coarser and more nutritious cereals such as Dr. Jackson's Roman Meal. This is the most wholesome, most nourishing, and most healthful cereal food on the market, and costs much less than the highly refined breakfast foods.

Don't spoil Romal Meal porridge by stirring it. Use a second basin or a double boiler and never lift the lid after making for at least half an hour.

Sold by live grocers at 10 and 25 cents.

Committed On Charge Of Murder

Preliminary Hearing of Sanford and Mrs. Lindsay Concluded — One Charge Dismissed

The preliminary hearing of Sandford Lindsay and his wife, which has occupied the attention of County Police Magistrate Langley for the past two days, was concluded late yesterday afternoon, when the two prisoners were committed for trial on a charge of murder arising out of the death of their fourteen year old daughter, Lily May Lindsay, which is said to have resulted from a criminal operation.

A charge of murdering the unborn child of the deceased, which was preferred against Sandford Lindsay, was dismissed with the consent of Crown Attorney G. W. Hatton.

Four Charges.

The Lindsays have been committed for trial on the following charges:

Sandford Lindsay of causing the death of his fourteen year old daughter, which is referred to on the charge sheet as murder. He is also committed for trial on a charge of incest.

Mrs. Phoebe Lindsay, wife of Sandford Lindsay, is charged with the murder of her fourteen year old daughter and also with causing the death of the unborn child of the said daughter.

The prisoners, who were represented in court by Mr. G. N. Gordon, withstood the ordeal well. The hearing yesterday lasted from nine o'clock in the morning until five-thirty in the afternoon. Towards the close, Mrs. Lindsay began to manifest signs of fatigue. She twisted her chair around and put her feet up on the bench in front of the prisoners' dock. This enabled her to assume a semi-reclining position. At the close of the hearing husband and wife participated in an affectionate farewell at the entrance to the gaol section of the court house. A few moments later the big door yawned and the unfortunate couple were lost to view in the dark and uninviting interior of the gaol, where they will probably remain until the spring assizes. Mr. Gordon will make an effort to have Mrs. Lindsay released on bail.

Detective Boyd Called.

The evidence adduced in connection with the two charges of murder was similar to that upon which the charge of murdering an unborn child was based. Provincial Detective Boyd who was placed in the witness box, failed to throw very much light on the sad tragedy. He admitted having conducted an investigation in the Lindsay home, following the death of Lily May Lindsay. Crown Attorney Hatton took exception to Mr. Gordon's methods of examining the witness. Mr. Gordon invited his legal opponent to state his objection to the court and let the court rule as to the admissability of certain points arising out of the examination.

Mr. Gordon called Chief Thompson and asked him to relate the circumstances in which Harold Lindsay, the twelve year old son of the prisoners, was the principal.

Witness said the boy was unable to give any information concerning his sister's death.

McFall poured coffee, while Miss McFall of Bolton and Mrs. Hughes of Toledo, assisted in the tea room. "Say," demanded an opposing batsman one day in the spring, "why don't you go back to Germany and fight for the fatherland?"

"Who, me?" demanded Karl. "Not on your life! Did the Kaiser send anybody over here to help me last fall when I was pitching in all those rough double-headers?"

Striking Example To The Mothers

Mrs. Davis, of Ottawa, Secures 12 Recruits To Obtain Chance For Her Only Son

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—Ottawa has a Spartan mother who has carried out a heroic bargain with the 77th Overseas Battalion now being recruited here.

Mrs. Davis, an Ottawa widow with an only son, eighteen years of age, brought the boy to the barracks yesterday, but he fell just short of the requirements for buglers. Nothing daunted, the mother told the Adjutant of the battalion that she knew of twelve other young men, sons of friends of hers, who were of military age, and she made a bargain that if she could obtain the promise of the enlistment of these men special permission would be obtained from the authorities to enroll her son. The bargain was carried out the same day. Mrs. Davis rounded up her twelve recruits, made the impelling personal appeal to them that she was giving her only son to the cause, and they consented to join the colours. Young Davis will now be able to fight for the country that produces such mothers.

"WHISTLE WING" DUCKS ARRIVE AT RICE LAKE

Mr. J. J. Gilman of Lakeview House, Harwood, states that wild ducks are not plentiful just now. The "whistlers" have begun to come in, but their number has been quite limited so far. Most of the earlier birds are believed to have gone to Lake Ontario. One party of hunters at Idyl Wild bagged one duck during their stay of two weeks and on the very last day before they arrived twenty ducks were shot in the vicinity of that island. Things have begun to assume the settled conditions preparatory to the arrival of winter except for motor parties from Port Hope and Peterborough arriving at Lakeview House for wild duck dinners.

A WORD OF FOUR LETTERS

Phenomena of Language Among many Peoples of Earth.

Anthropologists are now puzzling over a peculiarity in the name for the Deity used by various peoples, ancient and modern. In every instance with the one exception of the name God, the Deity is represented by a word of four letters. And in Anglo-Saxon the three-letter name means "good," another four-letter word.

In Latin the word for the Deity is Deus; Greek, Zeus; Hebrew, Adon; Syrian, Abad; Arabian, Alla; Persian, Syra; Tartarian, Idza; Egyptian, Amun or Zeut; East Indian, Esgi or Zendi; Japanese, Zain; Turkish Addi; Scandinavian, Odin; Croatian, Deza; Dalmatian, Rozt; Tyrrhenian Eher; Etrurian, Chur; Margarian Oeer; German, Gott; French, Dieu; Spanish, Dio; Peruvian, Lian.

By what phenomena of language or thought did all these peoples select a word of four letters to personify the Deity, scientists and anthropologists are asking.

THE ITALIIAN GOVERNMENT HAS SEIZED GERMAN SHIPS

Urges Britain to Closely Watch Greece Lest the King Prove a Traitor

Generally Believed in Italy That Agreement Has Been Reached With Bulgaria--Italy Will Send a Force Into the Balkans.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Dr. Dillon, in a special despatch from Rome to the Daily Telegraph, warns the British government to keep a close watch on King Constantine, as it is generally believed in Italian Ministerial circles that Bulgaria and Greece have reached an agreement and that, taking advantage of the dissolution of the Chamber the King, as head of the army, may suddenly invade Albania and occupy Monastir.

Dr. Dillon adjures the government not to be the victim of treachery and false promises, as in the case of the negotiations with King Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

ITALY IS TO AID.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—An unofficial announcement from Italy that the Cabinet had decided to send a force into the Balkans to co-operate with the Anglo-French contingent "in a manner worthy of Italy's greatness" is expected to have much effect on the attitude of Greece and Roumania. The report of the Cabinet's decision comes from both Rome and Milan and from sources which are understood to be in the confidence of the government.

The continued landing of British and French troops at Salonika is causing some uneasiness to Bulgaria and Turkey, and the Ministers of those two Powers Friday again protested to the Greek government, which took formal notice of their protest. The determination of the Entente Allies in their Balkan campaign is shown by the large force they are sending to Salonika.

Meanwhile the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians are advancing slowly in their efforts to cut off or annihilate the Serbian army. These efforts, however, are growing more difficult, as the Serbians now have occupied, according to their official report defensive positions to the south and east of Karaiaivo and east of Ivagnitza and on the eastern front on the left bank of the Southern Morava, where heavy fighting is in progress.

Big battles also are proceeding in the south between the Bulgarians and the Anglo-French, but the reports are so conflicting that it cannot be said which side has gained an advantage.

FRENCH DEFEAT BULGARS.

LONDON, Friday—A Reuter despatch from Athens says a Salonika telegram to the Patris states that the French have inflicted a severe defeat on the Bulgarians near Veles and that the fall of that town is considered imminent.

5,000 SERBS HOLD 15,000 BULGLARS.

SALONIKA, Wednesday, via Paris, Friday—Five thousand Serbians still are holding 15,000 Bulgarians at bay between Isvor and Abdi Pacha Hahn, in the Babuna defile, but the Serbs now control the heights of Kosjac and occupy the whole line of mountain, making, in the opinion of military men here, the withdrawal of the Bulgarians only a question of time.

The people who left Monastir in a panic at the approach of the invaders are now returning. Prilep and Monastir are resuming their normal appearance.

Suffering in the interior of Serbia is said to be great owing to the lack of food and shelter. Thousands of refugees from the north have been driven out by the advancing Austro-Germans.

$1.75 A Week For Editor Not Enough

NEW YORK, November 15.—Determined to give the citizens just what they pay for, the editor of the College Point Herald has issued a handbill instead of the usual four page, eight column paper. Yesterday College Point, L.I., therefore has the distinction of having the smallest newspaper in the United States.

There are 11,000 souls in College Point, according to the College Point Herald, it has 1,600 homes and only eight cents. The total income of the Herald for a week was $1.75. This week, it adds, the payment of past due advertising bills, the income of the paper was twenty-five cents. During the last three weeks the editor has called personally on at least seventy-five subscribers whose subscriptions are from two to six months overdue and collected $2.50. Really, that is not quite enough.

The editor complains that while many residents of College Point supported the Herald bravely there was an unsympathetic majority which was glad to get the paper only so long as they could continue paying for their subscriptions. It announced that after [illegible] it would cease to help financing the Herald the editor and Miss Florence Wood would continue publication with the profit of the job printing and with money earned doing literary work for the city.

In the future, continues the editorial, we will give out as much as the people pay for. If during the week enough money comes in to publish a four-page sheet that will be done. If not, we shall continue to have little weekly notices with the news. If anybody can get out a better paper he or she may make arrangements to take hold of the paper almost [illegible].

The editorial is signed "Deserted Editor." In a postscript he announces that he is willing to return all those who have paid their subscriptions in advance and desire the return of their money, and will do his own personal printing. The entire force of the paper, editor of news and [illegible] is now one.

The College Point Herald will in the next week [illegible] three columns devoted to editorial and advertising matter. There are to be [illegible] to creditors, two display advertisements of local concerns and a [illegible] settlement. Beneath the [illegible] announcement that [illegible] health, go to the Regent Theatre [illegible] drink beer [illegible] Greenbrier."

FRIENDS OF LONG STANDING MEET IN DEATH GRAPPLE

Canadian and German Who Were Next Door Neighbours In Winnipeg meet on the Battlefield

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 15.—During a night attack in one of the battles at Ypres a star shell showed to a Winnipeg soldier the face of a German who had seen him off at the Union station here in August, 1914. The Canadians had reached the German trench and a hand to hand encounter followed. The Winnipeg soldier and his one-time German friend lost their rifles and they grappled until the Canadian was choking his man.

"Neither of us said a word, but I know he recognized me," narrates the Canadian, who has returned, discharged because of wounds.

"We had been next door neighbours for several years in North Winnipeg and were fast friends.

"How did it end? A comrade bayonetted him just as the flare died down. Next morning I found he was dead. All that concerns me now is the question how he got there."

STENOGRAPHERS MUST POSSESS GOOD LOOKS

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 15.—Kansas girls who desire to be stenographers and draw a salary from the State are wondering if they should take a course with a beauty doctor before taking the Civil Service examination. The rules of the Commission as announced show that personal appearance and deportment count for thirty points.

Stenography, typewriting, grammar, spelling and penmanship between them count for the other seventy points.

But the girls are figuring on the possibility of being fairly proficient in all those and yet failing to get on the eligible list because they are dowdy because their hair is not done in the latest style, because a shoe is run over at the heel, or because they are too freckled.

HERD KILLED DESPITE INJUNCTION, IS CLAIM

PRIZE CATTLE SLAUGHTERED AGAINST COURT ORDERS, WOMAN CHARGES.

CHICAGO, November 15.—A $60,000 herd of prize Guernsey cattle belonging to Mrs. Scott Durand of Lake Forest, and condemned to death because of foot and mouth infection, was slaughtered under rather sensational circumstances. Mrs. Durand protested that the cattle were protected by an injunction obtained on Saturday in a local court, but the sheriff carried out his orders.

According to Mrs. Durand, sheriff Gilbo and his men made certain the destruction of the cattle by first making herself and her servants prisoners in the farm house at the point of rifles and shotguns. Talking over the telephone from her farm house to a Chicago newspaper, Mrs. Durand said:

"They even fired at me when I tried to approach the barn."

While she was talking she said she could see from the window the smoke of a rifle shot curling from the barn where the killing was in progress.

"These murderers! These anarchists!" she gasped over the telephone. "They have shot my poor animals in defiance of law, in contempt of the injunction which protected my cattle from them. It is the most anarchistic act I have ever heard of. They even denied me the right to send for a veterinary surgeon to see that the animals were despatched in a merciful manner."

"For anything to escape the loneliness of that room," she replied seriously. "If I really look rested it is not from sleep, for I have passed the night in terror. My slumbers are fitful and filled with dreams. But I am sure of some things my door was tried twice, and I heard some one prowling about the hall"—

"That might have been I," I interrupted. "As I was out there during the night, but I certainly never tried your door."

"You had a light?"

"Yes."

"I saw that shining over the transom. It was much later when the door was tried not long before daylight, I think. Whoever it was pried out the front hall window and got to the porch roof. My light was burning, though turned low, and no doubt I saw me sitting up wide awake on the edge of the bed for he fled then, scared by the time I gained enough courage to approach the window and look out."

"Climbed down the trellis probably," I said, deeply interested. "It appears strong enough to support a man. I wish you had got sight of the fellow."

She lifted her hands to her head.

"But I was so frightened. My head throbs now with pain. I was frightened last night in the darkness. I confess I completely lost my nerve and would have run away if I could. Perhaps I even said things which made you believe I regretted my action in coming with you. But I am more myself now, and I mean to remain and discover what it all means. Can you guess why? Do you not suspect who I am?"

"Who are you? Only as you have told me."

"And I told you only a half truth. I am the wife of Philip Henley." Her cheeks flushed, a touch of passion in her voice as she faced me. "That is the truth. Do you suppose that I would ever have come here with you otherwise? No matter how desperate my condition was, that would have been impossible. I should have despised myself."

My surprise at this avowal kept me silent, yet I could not conceal the admiration from revealment in my eyes. She must have read aright, for she drew back a step, grasping the knob of the door.

"I—I wanted to tell you yesterday—all the way coming down here. But I wanted to discover just what you were like."

"You mean whether I could be trusted?"

She looked at me frankly.

"Now I am simply going to trust you fully. I must. There is no other way. I thought it all over and over again last night and determined to confess everything as soon as we met this morning."

CHAPTER VII.

The Decision.

NOW that I could openly associate myself with Philip Henley's wife in a struggle to retain for her what was justly her own, all feeling of doubt vanished, and I became grimly confident of the final result.

"I am glad to know that," I said, "for now I can work openly, knowing exactly what I ought to do. I have felt like a rat skulking in a hole. I believed what those men told me. They convinced me with proofs I could not ignore, but they must have lied. Would it be possible for Philip Henley to be in a penitentiary convicted of crime?"

"It would not be," she returned firmly. "There was no time after I left him for an arrest and conviction. That alone is sufficient to convince me of fraud and conspiracy. His remittances were amply sufficient."

"Then what do you think has occurred?"

"Either one of two things," she said soberly. "He is dead or helplessly in the power of those men who sent you here. There is no other conclusion possible. They had possession of his papers, even his private memoranda. They knew more of conditions here than I had ever been told. In my judgment, he is dead. Otherwise I cannot conceive it possible they would dare attempt to carry out such a conspiracy. The very boldness of their plan convinces me they believed no one lived to expose them. They knew he was dead and believed, if I still lived, that I knew nothing of his inheritance. The telegram announcing the judge's death I never saw. It must have arrived while Philip was too intoxicated to grasp its meaning."

"You know nothing, then, of the two men Neale and Vail?"

"No. There is a Justus G. Vail, a lawyer, in the city. I found the name in the directory and called at his office. He was away making political speeches, and been gone two weeks."

"Then the fellow assumed that name, thinking I might be familiar with it and thus be impressed with the legality of the transaction. As to Neale, I will go to the courthouse in this county and find out about him. You have told me the whole truth about yourself now?"

"Absolutely, yes. Here is my marriage certificate; I have always kept it with me, for I have been afraid of him almost from the first. I gave you the name Bernard unthinkingly, as that was the name he insisted upon living under. Is that all you wish to know?"

"All now, yes. I must have time to think and plan what is best for us to do. I can already see my duty sufficiently clear, but not how to go at it. The fact is, Mrs. Henley"—

"Would it not be better for you to call me Viola?" she interrupted. "Some one might overhear, and we must continue to carry out the deception, I suppose."

"Then, Viola"—and her eyes suddenly flashed into mine—"the conditions I have already discovered here in this house are no less strange and dangerous than the mission which brought us here. Everything looks bad. There was murder committed in this house last night."

"Murder!" Her face went white, her fingers clasping my sleeve. "Who was killed? Coombs? That woman?"

"Neither. A man I never saw before. I heard the shot and found him lying dead on the floor of the rear room. He had been shot in the back of the head through an open window. And I told her the whole story.

Bewildered consternation was clearly manifested in the girl's white face, and yet there was a briskness to the lips that promised anything but surrender. For an instant she seemed to struggle to regain her breath.

"Oh, how terrible! I can scarce realize that all you have told me can be fact. There were pirates along the coast once—I have read of them—but now, in our age of the world, even to dream of such a state of affairs would be madness. What can it mean? Have you any theory?"

"Absolutely none. I am groping in the dark without a single clew. But in my judgment there are others than Coombs, Sallie and the creole servants about whom we know nothing."

"You mean there is a band that we have stumbled into a rendezvous of outlaws?"

"I suspicion so. This plantation has been practically abandoned for years. Even when the judge was alive he lived in town and could get no negroes to work out here because they believed the place was haunted. A bayou comes within a hundred yards of the rear of the house, so concealed by trees and scrub as to be almost lay ab-ble until you stand on the banks. We are only a little over twenty miles from the gulf. Altogether this would make an ideal hiding place for Mobile or New Orleans thieves."

"What do you mean to do?"

The question was asked quietly, and I glanced at her, noting the color had returned to her cheeks.

"I? Why, remain and ferret it out, I suppose," and I laughed. "Coombs is going to have a talk with me later. Intends to make sure who I am no doubt, and I may learn something from him during the interview."

"What about me?"

"You had better return to town. A traveling man on the train said there was a good hotel. Probably Coombs has some kind of a rig we can drive down in. I'll ask him after breakfast."

"Is it because you do not wish me with you?"

"I shall feel more free alone," I replied, "for I shall have only myself to guard. I am used to taking care of myself. Besides, this is likely to prove a rather unpleasant situation for a lady."

"And you conclude I can be of no help, no assistance"—

The cracked voice of Sallie came to us up the stairs, the unexpected sound startling both.

"I reckon you all better com' down an' eat."

She stood in the light of the front door watching us, and we descended the flight of steps without exchanging a word. The woman turned and walked in advance into the dining room.

"Where is Coombs?" I asked, looking about curiously.

"He done eat already, but I reckon he'll be found 'gain after awhile. You all just help yerselves."

We endeavored to talk as we sampled the meal, directing our conversation into safe channels, both obsessed with a feeling that whatever we said would be overheard. The woman had vanished into the dark passage leading toward the kitchen. Neither of use ate heartily and as soon as we dared pushed back our chairs. It was a relief to get out of the room, but as we stood a moment in the front doorway breathing in the fresh air I noticed a giant form approaching the house through the weeds.

"Coombs is coming already for his interview," I said hastily. "As it may be stormy, perhaps you had better retreat upstairs."

"I will go," she said quickly, "but I shall not leave this house while you remain."

She was gone before I could speak, before I could even grasp the full purport of her decision. I followed the flutter of her skirt up the stairs, half tempted to rush after, yet as instantly comprehended the uselessness of any attempt at influencing her. Even the short space of our acquaintance had served to convince me that she was a woman of resource, of character and determination.

I heard the thud of Coombs' feet upon the steps of the veranda. That he had been drinking I realized at a glance, and it was equally evident that he planned to overawe me by brutal domineering.

"So yer've got through eatin,' hey?" he began coarsely. "What's the fo'mality 'bout I come here?"

"You did," I returned coldly. "But Mrs. Henley has returned to her room."

"Mrs. Hepley, huh! Think yer kin pull that bluff over me?"

"What bluff?"

"Aw, this Henley racket you sprung last night—'bout yer being young Phil Henley come back."

"Did I say that?"

"Yer shure did," eying me in some surprise. "I reckon my ears heard all right. Why, what are yer this morning?"

"If I ever made any such claim as that, Coombs, it was merely to secure our admittance. It's different this morning, and I am going to be just as frank with you as you are with me. Is that square?"

"I reckon," uneasily, not yet able to gauge my purpose and fearing his bluff a failure. "I ain't got nothin' ter hide about so fur as I know. Let's go inside, whar we kin have it out quiet like."

I followed him into the front room, and he kicked out a chair so as to bring my face to the windows. As I sank into it I noticed a dusty mirror opposite which gave me a dim reflection of the entire room. Coombs shut the door and sat down facing me, his big hands on his knees. His effort to look pleasant only made him appear uglier than usual.

"Waal, go on!" he said gruffly.

I crossed my legs comfortably and leaned back in the chair, quite conscious of thus adding to his irritation. My best card was cool indifference.

"There is not much to say," I replied deliberately. "I'll answer your questions so far as I think best, and then I'll ask a few of you. The lady upstairs is Viola Henley, the wife of Philip Henley. She has come down here to take legal possession of this property. That is the situation in a nutshell. I am merely accompanying her to make sure that she gets a square deal."

His jaw sagged, and his eyes wandered.

"Oh!" he managed to articulate. "What is your real game?"

"Exactly as I have stated it, Coombs. To the best of my knowledge Philip Henley is dead—at least he has disappeared—and his widow is the rightful heir to this estate."

"Waal, I reckon he ain't dead—not by a jugful!"

I felt the hot blood pump in my veins. Did the man know this to be true, or was he merely making the claim for effect?

"That, of course, remains to be proved," I returned smilingly.

"Oh, does it, now! He does this yer wife business, to my thinkin'. Waal, it won't take long ter settle the matter, believe me. Who are you anyhow?"

"My name is Craig—Gordon Craig."

"A lawyer?"

"Not guilty."

"A detective?"

"Same plea."

I thought he gave a grunt of relief. "All right, then. I reckon I get yer number, Craig. Yer after a little easy money. Somehow, yer caught on to the mixup down yere an' framed up a scheme to cop the coin. Might have worked, too, if I hadn't been on the job an' posted. Nice lookin' girl yer picked up"—

"Drop that, Coombs!" I interrupted sharply, leaning forward and staring him in the eyes.

"Oh, too nice, hey!"

Had No Ambition To Do Her Housework.

System Was All Run Down.

Mrs. Herbert Doherty, Beaver Brook, N.B., writes: "I have used some of your Burdock Blood Bitters, and found it to be a great medicine. My system was in a run down condition for over a year. I suffered with bad headache, and did not seem to have any ambition to do my housework. In the morning I could not half eat, and what I did eat did not apparently seem to do me any good. After using four bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters I was an entirely different woman. I cannot recommend B B B too highly to people suffering the same as I was."

The blood reaches every portion of the body to distribute nutriment, and remove effete matter and waste products, clearly then, any influence, good or bad, affecting the blood, must necessarily affect the entire system for good or evil as the case may be. To this fact is due the wonderful efficacy of Burdock Blood Bitters in removing every form of disease. It at once strikes to the root of the trouble, and quickly restores the depleted system to a condition of vigorous health.

B B B has been on the market for the past forty years, and is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Impatience.

Charles Lauder, Jr., of the new Greenwich Rifle association—Mr. Lauder is Mr. Carnegie's nephew—was talking the other day about strategy.

Some of the strategy displayed in this war," he said, "the Dardanelles strategy, for example, makes a man impatient. A man really, before this strategy, feels like speaking up as impatiently as the plumber.

"A plumber went into a strange barber's to be shaved. A boy began to lather him. But the boy lathered lazily and absently, his thoughts far away. The plumber, noticing that little, if any lather rose up under the languid brush, growled:

"'Pshaw, boy, there's nothing doing this way at all. We'll have to try another method. Just you hold the brush still now, and I'll waggle my face.'"

GREAT DAY OF GOD ALREADY BEGUN

We Should Walk Worthy of Our Great Vocation.

Responsibility of Enlightened Christians—Present Heavens and Earth About to Be Dissolved—Not Literal Heavens or Literal Earth, but Symbolic—Shaking Process Now Under Way — "Peace! Peace' When There Is No Peace"—Comparison of Earthly and Heavenly Values — Our Full Salvation About to Be Revealed—Necessary Development of Character for the Kingdom.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 14. Pastor Russell gave a helpful and impressive discourse here today. He spoke as follows: My text, dear friends, is from the words of the Apostle Peter: "Seeing, then, that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the Day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat?" (2 Peter 3:11, 12.) The marginal reading omits the word "unto" after the word "hasting." The word "unto" was supplied by the translators in an endeavor to make the rendering clear. The marginal rendering does not give the right thought, evidently; for we could not hasten the Day of the Lord. God's Plan was fixed before the foundation of the world. In this passage the phrase, "hastening the preparation for the Day of God," more nearly gives the Apostle's thought than either of the other translations.

We can hasten our preparation for the wonderful things coming, but we cannot hasten the Day. Indeed, the fact that the marvelous things God has foretold are now beginning to come to pass demonstrates that the Day of the Lord is now present. It is very necessary to realize what manner of persons we should be and then be such persons. We should be saints, faithful to the Lord in all things. We should give as much of our time as possible to the perfecting of ourselves and to the building up of one another in the most holy faith. We should be ensamples "in all holy conversation and godliness."

This word "conversation" in the old English includes the sum-total of holy living—our words, our acts, our general conduct. It has thus in the Scriptures a wider meaning than is given it to-day. St. Peter knew that God's people would be helped by the thought that the great Day of the Lord was at hand, so he says, in view of this, "Seeing that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be?" Then how paltry all the things of "this present evil world" should appear to us who see the disintegration of the Present Order already under way!

What were the things to be dissolved? The Apostle had just been specifying them—"The heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the things that are therein, shall be burned up." Yet God's people, as the Apostle says, "look for a new heavens and a new earth." He is not speaking of literal heavens, but the symbolic heavens—the ecclesiastical heavens, the present church organizations. The Prophet Zephaniah also speaks of this same great burning time of the Day of the Lord.—Zephaniah 1:14-18; 3:8, 9.

The Only True Basis of Peace.

Even now the present heavens, the nominal church systems, are in great commotion, in much distress. Preachers and people are wondering what these things mean that are now taking place. They have been telling everybody that the world is getting better, that all will soon be converted through the churches. They have been saying, "Peace! peace!" but instead of peaceful conditions have come riot and war. (Jeremiah 6:14-19.) There has been no real basis for peace. Christians who are hearkening to God's Word are the only ones who have a real basis for peace in the Lord's Word and in the Lord's spirit we have the things that make for peace. "Blessed are the peacemakers; for they shall be called the children of God." "Blessed are they that are persecuted for righteousness' sake; for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven."

With the world the disposition is "See that nobody gets the better of you. Fight your own battles." Life is a battle for all mankind. Some fight for a living, and others in more open warfare. All are more or less contentious to have the best they can get. But the true Christian's fight is in his own body principally against selfishness, a desire to have his own way, to gratify his own natural inclinations. God is not selecting a class different from people in general in this respect. On the contrary, not many great, learned, noble, wise, has God chosen, but chiefly "the poor of this world, rich in faith." This fact leaves us no room for pride.

We find that we have something to contend with in this natural meanness of our fallen nature, while the world imagine that they have something to be proud of. "No one shall get ahead of me if I can help it!" is their sentiment. The Lord gives His children different instruction, but no instruction merely; for if that were all, it would be very much harder for us than it is. He gives us a noble incentive and the necessary assistance all along the way. God has set before us a great prize; some of us have seen its glory and are running for it. What is this prize? Oh, glory, honor, immortality, joint-heirship with Christ in the Heavenly Kingdom, riches such as no earthly being ever dreamed of! He not only has shown us these things, but has given us the opportunity of obtaining them.

Heavenly Riches Incomparable.

We see many people who hope some day to be very rich. Now, the Lord offers every one of us who has the hearing ear something beside which a million dollars or many millions would be as nothing, absolutely insignificant. To those who become His children He offers riches of grace, of life, of glory and exaltation far above angels, cherubim or seraphim, and still farther above humanity; and these riches to be eternal. Of this we are sure; we have the Lord's Word for it in many places. The Lord through the Apostle Peter said, you remember, that by the exceeding great and precious promises He had given us we might be made partakers of the Divine nature. (2 Peter 1:4.) Why did He make us this wonderful offer? Because of His love for us and because He has an infinite purpose to be outworked. We are to be transformed, made New Creatures, meet to be partakers of our glorious inheritance.

As St. Paul says, "All things are yours." The whole world would be insignificant in comparison with the Lord's rich promises to those who follow Jesus in the narrow way. Some live and toil for forty and fifty years to accumulate a fortune, and they generally die before they get much besides worry and care out of it; and at best it is all very disappointing. But God has promised to give His children everlasting life on the very highest plane, and glory, honor, and joy beyond compare. How rich we feel who have accepted God's great offer and are complying with His terms! Let others contend about these other things if they will. Why should we waste any time quarreling over earthly baubles?

Our future is all dependent upon our becoming copies of God's dear Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. We would surely lose the prize if we were to set our affections on earthly things. "Set your affection on things Above, not on things on the earth." Are your affections going to home and business, to cats, dogs, and canary birds, or to the things Above? Do you think chiefly of these earthly things, and then when in prayer try to turn your affections Above again? We shall not thus succeed in making our calling and election sure.

When the Master invited the Apostles Peter, James, and John up into the mountains with Him, where He was transfigured, they did not wish ever to go down again. Peter asked permission to build tabernacles there. So when some brethren get to a very uplifting meeting or convention of believers they desire to stay. They think they could be certain of spiritual victory in such surroundings. But we cannot always remain up on the mountain-top. We must return to the valley below for our testing, our proving and our crystallization of character and for service for God.

The Apostle in our text calls attention to the fact that we not only have the Heavenly things, far better and grander than the earthly things, but also that the Present Order is to be dissolved, as we have seen. Let us not become entangled with the things of this world. One might gain a high office, he might get a large fortune, have many servants, a fine mansion, automobiles, etc. But when he saw all these things slipping from his grasp, taking wings, how foolish his course in clutching for these transitory baubles would appear! How he would long for something permanent and substantial!

This will be the case with many. All these earthly things are bound to disappear in the great cataclysm just ahead. In this time of the Lord's Second Presence His saints are to be glorified with Him. We look from the Divine standpoint at the dissolving and shaking of all the things of this present Dispensation. The only thing that will not be shaken down is the Kingdom of God. Let us then serve the Lord faithfully, and realize the value of the unshakable things which will thus be ours.—Hebrews 12:26-28.

Everything unjust, untrue, false, in any sense, everything imperfect, will be shaken down. They will all be burned up. The newspapers say that there is a great conflagration in Europe. The things of the present time—ecclesiastical, social, financial, political—will all become "as the chaff of the summer threshing floor and the wind shall carry them away" forever. (Daniel 2:35, 44.) Then the New Order shall come in. The true Church of God will be the "new heavens"—God's saints. Then there will be a "new earth"—a new social Order. This will gradually bring it perfection. Mankind will be delivered from sin and death. All may become complete through the work of Christ.

Christ Jesus will always be the Head of the Church, although after their glorious "change" they will no need the robe of His righteousness imputed justification. This "change" of the Church is, we believe, very near at hand. Knowing all that is so soon to come to pass, is it any wonder that the Apostle urges us to watchfulness and saintliness? Our salvation our full deliverance, is ready to be revealed now in this last Day, which is right upon us. For about 1900 years the Church of Christ has patiently waited and prayed for these things to take place.

Necessary Character-Traits in Saints

It is very important that we heed the Apostle's words in our text. "Seeing, then, that all these things are to be dissolved, what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" We hope to be copies of God's dear Son. He had the Father's spirit in all things. He made the Father's will His own. So we are to have the Father's spirit and to make His will our own. We are to have the mind that was in Christ Jesus, the mind of the Apostles and all the true saints.

The Scriptures tell us how the Lord's Spirit manifests itself. It is manifested in meekness in our intercourse with the brethren, in a humble appreciation of ourselves, in contentment with everything our God gives in a delight to have Christ as our Teacher. It is manifested in gentleness. There are some people who are gentle because, naturally, they do not know how to be anything else, because they have not sufficient character to be anything else. These putty people will gain character during the Millennium; but God now desires those only who have a strong individuality and a love of righteousness. Others are not appealed to by the Lord's Message.

The class that appreciate the Lord's Word are those who have real character, something of a will of their own by nature. You could not give up your will to God if you had none. The condition upon which we may become disciples of Christ is to surrender our wills. From that time on we must keep them surrendered. There is no harm in a person's having a strong will. He will make one of the best soldiers in the Lord's army if that will is turned in the right direction. This class that God is calling have a good, strong will. But this will must be trained to full obedience to the Lord. It must die to self. We are learning this daily in the School of Christ.

If you are inclined to practise patience for a while and then get tired remember "you have need of patience, that having done the will of God you might receive the promise." (Hebrews 10:36.) The Lord has been patient with you. The prize-winners must become like our Father and like His Son. We must learn patience, if it is not there naturally. You may feel inclined to say, "The Lord must accept me just as I am." But the Lord will not take you into the Kingdom just as you are. He accepted you at first as you were; but He expected you to overcome, to develop as a New Creature. If you wish to be in the Kingdom class, you must attain the character-likeness of Christ.

But someone may ask, "Why does not the Lord make us perfect by His own power, without such painful effort on our part?" We answer, The character you develop is stronger for your struggles, and it is your own. It is a necessary part of our schooling to develop character. Why do we send children to school. It is because by the lessons there learned they will be exercising their mental faculties thus making their minds stronger for every subject, fitting them for the responsibilities awaiting them later. So it is with us.

Meekness, patience, long-suffering—these are some of our lessons. To be long-suffering means to bear long and be kind, to have the quality of endurance towards others, to be very kind in your home toward husband or toward wife, toward the children, toward your brothers and sisters. This is sometimes hard. But remember "There is none righteous [perfect], no, not one." If you have not found that you have many imperfections you have not learned the first lesson in the School of Christ.

We each have heads of different shape, and brains whose quality varies. But when we give ourselves to the Lord we all need a course of vigorous training; for we are very defective. We must have experiences that will reveal to us our own individual weaknesses and faults, that by Divine help they may be corrected as far as possible. The Lord desires every one of us to know how much and where we lack, what we need in order to build ourselves up into Christ. We should each know what part of our own character needs the most attention. In order thus to build ourselves up we look to that perfect Law which shows us just what a perfect character is—gentle, meek, loving, forgiving, patient, etc.

Walking Worthy of Our Calling.

Our deliverance is at hand. "When ye see these things begin to come to pass, then lift up your heads; for your deliverance draweth nigh." Hasten to prepare yourselves for this Day of the Lord. When all the things of the Old Order are dissolved the New Order will be ushered in. When the saints are gathered beyond the veil will you be among them? Thank God, we have the most wonderful hope in the world! We are the antitypical Elijah class. We have come nearly to the close of our earthly pilgrimage. Let us then be true to God, waiting in patience and faith for our glorious "change."

If you are prayerfully striving to do the best you can, God is pleased.

In God's glorious plan for the future we see that ultimately He will reveal Himself to the whole world. When Messiah's Kingdom shall prevail, it will cause the knowledge of the glory of the Lord to fill the earth (Isaiah 11:9; Habakkuk 2:14.) Then whosoever will may receive everlasting life by complying with the prescribed conditions. Those who refuse to do so will ultimately die the Second Death. But you and I have the privilege of knowing Him now, and of entering into full fellowship with Him.

As we become better acquainted with one another, we come to know each other's hearts and thus are drawn closer to one another. So we come to know our God better by heart communion with Him through prayer and through His Word. As we daily tell Him of our dependence upon Him, and especially as we seek to understand His Word, we receive a better knowledge of His character. Thus we are being developed as New Creatures in His glorious character-likeness. Thus we are being made "meet for the inheritance of the saints in light."

"I can see His coming judgments, as they circle all the earth,
The signs and groanings promised to precede a second birth;
I read His righteous sentence in the crumbling thrones of earth;
Our King is marching on."

The difference between ignorance and innocence in a woman is that one or the other is genuine.

COULD NOT BEND DOWN
COULD NOT WALK STRAIGHT
BACK WAS SO BAD.

The bad back comes from the kidneys, and unless the kidneys are carefully watched and properly regulated many serious troubles may follow.

Doan's Kidney Pills will cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure the kidneys so that they will stay cured.

Mr. J. A. Lubinecki, Dauphin, Man., writes: "It is my pleasure to write you in regard to Doan's Kidney Pills which I have been using for some time for kidney trouble, which used to affect my back so that at times I could not bend down nor could I walk straight. I learned about your pills from your almanac, and I bless the happy hour I thought of buying this medicine. One time a druggist persuaded me to buy ——'s Kidney Pills, saying they were just as good, in fact he guaranteed they were. I yielded to his advice, and what was the result? I had bearing down pains in my back for two days, so I took the balance of the pills unused to the druggist and told him to give me Doan's Kidney Pills as they would stop the pain in twelve hours at the outside. He told me he was sorry I did not use more of the pills, and lengthen the time to await results. I told him there was no need of waiting with Doan's Pills; they go right to the spot. No substitute for me."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; See that our trade mark, "The Maple Leaf," is printed on both the table and wrapper.

TURKS HALF-HEARTED

Aulers Plundering, Capital Starving and Recruits Dying, For Germany

A. Robert Mountsier, literary editor of "Judge," New York, who has just returned from Constantinople, writes as follows: In more ways than one Constantinople showed itself the capital of a country that is fighting without any heart for mercenary officials and for an alien people with whom the Turks have nothing in common. Business is bad, food is dearer, and bread is scarce. No shopkeeper dare violate the police order that all flags should be hung out in celebration of a great victory. What was the victory? Ten thousand English soldiers had been killed—so the official report said. The poorer classes of people hearing of victory after victory argue simply, but effectively, "If our brothers are victorious, why don't our husbands, our sons come back to us? Why are there so many wounded? Why don't we have all the bread we want?

Young Turk leaders who are responsible for the present state of affairs can talk for hours about the benefits that their country has derived and the glorious future that will be hers through their sacrifices. Sacrifices! I have yet to hear of any influential member of the present regime who has not been lining his pockets with gold for fair days in Constantinople or for rainy days to come in Asia Minor. Whatever happens they do not intend to lose materially by the offices they have held. The disappearance of public moneys is so well known that rarely is a Turk to be seen putting anything into the "For the National Defence" cans, which are shoved under one's nose in the street, on street cars, in restaurants, in public gardens, everywhere but in the home. Nor is the Turkish public any longer contributing freely to the funds of the Red Crescent.

The recruit in the raw comes from the interior of Asia Minor or from far-off Arabia in his picturesque garments, on a uniform and the peculiar helmet that has replaced the fez, receives an uncertain amount of military training, and goes when needed to the front, usually by a transport ship carrying also ammunition and rifles that have been made by German workmen in the Turkish capital, or shipped across Roumania and Bulgaria as "pianos," "agricultural machinery," and the like.

No Dum-dum Bullets

The United States is the only nation now remaining outside the operation of the declaration barring the use of dum-dum bullets. These bullets are not used, however, in the United States army. Great Britain, having at first refused to sign the convention, and reserving the right to use dum-dum bullets "only against uncivilised peoples," acceded to the declaration at the Second Hague Conference, in 1907. Dum-dum bullets were used in Egypt in 1895, but not in the Boer War. Great Britain, under whose authority they were first manufactured at the Dum-dum Arsenal in Bengal, India, urged the right to use them in warfare with "uncivilized peoples" because ordinary clean-shot bullets did not secure "sufficient stopping power" in fighting with fanatic tribes.

Ancient History of Kilts

The Scottish kilt, as an article of dress, dates back to historic times, and was originally, as far as can be figured out, merely a plaid blanket, worn about the shoulders, with one end gathered about the loins in cold weather. The mountaineers of the Balkans wear the kilt, and students say that the soldiers of the Assyrian kings wore a costume very closely akin to the kilt of Scotland.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

DOING SOMETHING DESPERATE.

And After It Was Done Sylvia Really Felt Contented.

By JEANNE OLIVE LOIZEAUX.
[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

The moonlight and her beauty softened the scorn of her glance when she saw that it was Max who had been sent back for her. She sat alone in Jack Burroughs' stalled machine. Jack and his wife had walked in, being due at an important function.

"You!" Sylvia's tone matched the intention of her glance.

"Even I, Sylvia," he replied with a rueful grin. "Fate is sometimes decent. A fellow has to risk what welcome is coming to him."

"It was horrid of the Burroughses to send you, but they had to get to that dinner, I suppose! My ankle still refuses to let me walk far, or I'd have gone with them afoot."

Tall and fair, cap in hand, he was standing with an offered hand to help her down and into his own little runabout. But she did not move. His glance followed here to the gleaming object held fearfully in her lap. He took both hand and pistol as she explained.

"Jack would leave it when I insisted on their going and sending back the first respectable person they met"—

"Thanks! Are you coming?" He pocketed the weapon. But she only removed her big hat and veil.

"You know why I'm afraid! You're worse than a pistol. I can't trust you." Her tone was quite serious. "Next time you ask me to marry you I shall do something desperate! I would almost prefer staying here alone. Oh, Max, would you, for once, take me straight home? And behave? You used to be nice when we were children."

"I won't propose, in the car, I promise. But I will not take you straight home—it's too early—you and the moon are too divinely fair. I don't want to behave especially, but since I must I will. I will vary the program by asking you not 'Will you have me?' but 'Why is it that you won't have me?' Come?"

Finally she reached him her hand, but without excuse he suddenly took her in his arms and lifted her to his car. For a few minutes they sped along with the June breezes freshening on their faces. At length he spoke frankly, quietly:

"Sylvia, let's talk it over. I may have annoyed you—I may have made a fool of myself imploring you to be mine times innumerable, like a comic opera hero with the same old song. I don't know how to say it many ways. It all comes to the same thing—marriage or not. But I love you."

It pleased him to be whimsical, and Sylvia laughed. It was a change from the dead serious, anyway. He was never modest about his real worth. He continued:

"I am lovable, too, with an affectionate disposition. What is the matter, Sylvia? Please tell me. I will not ask you again—in the car—I promised—and never again at all once I see you do not love me. You have never flatly denied that, you know."

He turned his face away that she might speak freely if she would. Not that she had ever been embarrassed with him; he wished she had. At last she spoke:

"You bring this on yourself. I don't feel polite. You always make me so irritable and unlovely. I want to fly when I see you coming. I came out with the Burroughses to be rid of you and to save them from each other's company. I can't tell you just why it is, but the sight of you makes me contrary, and I cannot say what you want me to."

Speeding a little more, he turned to her coolly.

"You are never unlovely, Sylvia. Just how do I irritate you?"

They glided on through the soft dusk between the dark, sweet breathing woods and lighter meadow lands.

On and on they came, nearer the city, whose myriad lights seemed to flash toward them from the dim hills.

"And you make me think when I don't want to. It's like pushing something away that you do not want to come too close. I simply don't seem to want to be married. I"— She stopped short.

"Is that it? Of course you have to decide that. What is it you do want in your life, Sylvia? To grow old alone? Your aunt won't always live. Do you want to earn your own living? Do you know of anything that would be a satisfactory substitute for married love? Do you want to study some art or a profession—medicine, for instance? Do you want to be an old maid and remember that you had a lover who, man and boy, would do anything—die for you, live for you and with you and give you what happiness he could earn from the scheme of things? Don't I interest you? Must I lose my money or must I take sick and almost die or save somebody in some romantic stunt to make myself interesting? I want to know where I am, what I can do. Are you tired of seeing me about? I might go away a few years. Shall I?" She laughed at his ridiculous, half practical, half sentimental vein so characteristic of him.

"Perhaps I am just too used to you, Max. You used simply to say you were going to marry me. The last year you have teased me by asking me if you make me cross. I don't know just how I do feel. I can't seem to get any perspective on you—or on marriage of all. You seem to stand between me and understanding. I am not a coward, but think of the responsibility! Also the Burroughses always on the ragged edge of a quarrel, undivorced simply because the only thing they agree on is hating a scandal! If Kitty had said no they might both have been happy. It's a big thing—being responsible for a man's happiness, especially if one might get to care very much, and I have nobody of my own, really."

His pulses sang at her words, but he forbade himself to reach for the hand which lay on her lap ungloved.

"Really, Max, the uncertainty and being bothered and all have put me on the verge of—anything, lately. I even thought how soon that little pistol would decide things for me! If this goes on I shall certainly study medicine, or jump from a moving train, or let myself be carried off by Dick Benton!"

She certainly needed some one to look after her, he reflected. He remembered that the mother she never knew had died of a broken heart. This might make her a little bitter and afraid. She seemed to have finished speaking. He had determined what to do. He spoke in a most matter of fact way, dismissing sentiment.

"I want something I left at the bank," he said. "I have dad's key. Would you mind if I stopped there a minute and at the Leader office? I forgot a notice that must be in the morning issue."

They were entering the city. She acquiesced, her head a little dizzy, her heart sinking at his silence. Had she made him think she could never—care? Would he never ask her again? What she thought she was losing became suddenly precious.

When they were on their way home another fear stole over her. Had she unconsciously shown her heart? She wished for the mother she had never known—the lovely, and mother they had told her of. They were entering the driveway.

He helped her out and walked to the door with her. With her hand on the latch, she looked at him timidly, wistfully, a new look for Sylvia.

"Good night," she just breathed. "They are all out yet."

"Just a moment, Sylvia," and he drew her by the hand from the porch, across the lawn, to the old elm where they had played as children.

"Sylvia"—he let go her hand and faced her—"you fear the responsibility? I do not! I will answer for your happiness, which is my own. Can't you believe me? I got mother's old ring from the bank. Now, for the last time, in spite of what you have said, I ask you to marry me. Will you, Sylvia?"

He stooped to catch her low answer, but the sound of voices and steps came from the porch.

"They are coming home," she whispered. He took her by the shoulders.

"Answer me, Sylvia!" Tears stood on her cheeks as she laughed a little, pushing him from her as she said:

"Yes, yes, yes!" He felt his arm about her, his kiss on her lips, his ring on her finger. And she was content.

When at last he was leaving her she whispered demurely:

"I said I would do something desperate—and I have—you are accepted! I deserve anything for being so rash! When shall you tell auntie?"

"Tell auntie to find the announcement in the morning paper."

Sylvia gasped. But what was the use of deciding about what was done?

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. S. M. Moore, Shortreed, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

A CHILLING PROSPECT.

New York World.—The reasons why Greece cannot easily side against the sea-power allies are something more than her poverty, her coast line and her tide-washed cities. Since the dawn of history Greeks have been sailors. Their merchant fleet before the war was equal to Spain's, and more than half Russia's. Only thirtieth of the nations in commerce, Greece was twelfth in the carrying trade, and is now ninth or better. The prospect of killing her shipping at one blow might chill as stout a heart as Constantine's.

Home Made Gifts for Men

Phone Record Made of Linen

A record for phone calls is a convenience that every man will appreciate and a gift that will last indefinitely. The details for making a phone list are shown in the picture above.

The cover is made of heavy, unbleached linen, cut in a strip about six inches wide and twelve long. This is edged with buttonhole stitching in black embroidery silk. Four eyelet holes are worked near the center as shown in the picture. A small spray of red flowers, with green foliage is embroidered in one corner and a border, scroll and "Phone Calls" are done in outline stitch in black.

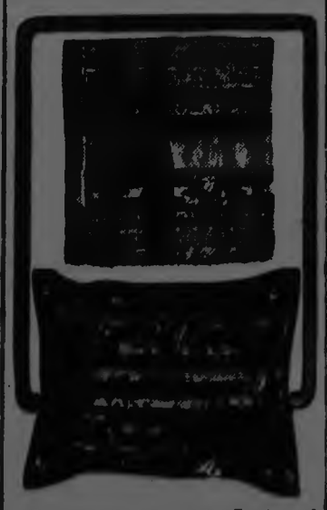
This linen cover encloses a tablet on which names and numbers are written. Narrow red ribbon strung through the eyelets holds cover and tablet together and forme hangers for suspending the record.

Pin Cushion and Candle Shade

Certain patterns in Cretonne are suited to dresser scarfs, pin-cushion covers, slipper bags, candle shades and other little furnishings that are required for men's rooms. In the picture a dresser set is shown, including a scarf, pincushion and candle shade. The cretonne shows a red rose and green foliage against a black and white striped ground. So decided a pattern is to be most sparingly used, and the scarf is therefore only bordered with the cretonne. A square pincushion is covered first on one side with a small square of the cretonne sewed smoothly over it. For the other side a considerably larger square is hemmed about the edges and pinned over the cushion.

The candle shade is made over a wire frame and consists of a circular piece stretched over the top and sewed to place. A hemmed strip hangs from the edge of the frame to which it is sewed.

Pillow Cover and Dresser Scarf



Cretonne is the most effective of inexpensive materials for making beautiful gifts. It is at its best in furnishings for the bedroom.

A pillow cover of cretonne and a dresser scarf of scrim bordered with it are shown in the picture. The pillow cover is finished with a hem all around, and bound with black braid about the edges. The open end fastens with snap fasteners.

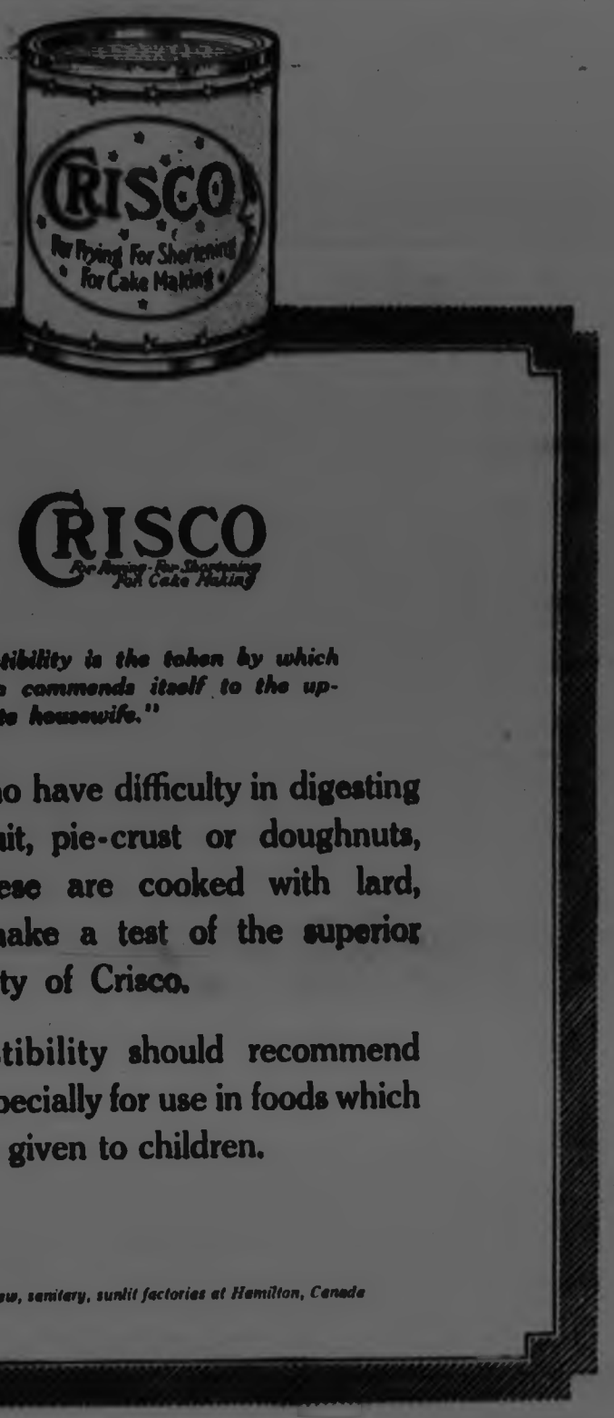
The dresser scarf suggests the way in which these strong, brilliant patterns should be used. A band of the cretonne is stitched along each side, leaving most of the surface white, as a background for the pincushion or other articles that may be covered with the cretonne.

A North Wales minister recently paid a great tribute to the press.

The little town in which his chapel stands had been visited within a short space of time with several catastrophes all of which with harrowing details had been duly exploited in the papers.

The minister was moved to make the misfortunes of his townsmen a subject of prayer. He knelt in the pressure of his congregation and began fervently:

O Lord, doubtless Thou hast learned through the papers of our recent sad and grave afflictions.—Tit Bits.



"Digestibility is the token by which Crisco commends itself to the up-to-date housewife."

Those who have difficulty in digesting hot biscuit, pie-crust or doughnuts, when these are cooked with lard, should make a test of the superior digestibility of Crisco.

Its digestibility should recommend Crisco especially for use in foods which are to be given to children.

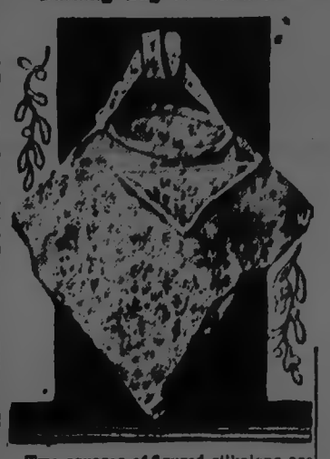
Convenient Gifts for Everyone

Wall Pockets for the Closet

A convenient gift which will be welcomed by either men or women is a group of wall pockets for the closet. A strip of denim or cretonne is cut as long as the maker may choose and bound with tape. Strips of the material, ranging in width and length are bound with the tape and a deep box plait is laid in each one.

These pieces are stitched along three sides to the plain strip to form pockets, as shown in the picture above. The pockets hold slippers, shoes, rubbers, hosiery, corsets or small articles for the laundry. Pockets made to extend the length of the closet door will hold everything which usually finds a place on the floor.

Darning Bag of Silkalene



Two squares of figured silkalene are placed face to face and machine stitched together in a felled seam. One corner is then cut off and the bag and corner piece turned right side out.

The edges, made by cutting off the corner, are folded over a small embroidery hoop and sewed down. The bag is suspended by means of a fold of the silkalene, with edges machine-stitched together and ends sewed to each side of the opening.

The corner that was cut away is stuffed with cotton or sawdust and bound with tape, making a cushion for darning needles. A little piece of tape is sewed to one edge of it and to the bag, attaching it to the opening. This provides a receptacle for hosiery that needs darning.

Anti-German Alliance

Russian Foreign Minister Says Allies Must Have Permanent Pact.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 12.—I have had the honour of discussing the present situation at some length with Sergius Sazonoff, the Russian Foreign Minister.

"We are grappling with power which threatens to overturn the whole fabric of civilization as developed by the world of Christendom," Mr. Sazonoff said. "The future of European culture as opposed to German Kultur depends upon the overthrow of this power and the means taken to prevent its ever breaking out again. We must have the policy of this century based firmly upon the alliance between Russia, England and France. Other nations will probably come into our alliance, but we three must form the nucleus. We must say to Germany:

"These are your frontiers and your limits. Work within them as you please; but out into the world you go no more. We have had enough of the disintegrating influence you bring to bear in every quarter of the world. We desire to live at peace as Christian nations. Your unscrupulous rule, based on the principle of armed force, has threatened to enslave the world. That principle is abhorrent to us all. You must be content to stay quietly at home and conduct your commerce and domestic affairs as may please you best; but you shall no more encroach upon the sacred rights of your neighbours.

"That is what Russia, England and France in alliance must say to Germany, and to the voices of these three will doubtless adhere many Christian nations of the world. It is my firm conviction that if the policy of the twentieth century does not rest upon a solid alliance between Russia, England and France, then this great war, into which we have been deliberately forced by Germany, will have been waged in vain, and all the blood and treasure expended upon it and still to be spent will have been utterly wasted."

GERMAN PRISONERS CLEANING AND MENDING ROADS IN FRANCE—A SAFER JOB THAN THEY HAD IN THE TRENCHES.

NOT SURPRISING.

The weather had been very wet for weeks, and the roads "somewhere across the Channel" were in a very bad state. Consequently it was not surprising that a waggon in a certain supply column suddenly dived into a hole full of mud and refused to budge. At this critical moment up came an army chaplain, who at once proffered his services. "Men," he said, "I see you are in difficulties. Can I be of any help?" "Yes, sir," answered a burly sergeant fluently as he mopped his brow, "you can give us the greatest help by making yourself scarce." "Making myself scarce?" gasped the chaplain. "Why, how——?" "Yes, sir," broke in the sergeant, "you see, we can't very well say to the horses what they'd understand while you are about!"

Just Suits My Needs Building Up the System

This is the Way Thousands of Women Are Speaking of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"I want to state that I have never taken anything to do me so much good as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food," writes Mrs. Edson Brock, Trenholmville, Que., "and I am never without it in the house. I was so nervous I could not sleep, but now I sleep soundly at nights and wake up feeling refreshed and ready for the day's work. I used the Nerve Food for months and found that it just suits my needs and has built up the system wonderfully. I know it is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food that has brought about the great change in my condition and am thankful for it.

"My husband was a great sufferer from itching piles and has been entirely cured by Dr Chase's Ointment."

We are constantly receiving letters like this in regard to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Everywhere it is being used because of its great restorative and reconstructive influence on the nervous system. Men and women who are run down in health, tired, nervous and discouraged, find in this great Food Cure the means of nourishing the exhausted system back to health and vigour.

Headaches, indigestion, sleeplessness, nervous irritability, lack of energy, and vigour — all tell of nervous exhaustion, and indicate the need of such treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Instead of affording mere temporary relief by stimulating the nerves, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food builds up the system by supplying the ingredients from which Nature forms new rich blood and revitalizes the wasted nervous system. EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

7294

The little frock herewith shown is one of the simple ones, yet it is not severely plain. It has the closing of the blouse arranged diagonally across the front from the centre at the neck to the side at the belt. The neck is just a trifle low and is outlined by a wide sailor collar, which comes across the front, with the points sloped to the neck closing. There is a chemisette with a high band collar, which may be worn or not with this blouse. The sleeves may be long or cut off at the elbow and finished with a pretty cuff.

The skirt is a three piece model and is of circular cut. It joins the bodice at the waistline without fulness and flares prettily at the lower edge. The closing of the skirt is at the side, beginning where that of the waist ends and continuing downward in a straight line to the hem.

No material receives more favor than gingham for these plain little dresses, and it may be combined with white lawn or muslin collars and cuffs, or plain and figured varieties may be used together. Voile is also liked, as are many of the mercerized cottons.

It is in little things that the differences of plain frocks will be found. Some close in the centre of the front, some at the side, some have gathered skirts, others have them circular. Yet these small variations make quite enough difference in the garments to give an entire change of effect.

The dress pattern, No. 7294, is cut in sizes 6, 8, 10 and 12 years. Medium size requires 3 yards of 36 inch material, with ½ yard of 36 inch contrasting goods to trim.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Sir David Beatty's Accounts Of What the Great Fight Was Like

Lion Was Hit Fifteen Times and Tiger Eight---Graphic Description of the Conflict

The following are extracts from a fascinating article on the Grand Fleet by Mr Frederick Palmer, the well known American war correspondent.

Mr. Palmer was a member of a party of distinguished foreign journalists who made a tour of the Grand Fleet in August and September, this visit being the first and only one which has been paid by any journalists to the Fleet since the outbreak of war:

One could not fail to identify among the group of officers on the quarter-deck Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty, for his victory has impressed his features on the public's eye. Had his portrait not appeared in the Press, one would have been inclined to say that a first lieutenant had put on a vice-admiral's coat by mistake.

"Who's Who" says that he is forty-four years old, and it must be right, though it disagrees with his appearance by five years.

"Was it like what you thought it would be after all your training for a naval action?" one asked.

"Yes, quite; pretty much as we reasoned it out," was the reply.

"Indeed, this was the most remarkable thing. It was battle practice—with the other fellow shooting at you!"

The fire-control officers, who were aloft, all agreed about one unexpected sensation, which had not occurred to any expert scientifically predicting what action would be like. They are the only ones who may really "see" the battle in the full sense.

"When the shells burst against the armour," said one of these officers, "the fragments were visible as they flew about. We had a desire, in the midst of our pre-occupation with our work, to reach out and catch them. Singular mental phenomenon wasn't it?"

The Damaged Turret.

Where were the scars from the wounds? One looked for them on both the Lion and the Tiger. That armor patch on the sloping top of a turret might have escaped attention if it had not been pointed out.

A shell struck there, and a fair blow too. And what happened inside? Was the turret gear put out of order?

The turret is the basket which holds the precious eggs. A turret out of action means two guns out of action; a broken knuckle for the pugilist.

That shell did not go through bodily, only a fragment, which killed one man and wounded another. The turret would still rotate; the other gun kept in action and the one under the shell-burst was soon back in action.

The Lion was hit fifteen times and the Tiger eight.

A beautiful hit, indeed, was that into a small hood aperture where an observer looked out from a turret. He was killed and another man took his place. Fresh armour and no sign of where the shot had struck.

Then below, into a compartment between the side of the ship and the armoured barbette which protects the delicate machinery for feeding shells and powder from the magazine deep below the water to the guns.

"H—— was killed here. Impact of the shell passing through the other plates burst inside, and, of course, the fragments struck harmlessly against the barbette."

The Lion had had a narrow escape from going down after being hit in the feed tank, but once in dry dock all her damage parts had been renewed, a plate elsewhere which had been left unpainted showing a spatter of dents from shell-fragments.

"We thought that we ought to have something to prove that we had been in battle," said the host. "I think I've shown all the hits There were not many."

None of these men serving the two guns from the depths to the turret saw anything of the battle except the gun-layer. It was easier for them than for him to be letter-perfect in the test, as he had to guard against the exhilaration of having an enemy's ship instead of a cloth target under his eye.

LITERARY RAMBLES

Everything in this world lends itself to a train of thought from which something of interest or of value may result. This was strongly impressed on my mind a few days ago as I was walking down our leading thoroughfare. Street cars were thundering, motor horns blowing, and hundreds of people bustling briskly up and down the sidewalks, engaged in the various demands of their business. Amid all this tumult there was little enough, one would think, to stir the imagination or the pen of a dilettante scribbler. A very slight incident sufficed to stir mine, however nothing more, in fact, than the spectacle of five women walking side by side, one of whom was wheeling a perambulator. Forced, with others, into a doorway, I watched the all conquering quintette sail majestically up the street. Entirely engrossed in their conversation they were serenely unconscious that they were in any way dislocating traffic or causing inconvenience to others. It was a day when the street was more than ordinarily thronged and when my momentary irritation had passed I remember wondering how anybody could under any possible conditions enjoy being in a crowd. And then brought to my recollection the fact that Charles Lamb, the gentle essayist, and Samuel Lamson, that curly son of genius, men of as opposite temperament as could be, had each loved crowds. Lamb could weep for joy at the sight of so much life as Johnson loved the traffic and humour of Fleet Street. Would they have been aroused to such an intensity of delight? I asked myself, had they lived at the present time, and been subjected to all the additional hindrances to pedestrianism, such as boys' express waggons, geecarts, perambulators and wheel skates which nowadays keep one's eyes and ears continually on the alert.

But my thoughts did not linger long on those two strange and interesting personalities. They were diverted almost at once by the sight of a name over a boot and shoe store. It was a name that I had often read before, but the sight of it at that particular moment struck a chord of memory that brought up a wealth of interesting detail.

"CASCARETS" FOR A COLD, BAD BREATH OR SICK HEADACHE

Best For Liver and Bowels, For Biliousness, Sour Stomach and Constipation

Get a 10 cent box now.

Furred Tongue, Bad Cold, Indigestion, Sallow Skin and Miserable Headaches come from a torpid liver and clogged bowels which cause your stomach to become filled with undigested food, which sours and ferments like garbage in a swill barrel. That's the first step to untold misery—indigestion, foul gases, bad breath, yellow skin, mental fears, everything that is horrible and nauseating. A Cascaret to-night will give your constipated bowels a thorough cleansing, and straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a ten cent box from your druggist will keep you feeling good for months. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then to keep their stomach, liver, and bowels regulated, and never know a miserable moment. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing too.

THERE IS A VAST ARMY

of men and women who really never know what it is to enjoy sound, vibrating health—who would be surprised to suddenly gain that exhilarating vitality that robust health brings.

Literally thousands without any particular sickness live in "general debility", as the doctors call it—have headaches, are tired and indifferent. To all such people we say with unmistakable earnestness—"Take Scott's Emulsion after meals for one month and allow its rare oil-food to enrich, and enliven your blood, quicken your circulation, stimulate nutrition, and aid nature to develop that real red-blooded life that means activity, enjoyment, success."

Scott's Emulsion is not a drug, but a pleasant food-tonic free from drugs. One bottle may help you.

account of a very humble missionary who bore that name—a man who one hundred and seventy years ago had journeyed to the East Indies and, after the most strenuous labour, had translated the Bible into no less than 26 Indian languages, paving the way for the Christianization of that country. He had been originally a shoemaker, and the further thought was thus forced upon me that the shoemaking industry provides many instances of men who have risen from humble beginnings to positions of power or affluence. The first that we know anything of is St. Crispin, that Roman of noble family, who, driven north by religious persecution, took refuge at Soissons, and entered into the business of shoemaking. His enemies followed him there, however, and endeavoured to end his existence, and that of his brother, by immersing them in a cauldron of boiling lead. The story goes that they emerged from this miraculously unharmed, but that their persecutors, not to be baulked of their prey, cut their heads off. Taking a leap of many centuries we come to Kit Marlowe perhaps, from a literary standpoint, the greatest shoemaker of all, whose plays, Dr. Faustus and Edward VII., stand, in the opinion of eminent critics, almost on a level with Shakespeare's best. Shakespeare, in fact, took him as his model, and it should be no slight source of pride to the trade to know that it was to a shoemaker the greatest poet England or any other country has produced was indebted for his inspiration.

Colonel Hewson, who perhaps is not altogether an object of admiration, one of the signers of the death warrant of Charles I was originally a shoemaker. So was Roger Sherman, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The list could easily be extended. Gifford the first editor of the Quarterly Review, passed some of his early years in shoemaking. When thus occupied he was in the habit of working out mathematical problems with the help of an awl on a piece of beaten leather. It was a shoemaker who founded the Ragged School Union of England. Not content with attending only to his trade, he gathered together all the waifs and strays he could find and gave them schooling in his little shop whilst he worked away at his shoes. His schoolroom was only 6 feet wide by 12 feet long, but John Pounds managed to accommodate forty pupils within its narrow confines. From such humble beginnings grew the Union which afterwards by the efforts of Lord Shaftesbury, the noted philanthropist, developed into the Shaftesbury Society.

Then there was Bloomfield, the poet, the author of the Farmers' Boy. Also George Fox, the Quaker, Whittier another Quaker, and Sir Cloudesley Shovel, the great English admiral, who after a lifetime of warfare was drowned with some two thousand souls, in a wreck off the Scilly Isles.

Thomas Cooper, the chartist poet started in life as a shoemaker, going in successive gradations from that to book-selling and newspaper editing he finally blossomed out as a poet with an epic in ten books entitled, 'The Purgatory of Suicides.' Among his other harsh experiences of life were two years spent in Stafford Gaol for having incited the great Cartist, outbreak of 1842. Cooper was a man of deep convictions and this, combined with his great erudition, won him many admirers, among whom were Charles Kingsley, Douglas Jerrold and Benjamin Disraeli.

Perhaps it is because it is a lonely occupation and thus gives opportunities for an amount of quiet contemplation, not possible in many other lines of labour, that shoemakers have so often shone in history, but whatever the reason, the votaries of the last may well be proud of the part that so many of their brethren have taken in the more important affairs of life.

EUROPE USED TO DEBTS.

The American national debt is so small the average citizen stands aghast at the discovery that the British debt will soon reach the sum of $1,000,000,000. It does not seem possible that the interest on this vast sum can ever be paid, to say nothing of liquidating the principal.

But European financiers, who are accustomed to dealing with big debts, are not shrinking from taking up the burden of providing ways and means for preserving the national credit.

The debt of the United States at the beginning of the Civil war was only $60,000,000 and the national wealth was $15,000,000,000. At the close of the war the debt had grown to more than $2,000,000,000. It has now been reduced until it is only $1,000,000,000 and the national wealth has increased till it reaches the enormous sum of $150,000,000,000. The Government owes only one dollar out of every $15 of the national wealth. France, however, at the beginning of the present war had a debt of $6,383,000,000 and a wealth of only $50,000,000,000. That is, the French government owed $634 out of every $50 owned by the people. The wealth of Great Britain and Ireland amounts to $80,000,000,000 and a debt of $11,000,000,000 means that the Government has pledged for national defense $11 out of every $80 owned by the people. The present war debt of the British is therefore only a little larger proportionately than the peace debt of France.

If those nervous people who think that Europe will not repay the loan of half a billion or a billion which it is seeking here will study these figures they may discover that a burden which would seem intolerable to us will rest on shoulders already calloused by heavy loads and accustomed to bear them. If there is any reason for declining to advance to England and France the money they need it does not lie in the probability of repudiation.—Philadelphia Evening Ledger.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your chiefest charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggy, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic, you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural colour, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

HEAVY LOSSES INFLICTED ON BULGARIANS

RUSSIANS' OFFENSIVE TO DEVELOP RAPIDLY

THE ALLIES ARE POUNDING HARD AT THE BULGARIANS IN SOUTHERN SERBIA

French Artillery is Causing Heavy Losses Among the Bulgars --Serbians Capture a Position After Hand-to-Hand Fighting---The Kaiser Against Kitchener in Greece --French Fleet at Malta With Steam Up Ready to Make a Demonstration.

FRENCH REPULSE ALL ATTACKS IN WEST

ATHENS, Nov. 15.—The British, French and Serbs are gaining foot by foot to-day against the Bulgarians in Southern Serbia. The Bulgars are in superior numbers, but a considerable part of their forces are in scattered bands which, engaged in independent raiding, have been cut off from the main body and are putting up separate battles of their own. Thus, besides the principal fighting line, from the Strumnitza region northwest along the Vardar river through Veles to Tetovo, hot engagements are raging at several points inside this front, to the southwest. Against Veles, the centre, the French troops are directing a terrific drive, and the town's fall is believed a question of hours. The artillery fire with which the French have cleared the way for their infantry and cavalry rushes, has inflicted appalling losses on the Bulgars. As the northwestern extremity of the line, the Town of Tetovo, after changing hands repeatedly, is in the Serbs' possession at the latest accounts. Much of the fighting in this section has been hand to hand, and of the most desperate, merciless character. With their capture of Tetovo, the Serbs took 520 Bulgars prisoners and great quantities of munitions and supplies.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 15.—Hit by shot from an anti-airship gun, and set on fire while flying over the Russian positions near Grodno, a German Zeppelin has been destroyed, according to news from Berlin to-day. The airship reached the ground behind the Kaiser's lines in time for the crew to be saved.

PARIS, Nov. 15. "Violent rifle and grenade fighting raged all night in the vicinity of the Labrynth in Artois," reported to-day's official communique. "The Germans suffered very heavy losses. A German grenade attack was repulsed in the neighbourhood of Butte Tahure in Champagne. We exploded a mine at Cirey, in the Woevre region, wrecking the German defences." The repulse with heavy losses of the Bulgarian attack on the French forces along the entire Tzerna River line, in Southern Serbia, was announced by the War Office to-day.

PARIS, Nov. 15. Attacked in tremendous force, sometimes as often as twenty times in one day, with every imaginable engine of death, the French nevertheless held their lines unbroken against the Germans in the Artois and Champagne regions throughout the past week. In uniformly repulsing the Teutonic attacks, the French forces inflicted losses averaging two thousand to each unit of the Kaiser's troops engaged. The assaults showed a development on the German part of an astonishing degree of effectiveness and the highest possible degree of material organization, said the statement, including the handling of their artillery and the use of asphyxiating gas and liquid fire.

LONDON, Nov. 15. A Petrograd despatch says: "Japan rendered opportune aid in the Baltic duel between General Ruzsky and Field Marshall Von Hindenburg in the matter of shells, and, now that the artillery conditions have been equalized, the Russians are confident of the result. After long and arduous fighting in the marshes, the Russians have emerged from the lake defiles, and military authorities look for a speedy development in General Ruzsky's aggressive tactics. The Germans, driven back to within ten miles of Mitau, are evacuating their munition depots."

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—A cable to the Herald from London says: It is Kitchener against the Kaiser and his bribe-givers at Athens, where King Constantine and his puppet Cabinet are trying to serve Mammon, but all despatches state that the mere presence of Lord Kitchener in the Near East theatre of war foreshadows a victory for the Quadruple Entente that Germany thoroughly understands.

That an immense influence will be exerted by the trip of Lord Kitchener to the Balkans, even if he does not meet King Constantine, is proved by the sudden despatch of a high German military mission, and the expected arrival of Count Berchtold, Austria's Foreign Minister, to urge the King to cast his lot with the Central Powers. The King, however, fears the Franco-British fleet which is reported to be ready with steam up near Malta to make a demonstration. But the greatest influence of all is the Serbo-Allies' victory and the continuous reinforcements of Anglo-French troops in Serbia."

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Winston Churchill, former member of the British Cabinet, this afternoon disclaimed responsibility for the sending of the British force to Antwerp, one of the so-called "follies" of British administration in the early days of the war.

Churchill said that the project originated with Lord Kitchener and the French authorities. He had nothing to do with it.

From the Antwerp expedition Churchill turned quickly to the much condemned Dardanelles campaign, blame for which was put on his shoulders by many critics.

"In the beginning the Dardanelles enterprise was profoundly, maturely and elaborately considered," Churchill said, "thus meeting the objections of some critics that the Allies went off half cooked."

"It is true that Sir John Fisher, in January, while First Sea Lord, depreciated reducing the margin of naval strength in home waters by sending a fleet to the Dardanelles," said Churchill. "But at no time did Sir John criticise the method of attack at the Dardanelles."

Churchill defended certain phases of the Antwerp expedition, though admitting it had failed to accomplish its first aim in checking the Germans.

"But it is a mistake," he said, "to regard the failure of the British troops to relieve the Belgians as nothing but military misfortune. History will determine that the enterprise had the effect of causing one of the greatest battles of the war to be fought on the Yser, instead of further South."

CORPORAL PETER THOMAS MARTIN, one of the Peterborough reservists, who was called out in August, 1914, and who returned from the front this morning after many months on the firing line with the 2nd Rifle Brigade, his old corps.

TWO PETERBORO' RESERVISTS ARE HOME FROM FRONT

Corp. John Playford of the British Army Service Corps and Corp. P. T. Martin of the 2nd Rifle Brigade, Returned This Morning.

MANY MONTHS ON SERVICE

Among the Peterborough men to return on the Metagama were Corp. J. A Playford and Corp Thomas Martin. Both men arrived in Peterborough this morning.

The former, who resides on Burnham Street, East City, was with the Army Service Corps, 19th Lahore cavalry division, Indian troops. He arrived in England in August, 1914, and a few days later was sent to France. He was through a number of engagements, including LaBassee and Ypres. Corp. Playford frequently encountered the Canadian troops, while driving back and forth from the lines with supplies. He never met the Peterborough detachment. He eventually received a bullet wound in the right leg and on November 3rd of this year was discharged as medically unfit for further service. While on his way home on the Metagama, Corp. Playford met a number of Peterborough boys, including Gunner Mordie McGill and Corp Victor Cunniskey of the Royal Canadian Dragoons.

Corp. Playford is a member of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, and at the outbreak of war, was Col. Sergeant. He was connected with the 57th for upwards of seven years. He was among the first of the Peterborough reservists to be recalled when the war clond broke. Corp Playford was employed by Messrs. Alexander and Miller, electricians, before the war broke out.

Corp Playford's experiences at the front were varied and many. He has nothing but praise for the fighting ability of the Indian troops with whom he was associated. He is of the opinion that they will be removed from the western front before very long, as the winters are too severe for the men. He believes they will be sent to the Dardanelles.

Belleville. Mr Wm. Fee, Road Master, Mr. Fred Elliott was brakesman. On

CORP. THOMAS MARTIN

Corp. Thomas Martin is another reservist who has been invalided home to Peterborough. He resides at 215 Bethune Street. He is a member of the 2nd Rifle Brigade and has served five years in India, three in Malta and four years at home. He was called to the colours on August 14th, 1914, and was sent to rejoin his regiment in France. He has been wounded several times and on one occasion was buried in a trench covered with earth and his rifle broken across his

WILL UNDERTAKE TO RAISE COMPANY FOR 93rd IN THE NORTH

Lakefield Officers of the Battalion Receive Permission From Lt.-Col. Johnston to Start a Campaign in Northern Townships—Twenty More Peterborough Men Wanted for 33rd Battery—Liquor Shops Out of Bounds for Men in Uniform—To-day's Military News.

The raising of a complete company for the 93rd Battalion in the northern part of Peterborough County was the proposition laid before Lt.-Col Johnston this morning by Capt. J. M Bygott. Lieut. Carter and Lieut Marling, the Lakefield officers in the 93rd. These officers state there are many men in the northern townships who would make splendid soldiers and they are confident that they can go a long way towards recruiting a company in that section. It is probable that the Lakefield boys in A Company of the 93rd will be transferred to the new Company if Capt. Bygott and his comrades are successful in their recruiting campaign. Capt. Bygott and Lieut. Carter left to-day for Lakefield to start their campaign for the new company which will, it is expected, be C Company of the 93rd. Like the other companies the men will train in Peterborough. Lieut. Marling will remain here on duty with No. 3 Platoon, A Company.

Lieut Thompson of the 93rd Battalion has been detailed by Lt.-Col. Johnston for recruiting duty in Hastings, Norwood and Warkworth. He left to-day on a search for good material for the 93rd.

Lieut Anderson of Lindsay reported to Lt. Col. Johnston at the Armouries this morning. Lt. Anderson has been posted to the Lindsay Company which is still a part of the 93rd, the expected transfer to the 109th not yet having taken place.

To-day was pay day for the men of the 93rd Battalion. For the first time the men were paid by cheque, according to the new instructions.

Lieut Hills, the supply officer in charge of the Army Service Corps had his staff augmented on Saturday by the arrival of a Corporal and three men from No. 5 Company, C. A. S. C., Ottawa. The squad have been on duty at Valcartier Camp during the summer training season.

The 34th Field Battery, Peterborough, which has supplied five officers and 11 men to the 33rd Battery, C. F. A., C.E.F., is now asked for twenty more men. Lieut. E. D. Huycke, one of the Peterborough officers in the 33rd, will be in Peterborough this week to take recruits for the Battery. He wants to get twenty more of the same calibre as the other Peterborough boys who have joined the 33rd. On account of the drafts taken out more men are needed to fill up the Peterborough section. Here is a list of the Peterborough officers and men in the 33rd Battery on duty here or in England.

ONE MIRACULOUS CASE

(Special to The Examiner by Staff Reporter.)

QUEBEC, QUE., Nov. 15.—The C. P. R. liner Metagama arrived here early yesterday morning with 620 soldiers on board, 450 returning wounded or disabled from the front, and the remainder suffering from the result of sickness sustained while in camp in England. It is planned here to send them all home together. It is not certain when they will be released by the discharge depot, but it is expected that they will arrive home about Friday or Saturday.

The party, which was in charge of Major Douglas Young of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, of Toronto, who is also on sick leave, the result of a wound, is the largest number of convalescent soldiers to arrive in Canada at one time during the present war.

A BIG DRAFT

The men have been returning in drafts of from 100 to 200, the British authority having agreed to limit the drafts to that number in order to prevent a jam at Quebec, where the medical examining board, working at top pressure, is only able to handle about forty men a day. On this occasion, however, the Quebec examining board has been augmented by the Toronto Medical Board, under Lieut. Col. J. T. Marlowe, and in this way it is hoped to handle at least 100 men a day. The arrival of such a large body of men at one time put a severe test on the machinery of the discharge depot, but the disembarkation and accommodation of the men was handled in remarkably good fashion.

Brigadier General John Hughes, brother of Sir Sam Hughes, came down from Ottawa to handle disembarkation, while Colonel Marlowe was placed in charge of the work of the Medical Examining Board.

When the Metagama arrived, dawn was just breaking but already everybody on board was up and astir. The liner's flags were flying half-mast, the body of Sir Charles Tupper being on board, but there was no sign of depression among the khaki clad men, who crowded the side of the vessel. They were home again, many of them after undergoing experiences that sadly tested their hopes of ever seeing Canada again. Among the first to leave the boat was a burly Indian, who was led down the gangway by a comrade. He was totally blinded, the result of shell concussion. He had not been wounded, but the shell had burst over the parapet right over his head. As his feet touched the wharf he scraped them on the wooden floor, exclaiming, "Thank God I'm back in Canada." The disembarkation was carried out very quickly and the men soon were comfortably quartered in the immigration shed, which had been fitted out with 500 cots. The immigration hospital was also used to accommodate a little over one hundred men. The majority of the men were suffering from shock, the effect of gas and nervous debility, while a large number were convalescing from wounds.

A feature was a great number who could not speak above a hoarse whisper, one of the after effects of gas. The most interesting case on board was Private Zivian of Gananoque, a member of the 12th Battery, C.F.A. He was called the "miracle man." At the battle of Ypres a bullet actually passed through part of his heart. This was borne out by medical inspection in England, and a Major explained that the bullet had passed through the outer wall of his heart while it was expanding.

BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

The war clouds in Europe do not lift to any noticeable extent, and Canada cannot yet see any limit to her preoccupation in the grim work of helping wage the war. There is, however, a rift in Canada's commercial and business cloud bank—good times as we had them before the war, if not a great deal better. This year, Canada, as a help to a restoration of prosperity, has a grain yield of nearly a thousand million bushels. This turned into money will, in spite of the war drafts made on Canada's purse, be a great lubricant of the machinery of business. We have also the machinery for giving effect to the work of transmuting grain into gold. We now have three transcontinental railways in operation available for bringing the wheat of the west to the water front. It is a great thing, though it has led to spending a big lot of money, to have nearly ten thousand miles of railway spanning our half of the continent. This is a great feat for a country with only eight million people — a mile of transcontinental railway to every 800 people. We shall feel the benefit of this generous transportation provision in the present, and it will be an incalculable factor in contributing to the commercial and industrial activity that will come when the tide has fully turned, and the war is over. Canada has no reason to feel discouraged with the promise of present conditions, and much reason to be encouraged by the outlook upon the future. We are a fairly great people. We have spent millions on preparing the highways of prosperity, and we are spending millions to bring about conditions that will help us harvest the fruits of our preparations. It is some credit to the soundness of our financial position, to the energy of our people, that we can at the same time prosecute with splendid energy and efficiency our share in a great war, and keep the machinery of national life in all its varied forms in so successful motion that we can rejoice in signs of returning prosperity. The outlook is upon bright prospects.

ALL 'ROUND HONESTY.

In the course of the sermon at St. John's yesterday morning, V. Rev. Dean Starr, of Kingston, in dealing with the phase of Christian example, spoke in no uncertain terms of the duty of honesty in politics, in business and private life. Especially in these times of political corruption and dishonest dealing Christians should in their lives be examples of right living. He declared that "the man who would sell a pair of boots for a soldier that would impair his efficiency should be hanged." This is pretty strong language; and though it may not be taken literally, but as a rhetorical, expression of deep feeling, one can sympathize with the justness of its spirit. The words used to express condemnation were very direct, but when one comes to think of such things with a true realization of their meaning and effect, it will be agreed that no condemnation too strong can be used in dealing with the actions of men who by furnishingg dishonest supplies; by giving inadequate value; by providing inferior articles upon which the health and safety of the lives of soldiers depend, is a traitor, and we all know the punishment of treason. Defective clothing equipment may easily impa.. the health, and thus destroy the efficiency of the soldier; and defective munition that fails the soldier in the hour of battle crisis may cause his death and contribute to the defeat of our arms. The general offence condemned by Dean Starr, constitutes treason to the Empire, treason to Canada, and a base and cruel betrayal of the brave soldiers whose health and lives are sacrificed to the greed of gain of the rascally contractor or purveyor of war supplies. When everybody is sacrificing so much, even life and limb, it becomes a monstrous thing that conscienceless men should make unrighteous profits out of such sacrifices, and no consideration, political or personal, should justify glossing over the crime, with apologetic words or vain excuses. This is a war waged pre-eminently in the interests of honest dealing among nations, and its lesson will be lost: its fruits be but apples of Sodom if the life of individuals is not touched and a higher conscience awakened, in the matter of honest dealing in all things — in our political life, and in our commercial and social relations.

BRINGING IT HOME.

The arrival at Quebec of 800 wounded Canadians from the war front, brings home to us the fact of the grim realities of the war in which we are so actively engaged. The coming home of so large a body of disabled Canadian soldiers, almost as large as the battalion we are now creating here, has a double significance. It shows that the Canadians we have sent to the front have been in the thick of the fighting. They have been fighting for us, and their return throws upon us the obligation of doing our best to make them welcome ,and, by assiduous care and generous treatment, to some extent, to compensate them for the sacrifices they have made. Then their disability weakens the firing line from which they were withdrawn, and it becomes to us a more insistent duty to fill their places by increased activity in recruiting. Even if we do not directly fill their places by this means, but furnish complete fighting unites, we are contributing to shortening the war and ending the wounds and casualties that are coming every day to our brave Canadian lads. We must increase if possible, too, our Red Cross activity in order to provide for the increasing needs that enlarged Canadian forces at the front will create. We have done well in this regard ,and no doubt, there will be continuance in well doing. Our soldiers will fight all the better if they know that if the chances of war bring wounds, their people at home are working for them. The knowledge of this will also encourage recruiting, which will also be helped if we show a direct and effective interest in caring for the returning soldier. When our young men realize that in fighting for us, as they are doing, they will be fighting for grateful homestayers, who if they cannot enter the ranks, will do their bit by caring for the comfort of those who go forwards, and providing generously and warm-heartedly for the consequences of active participation in the fighting at the front, there will be an increased willingness to join the colours.

VOTES FOR HEROINES?

When a British transport was torpedoed in the Aegean Sea there were thirty-six nursing sisters on board, and when the boats came to the rescue, as the French commander states, the nurses cried out, "Fighting men first."

We have been brought up on the greatest traditions that any nation has ever had the good fortune to inherit, and it might have been thought that nothing more could be added to the noble record except in imitative emulation. The nurses thought out something new, and they put their thought into deed.

Human beings who can think originally and who can put their thoughts into action are too scarce to waste. These women are doing the finest and most necessary duty they are capable of in their nursing work. After the war is their thought and their deed, their heroism and the spirit which inspires it, their experience and their determination to be ranked no higher than ever? Are women still to be classed politically with infants, criminals and idiots?

It has been said that there will be no question about yielding the franchise to women after the war. It should be settled at once. Otherwise we do not deserve to win. Any alien who comes among us can have a vote, but the women who cried "Fighting men first" must sit behind with the criminals. Surely we shall change all this.—Toronto World.

JOHN'S COMPLIMENT

"John" said Mrs. Harkins, "I heard a nice compliment for you today."

Mr. Harkins put his paper down, twisted up the ends of his moustache, looked pleased, and said:

Well, that's nothing so remarkable I receive compliments nearly every day.

Mrs. Harkins went on sipping her tea and her husband waited for her to resume. Finally, he said:

Well, why don't you tell me what it was? Who was it that complimented me?

Oh, you couldn't guess in a week," Mrs. Deering," he continued.

No?

Not Bessie Fairington?" he rather eagerly suggested.

No."

Oh, well, of course if there's any secret about it, I don't care to hear what it was or who said it."

There isn't any secret about it," Mrs. Harkins sweetly replied. Mr. Hannaford told me every time he and I met he became more thoroughly convinced that you were a man of most excellent taste."

John Harkins then shoved his hands down in his pockets, and walked outside to think it over.

INVADING GERMANY RANKS AS THE PLODDING BURGLAR

The question whether the Teutons or their opponents can hold out the longest is considered by the New York Nation in a new way, upon moral or spiritual, rather than upon physical grounds. At first it seems to be an advantage to Germany to be fighting outside of its own borders, free from those horrors of invasion which it inflicts upon others. But morally the advantage rests with the man who is defending his own country.

Take the case of France, where there is something like a deadlock, and millions of men are living in trenches, facing each other, and occasionally fighting for a few inches of ground. It is a tedious life for all. But the Frenchman is upheld by the feeling that he is defending his own country. The German has no such support. He is an invader, he is morally wrong, and yet he has none of the glory which accompanies successful invasion. He is like a ruffian who has invaded your house, who has locked himself in your cellar. He cannot get out and you cannot get him out. The situation is unpleasant for you, but you have at least the satisfaction of feling that you are defending your home. While he is an unsuccessful or only half successful criminal. The Nation does not use as strong language as this, but it has started the train of thought which we have followed up.

When the German papers complain bitterly of the privations of the German people, there is an odd mixture of the tragic and ludicrous in the complaint. Of course one feels sorry for the burglar's family. But when complaint is made that the burglar's family is being starved because the wicked world will not allow the burglar to pursue his occupation in peace, an element of absurdity is mixed with the tragedy. Obviously the remedy is for the burglar to stop burgling, and submit to such punishment for his misdeeds as the law may require. These, in substance, are the only rightful conditions of peace.

As against the spirit of the citizen defending his home, the invader may be sustained by the sweep of victory. This is what the Kaiser and his friends expected. There was to be a quick war with France, German armies marching to Paris while all the world wondered, Paris occupied, the Crown Prince glorified, France at the feet of the conqueror, ready to make any terms of surrender and even to assist in the conquest of others. Then away to Petrograd and Moscow with all kinds of fine military doings and coronation of German princes. The German heart would have been warmed by French wines and all the wheat of the Russian plains. "War is a beautiful jade."

Well, some progress was made. We do not deny that the Germans have injured their neighbors and filled decent folk with anxiety. But the career of crime has not been jovial. It has been marred by the tedium which is commonly supposed to accompany honest industry. A plodding plowman we can understand, but a plodding burglar is a figure which confronts us with a new psychological problem. "Business," says the burglar "is so confoundedly slow and dull that I can hardly provide for the wants of my family at home. First of all, these Belgians got in our way. Then the British Empire butted in. Between them and the French, we could not get into Paris, and we are now living a dull, monotonous life in unsuccessful or only half successful trenches. Sometimes I almost wonder what we are here for. Are we ever to get any reward for our forty years' training in burglary?"

Such is the plaint of the plodding burglar. We confess to a desire to laugh at his grievance. For the burglar's family we are sorry. But we see no remedy except to persuade father to drop burglary and go back to honest work—for which, we are free to admit, the German is well fitted. We know many good citizens of Toronto who, in their boyhood, were addicted to dime novels. It did them no harm. They got over it. But the Kaiser has never got over it; and unfortunately he has carried a lot of decent, plodding people with him. They have been made a curse to mankind where they might have blessed mankind. Their families are in want, while they might have lived in plenty. They are singing hymns of hate, and others are singing hymns of hate about them. All because a nation of plodders have been converted into a nation of burglars by a dime novelist on a throne.—Toronto Star.

Full Moon And the Frost Not Connected

Records of 36 Years Consulted Regarding Belief—Early Frosts Likely to Occur Every Second Year

SOME OBSERVATIONS

Mr. R. C. Webber, assistant director of the Meteorological Service, after investigating the records for 36 years, has found nothing to warrant the widespread belief in the West that frost is likely to occur at the period of full moon.

"As August comes round year after year we see the statement widely published that if the period of full moon is passed without frost, the harvest will be safe," says Mr. Webber. "In general superstitions about what the moon can do with the weather appear to be as much believed in as ever, although it has been frequently affirmed by meteorologists that they can find no connection between the moon's phases and existing weather conditions."

FROM 1880 TO 1915.

As to the question of frost usually occurring in the Western Provinces at the time of full moon, it is found by a reference to the statistics that from 1880 to 1915, inclusive, frosts were experienced at the time of full moon in 1885 and in 1915 in many localities, and in 1893 and 1909, locally, in Manitoba only. But in 1896 and in 1909, when the moon was full twice in the month, the 1st and the 31st, no frost was reported during the periods.

"The research shows that in the last thirty-six years during the period of full moon, frost was more or less general in two years in the Western Provinces, while in four years it occurred in Manitoba, but in two of these years it was extremely light, the freezing point being just attained.

IRRESPECTIVE OF MOONS.

"During the period herein considered, frost occurred in one part of another of the Western Provinces, at least in sixteen years, some time during the month, irrespective of the full moon.

"Consequently it would appear that frost will likely happen every second year in August in the Western Provinces in some districts but the idea that frost is going to, or is likely to occur at the period of full moon, is not born out by recorded facts, and the anxiety felt at the period of full moon is unfounded."

CLIMB OVER GATE.

An Easterner tells this one. "I was riding on the platform of a Boston street car, standing next to the gate that prevented the passengers alighting from the cars upon the other track. A Boston lady came to the door of the car, and as it stopped, started to the gate which was hidden from her by the men standing before it.

"Other side, lady," said the conductor.

"I wish to get off this side," came the answer, in tones that congealed that official.

"Stand to one side, gentlemen," replied the conductor, rather quietly. "The lady wishes to climb over gate."

HEADS OF G. T. R. VISIT THE CITY ON WEEK-END

London and Canadian Officials on Inspection Tour Spent Saturday Night Here

Mr. Alfred W. Smithers, Chairman of the G.T.R. Board, London, England, visited Peterborough on Saturday night and Sunday morning in connection with an inspection tour of the Company's lines from coast to coast. He was accompanied by Mr. H. Deer, his assistant, also of London, and by the Canadian officials, Mr. E. J. Chamberlin, President of the G.T.R., Mr. Howard G. Kelly, Vice President, and their secretaries, Messrs. W. H. Hobbs and A. L. Olsen. The party also included Miss Eva Smithers, daughter of the G. T. R's. leader, Mrs. E. J. Chamberlin, Mrs. Howard G. Kelly, and Mrs. Edith Powell of Ottawa.

The train included three official cars, each with its own establishment. They are the cars set aside for the heads of the Company. Mr. Smithers occupied the Bonaventure, Mr. Chamberlin, the Ottawa, and Mr. Kelly the Ontario. The cars are the best the Company provides, and the last word in commodious equipment and finish. Each had its own staff of cooks, porters, etc. Mr. W. A. McNab met the officials on their arrival here. Train Master J. D. McMillan of Lindsay accompanied them to Belleville. Mr. Wm. Fee, Road Foreman of engines, was with the engine crew. The Conductor was W. Hodgins of the Lindsay-Whitby line, and Mr. Fred Elliott was brakesman. On Sunday morning the party visited the business and residential sections of the city, and expressed their commendation of Peterborough's appearance. It is five years since Mr. Smithers last visited Peterborough.

A FIERY BREATH.

A youth from the country, who was new to the delights of town lodgings, recently entered a dry-salter's shop, and, producing a bottle labelled, "Best unsweetened gin," asked for a pint of paraffin. "Better take the label off in case of accidents, hadn't I?" asked the shopman. "Don't matter a bit," was the reply, "there's only me and the cat ever go to the cupboard, and I don't mind if I do kill the cat." "Killed the cat yet?" asked the shopman, as the youth was passing next day. "No, I ain't," said the youth, with a puzzled look, but there's a bit of a mystery somewhere. My landlady has been queer since last night; she won't open her mouth within yards of a box of matches, and she smells something awful of paraffin."

Miss Lyda B. Conley, who has just been admitted to practice before the United States supreme court, is the first Indian woman ever admitted to the bar of the highest court in the United States.

The rude which was formerly in force in Germany requiring woman teachers, telegraphers and post office and railway officials to resign when they marry has been changed on account of the war.

Miss Cora Dow, who died recently in Cincinnati, left an estate of over $2,000,000, which she amassed in the retail drug business during the last 26 years. She took over her father's business at the age of 21 years.

INDIA AND THE FREE NATIONS OF THE EMPIRE

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, Nov. 15.—That representatives of India should be asked to meet with the Imperial Conference this year in a war session, was the hope expressed by Mr. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P.P., in a speech he gave on Saturday evening at the banquet of the Provincial Older Boys' Conference. Mr. Rowell's address was on service, the privilege and responsibility of service to country, church and humanity. He illustrated and enforced his points by lessons drawn from the present war.

Mr. Rowell has several times urged that the Imperial Conference should be called this year and he now suggested that representatives of India should also be invited. "I am sure," he said, "that we must all feel that India by her devotion and sacrifice in this war has earned her right to appeal for a place in the Imperial Conference representing the free nations of the Empire, and while one must not prejudice the action which the conference will take, one instinctively feels that all the free nations of the Empire will be prepared to lend a sympathetic ear to India's appeal.

"The Imperial Conference has a right to speak for the whole Empire and from it we could have a united statement and an appeal to which all the nations of the Empire would cheerfully respond. Do we realize how such an act would stir the imagination and quicken the devotion of the more than three hundred millions of people in India, representing about 75 per cent. of the total population of the Empire? What a response it would ensure against any German or Turkish advances; what a symbol it would be of the Empire's unity; what a demonstration of our solidarity; what a convincing proof of the determination of the free peoples who have enjoyed liberty and self-government to preserve these rights and to help the smaller nations of the world to preserve theirs."

"Our leaders," declared Mr. Rowell, "tell us that our Empire is in peril and is fighting for its existence. Therefore, we as its citizens have the right not only to expect, but to request that this supreme council of the Empire, the Imperial Conference, should be called o consider the situation."

Mr. Rowell made the following reference to the Nationalists: "As General Botha and his government did not permit a nationalist movement in South Africa, even though it led to an incipient rebellion, to deter them from doing their duty in the present crisis, so the people of Canada will not permit any small Nationalist movement here, whether represented outside of government or inside the government, as Mr. Lavergne suggests, to deter them from doing their duty as Canadian citizens in this supreme hour, and the people of Canada, of both British and French origin, will unite as Britons and Boers in South Africa have united, to fight for the common cause of liberty and justice. They look for and expect thoughtful, virile and aggressive leadership on the part of the government."

"Nothin' Far-Fetched."

Robert W. Chambers, the novelist, said at a club in New York:

"We novelists have got to remember that the public, while clamming stoutly to like truth and realism, really likes—really likes—well, here's a story:

"Two women were in a crowd waiting to get in to see melodrama.

"'This'll be a good show,' said the first woman. 'Life, you know. Real life. Nothin' overdone.'

"'Yes, I like life, too,' said the other woman. 'I don't want to be put to sleep, though. Still, I can't stand nothin' far-fetched.'

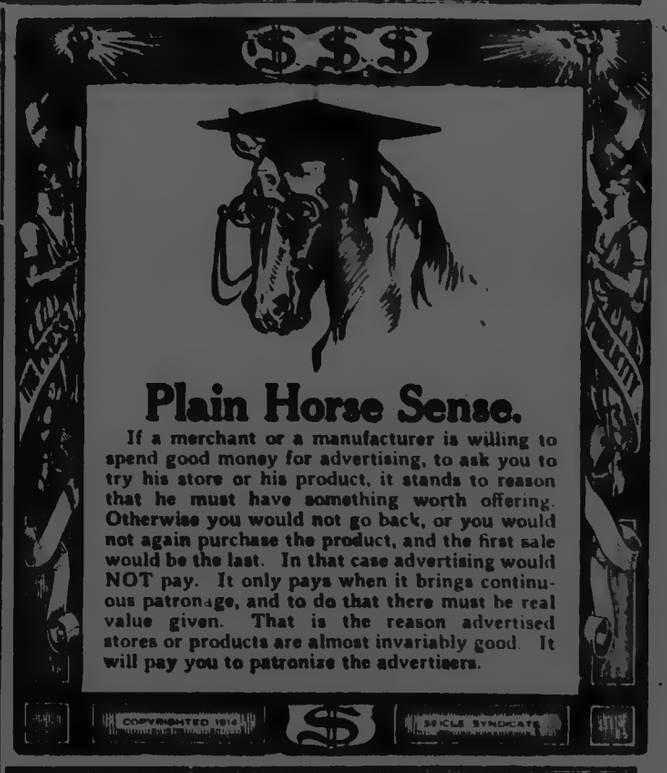
"Same here," said the first woman.

"And then they went in and sat through five acts wherein the hero killed 86 Kaffirs with his naked hand, found a diamond as big as a duck's egg, smashed with his revolver from a mile away the bottle of poison that the beautiful heroine was about to swallow rather than yield to the blandishments of the villain, and finally killed the latter in an aeroplane duel, slightly off the stage, inheriting later an unexpected dukedom, and so forth and so on.

"When the curtain fell to the sound of wedding bells the two women looked at each other with glistening eyes.

"'Grand, wasn't it?' said the first. 'Life, real life, eh?'

"'You bet,' said the second. 'That's life, that is. Nothin' far-fetched or overdone.'"—Washington Star.



Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

Harry Lauder Arrives in New York Saddened By Injuries to His Son Captain John Lauder

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Never did ancient Scottish chieftain receive a welcome so flattering as did Harry Lauder yesterday at the American line pier when the St. Louis arrived. To the pibroch's rousing strains, the Scottish comedian, with Mrs. Lauder on his arm, came down the gang plank and bekilted and beplaided Highlanders received him with solemnity. Then many lively airs reminiscent of the hardy land of mountain and heed were played by the pipers as Mr. and Mrs. Lauder took their seat in a big automobile—a tartan colored touring car.

Mr. Lauder stood in the tonneau and waved his Balmoral hat to the photographers and other well wishers who applauded him. He was impressed and so was Mrs. Lauder. Then the comedian's countenance seemed to lose its sunny smile for a few moments. He turned and said something to Mrs. Lauder, who was "if Johnnie's all right then everything's all right." Timed and mummery throughout the ages have hidden hearts that ached with anxiety. Johnnie" is Captain John Lauder of the Argyle and Sutherland Highlanders, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Lauder. He is in a hospital in England, recovering from wounds received on the firing line and an attack of pneumonia.

Greet Him With a "Hoot."

The ship news reporters clambered on board the St. Louis when she was shaping her course up the Narrows. Mr. Lauder sauntered on to the deck puffing at one of his collection of pipes—a smoking pipes. "Hoot!" said one of the reporters by way of greeting.

"Hoot awa' yersel'!" replied the comedian through a cloud of smoke.

"Glad to see you back," said the reporters, shaking hands with him cordially.

"I'm verra glad, indeed, to be back verra," said Mr. Lauder. "While I'm here, ye see, I can smile. I've come here to try to make the Americans people laugh. I've been a wee bit successful before in that respect and I'm thinkin' they'll laugh a bit more." The old smile disappeared then.

"Ye know, boys, I havena' had the heart tae smile mysel' for many a day. That is, smile because I felt like it. There's naething but sorrow in my homeland. It's beyond description. I'm too old to fight, but my son is doing his share for Great Britain and I've tried to do my little bit on the home shores away frae the flying bullets." He told of his recruiting campaign with his pipe band through the British provinces.

Mr. Lauder then related facts concerning Mrs. Lauder's activities in behalf of the soldiers who have been invalided from the front. "My son was severely wounded, and is now convalescing from an attack of pneumonia," he said. "The pneumonia almost completed the work of the German bullet that got him."

Has Some New Songs.

When asked if he intended to sing his old songs, he said, "I havena' forgotten "She's Ma Daisy" and "I Love a Lassie," and I micht sing them all over again. But I've a few new ones, perhaps five or six a'thegether. One is a military song, and something in the nature of a sister ballad tae 'She's Ma Daisy.' The new one is 'She's My Rosie.' It's all about soldiers, and we're all thinking o' soldiers these days.

"There's another one called 'Nanny.' It's about a lovelorn loon. Nanny's a fine fine lassie, and I think it's swing will catch you Americans. Then I have one that has a touch like 'Annie Laurie,' only instead of Annie it's Jean this time. Jean comes frae bonnie Scotland, where the purple heather grows. Have I any more? Oh, yes, but it'll cost ye the price of admission tae hear aboot them."

"What do you think of the outcome of the war?" one asked.

Aw, man, ye're jokin' wi' me, now. What does ony richt-minded body think about it?"

"Can you sing a German song?" some one ventured.

"My Scotch tongue never could and never would get around the German language, but let me tell ye something. When the bagpipes are skirling on the Unter den Linden in Berlin I'll sing ye all the German songs ye want."

One Million Men Are Killed In One Month

Rivers Of Europe Empty Tides of Blood Into the Seas... Thirty Days of Slaughter

The month just passed has seen the bloodiest and most costly in the history of the world. The long promised and terrible French and British offensive is now ended. At the same time the fighting on all the other fronts reached a climax. The result has been that in thirty days the loss in killed and wounded has exceeded the terrifying figure of 1,000,000. There have been thirty days of slaughter on every front, so that many of the rivers of Europe are carrying crimson tides to the sea, writes a Berlin correspondent to the Chicago Daily News.

Untold sacrifices netted the British and French nothing but slight gains and local gains absolutely without significance while the failure of the long concerted operations, with the enormous expenditure of stores and ammunition, by the allies leaves the Germans free to make greater offensive efforts on the other fronts, especially in Serbia, where they are now hacking their way toward Constantinople.

Bodies Strew 2,000 Mile Front.

It is possible that the British will be able to make another offensive movement, but historians for all time will add many pages to the red record of the October, in which the nations dyed Europe with blood as lavishly as autumn paints the autumn leaves. To-day along corpse-strewn battle line of now more than 2,000 miles long not one foot has yet been taken from the hearts and broken hearts here in Germany and in the homes of her allies and enemies.

The terrible deluge of blood started on the western front. Here two-thirds of the French army of millions of men, one-half of all the British troops and part of the Belgian army were hurled into the assault. It began Sept. 21 with four days' artillery preparation such thunders as the world never heard before. In Flanders and in the Champagne the British and French surged over the cannon-torn trenches in the face of a murderous fire. Even the British cavalry, more foolhardy than brave, rode up to the muzzles of the German machine guns, which mowed down regiments.

Then the Second Attempt.

The enemies of Germany made a second attempt. Again days of artillery bombardment were followed by another furious attack, but weaker than the first and resulting in only slight gains. German counterattacks tore away as much land as was won at such a fearful price by the foe in the previous assault.

Then came the third offensive, the greatest of all. It was the last desperate and futile effort of the allies to shatter the German lines and break Germanys hold on Belgium and the richest province of France. The allies put then all into the attempt. The murderous artillery bombardment razed three days before the shells had torn the first line German trenches so that an attack could be made.

There was a hail of shells and shrapnel so great and so terrible that nothing could live in these first lines. But the German reserves were ready. When the assault finally came the German artillery tore great gaps in the ranks of the storming foe, which again chose the same ground.

Here and there the French and British got a foothold in the German trenches, but that was all. For days they fought, trying to extend their stores. But now the British as well as the French assaults are spasmodic or are ore local assaults without strategic value and unimportant in the general fighting.

The French in the Champagne, near Tahure, have been able to hold less than eighteen miles of new frontage, with a depth of three miles. The Germans have already recaptured more than one-half the lost ground and are now stronger than at first. The dead, wounded and prisoners in this offensive of thirty days is estimated at about 400,000.

The Germans assert that their losses were less than one-fourth as large as those of their enemies. This German report is probably fairly accurate because of the reckless daring of their assailants, who swept against the Germans in massed lines. I have talked with German officers who stood near the machine guns and saw them mow down thousands in the futile assaults. When the complete story is told of this offensive on the west front another tale in history will be recorded with blood.

But this was only a fragment of the month's bloody work. It must also be remembered that on the west front Germany stood alone against three foes, while fighting against heavy odds on other fronts.

Serbia has 250,000 women who equal the men of that country and are ready to go to the battlefront to fight.

Besides being a crack shot with the rifle Mrs. Elizabeth Moulton of Philadelphia is her own taxidermist.

themselves but for the unit to which they belong.

As the example set by those placed in authority has a great bearing on the conduct and manners of a unit as a whole it is expected that officers will at all times and upon all occasions conduct themselves in a manner becoming an officer and gentleman.

Officers are strongly urged to abstain from all intoxicating liquors or malt beverages.

Every precaution should be taken by all ranks against the outbreak of fire. Special orders should be published by commanding officers and made known to all ranks for guidance in case of an outbreak of fire.

Smoking in bed is prohibited.

Five recruits were accepted for the 93rd Battalion at the armouries on Saturday. They were as follows:

Bert Dick, Monaghan.

John M. Watt, Midland, three years with the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons.

David G. Melton, 534 Park street, two years in the 57th Regiment.

Herbert Leedham, 81 George street, Hamilton (Band.)

Alfred Naish, 164 1-2 Simcoe street, 3½ years in the 57th.

Among the new recruits for the 93rd is John M. Watt, of Midland, son of Mr. John Watt, Peterborough, and brother of Capt. R. P. Watt, of A company, 93rd Battalion. David G. Melton, another recruit, is a brother of Pte. George Melton of No. 1 platoon, so that two more pairs of brothers have been added to the 93rd's list. There are now sixteen sets of brothers in the battalion.

Just when the 93rd Battalion will move into barracks in the armouries is not yet known. Most of the work is completed excepting the erecting of furnaces, and Major Burritt, the chief engineer, is expected at any time to take over the work from the contractors. In the meantime the supply officer, Lieut. Hills, and the battalion quartermaster, Capt. Rollins, are hard at work preparing for the house warming. Sergt. Cook Wride is busy in the kitchen to-day getting his battery of cooking utensils ready for the inching of the soldiers.

Sergt. Major Oxley of D Company, Cobourg, was home for the week end. Capt. R. P. Watt will accompany him back to Cobourg to pay the men of D company and to look after ther regimental business.

Colonel Hemming has issued Divisional orders compelling all towns, cities and villages in the 3rd divisional area under his command to place all liquor shops out of bounds at all hours to all men wearing uniform, whether members of departmental corps or members of the Expeditionary Force. All bars are to be out of bounds until 6 o'clock in the evening, until the hour designated by the Provincial law for closing, which is eight o'clock. This applies to all places except the city of Kingston, where the hours of privilege are from 6 to 7 in the evening, until the first of December, when Kingston will probably be included in the eight-o'clock by-law.

The Kingston Standard says: Yesterday afternoon Kingston sent forward to the aid of the Empire another draft of her soldiers, composed of 253 officers, non-coms, and men of the 59th Battalion, and 100 officers, N. C. O's and men of "C" Battery, R. C. H. A. Every draft that leaves the city seems to be the best, and made up of the best kind and type of manhood. Instead of evidences of deterioration in the standard of the men sent forward after such a heavy drain on this locality, the standard is better than it was among the first enlistments.

On Thursday night the men of the draft had the usual city jubilee. They were happy, and full of life, but kept within the bounds of law and order. They marched the streets in groups singing the most popular songs and giving cheers for the king and for their officers. As the men of the 59th draft marched through the city streets yesterday they were full of fun, and on breaking up on their last city parade, they made the vicinity of Artillery park ring with their cheers and cries.

In the afternoon, soon after dinner was over the draft of the 59th was marched to Place d'Armes, headed by the brass and bugle bands. There was a large crowd of citizens present to see the boys leave, with the usual demonstrations. The draft of "C" Battery was marched out of Tete du Pont Barracks, and drawn up on the Haymarket to wait for the train. Wives, mothers, sisters, sweethearts and friends gathered around the departing soldiers to say good-bye and tell them God-speed. The bands of the 59th Battalion and the R.C.H.A. discoursed appropriate music, and one could have thought it was the football excursion leaving the city rather than men leaving for the bloody battlefields of Europe.

Lieut. Wilfred Huycke of Peterborough was one of the officers with the draft from the 59th Battalion.

CHEQUES ISSUED.

Cheques were issued to-day bearing the signature "J. H. Burnham, Captain and Paymaster," 93rd Battalion, C. E. F., for ten thousand dollars, the half-monthly payment in advance made by the Government to the men of the new 93rd Battalion. The full monthly payment is more than twice that amount at present, and when the battalion is completed the pay list of the men alone will probably average $25,000 a month. Till Captain Burnham's return, Mr. Logie, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, is doing, without recompense, the making up of the amounts and handing out the cheques. There is a great deal of complicated and responsible work connected with the Paymaster's duties. Each soldier and officer in the regiment has an account under not less than a dozen headings with the Government, and as a consequence the system of bookkeeping is more involved than that of an establishment employing an equal number of men. The soldiers' equipment is almost wholly loaned by the Government, including the complete outfit and rifles. Then there is the mess account also. His Majesty takes it for granted that the ordinary soldier is careless of both his own rights and those of others sometimes, so he provides that the regimental accounts shall account for everything without exception, and that all money matters shall be from day to day in such shape as between His Majesty and the humblest soldier that there can be no mistake or complaint about fines or stoppages or the payment of monies due or concerning equipment, bedding, etc., loaned to the soldier.

It is reported that the Paymaster-in-Chief of the 3rd Division has selected Mr. Abraham, of Perry Street, an old Imperial soldier, who has three sons serving, as paymaster's sergeant to the Paymaster here. He may leave for Kingston to put in training at the head office immediately. So it was rumoured to-day. Sergt. Abraham is still a young man, but he has had a lot of experience, and is anxious to get into the game once more. He has a son in the 93rd here.

Company Quartermaster Sergt. Lyburn of the 59th Battalion was home on week-end leave.

Bandsman J. Blake is to be married this afternoon. The band will make him a presentation of a clock.

The following promotions were announced to-day:

Staff To be Paymaster Sergeant, Pte. J. M. Watt.

To be Sergeant cook: Pte. W. G. Wride.

A Company—To be sergeant, provisionally, J. Mackim.

D Company—To be sergeant, provisionally, Pte. J. Abbott.

knee. The wound that brought about his discharge was a shrapnel wound in the ankle.

"A year ago this month we were eight miles from Lille and to-day we are two miles from it," said Gus Martin. "On one occasion we were called upon to relieve the Princess Pats."

Gus Martin enumerated a long list of engagements through which the regiment passed and which earned for them a large measure of glory. He had many hair-breadth escapes to record.

Both men are not very enthusiastic about the treatment accorded them in England. One man had eight or nine pound coming to him yet. He had to borrow one pound to enable him to return. He has yet to hear of the balance. The authorities were very anxious that the men should remain in England for home defence purposes, but they declined. If they longed for more fighting they would look for it through the medium of the Canadian forces, they said.

Death of Booker T. Washington

Noted Negro Educationist Passes Away at Tuskegee, Alabama

MOBILE, Nov. 15.—News of the death of Prof. Booker T. Washington was received in Mobile Sunday from Tuskegee, Alabama.

Washington had been in poor health for two years or more and came to this city on September 17 and went to the Summer home of C. W. Allen, at Coden, and remained there until Oct. 1, when he returned home so much improved that he resumed his talks to the students at Tuskegee. On Oct. 25, at New Haven, Conn., before the National Council of Congregational Churches, he delivered what was said to be the speech of his lifetime. He returned to New York and on Nov. 3 suffered a nervous breakdown and specialists regarded his condition as critical, and he was sent home to die.

COLLEGIATE BEAT BELLEVILLE 26-0

The Peterborough Collegiate Rugby team visited Belleville on Saturday, and had little trouble in beating the Belleville Collegiate team in the inter-scholastic series. The score was 26 to 0 in favour of the Peterborough Collegians, who had things pretty much their own way. The return game will be played here on Saturday and the Belleville team will be strengthened for the occasion.

LEAVE WELL ALONE.

She was engaged, and he was a very nice young man, but all the same she could not help wishing to reform him in some way. Accordingly, as they sat side by side one night, she said, "William, we should all make some sacrifice in our lives. My brother Harry has given up smoking. What are you going to do?" "I think, love," replied the young man, "I shall deny myself the pleasure of kissing you." That will be a great sacrifice." And was the maiden pleased? Of course she was not. Three days elapsed, and again they sat side by side. "I have something to tell you, William," she murmured. "What is it?" said William. "Only this dearest," she whispered. "My brother Harry has started to smoke again."

"YE ARE REDEEMED WITH THE PRECIOUS BLOOD OF CHRIST"

Special Sacramental Service at the George Street Methodist Church

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered at the close of the service at the George Street Methodist Church, Sunday morning, and the devotional exercises throughout were in keeping with that holy ordinance. The Pastor, the Rev. R. G. Peever, chose as his subject: "Was the death of Christ merely that of a good man?" using as his text, John 18.14—"Now Caiaphas was he, which gave counsel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man should die for the people."

During the last week of our Saviour's life events followed one another in quick succession, ending with the Passover with His disciples, thus inaugurating the Lord's Supper, followed by His arrest in Gethsemane, His trial before Annas, Caiaphas, and Pilate, and His condemnation to death.

Caiaphas, when he addressed the Jews, uttering the words in the text, had in mind their hope for a temporal deliverer who should free them from the Roman yoke, reminding them that it was expedient that one man should die for the people.

The death of Christ, however, was not the death of a good person for some great cause, as was the death of John Brown during the great slave agitation in the South.

John Brown was born in 1800, and was executed December 2nd, 1859. For thirty years he carried on his agitation against slavery, realizing all the time the peril of the course he was taking. Said he: "I believe in the golden rule. I believe in the Declaration of Independence." Finally he was condemned to death after a trial of five weeks, and his last utterance was: "I can trust God with the time and manner of my death, and it will do more for the cause than all my life." As he was led to the gallows a black woman, with a babe in her arms, pressed to see him; catching sight of the little one he stooped down and kissed the child, and passed on to lay down his life in the cause of freedom. Hardly had he given his life till the storm broke over the United States, and there was no let-up until the slaves were liberated.

Some die because of strong patriotism. Such was the death of Miss Edith Cavell, who gave her life for a great cause. The day after her execution, in England alone, ten thousand men were added to the ranks. To-day societies and movements, as well as wards in hospitals, are named after her. Yet the death of Christ was not suffered for any great cause; this would not answer the great purpose of God.

Christ had the consciousness of what His own death meant. Again and again he refers to it. There was a two-fold purpose behind the ministry of Christ. First, to reveal God the Father in His life, to exemplify the character of God in righteousness and in His attitude towards sin; second, to redeem men, as Saviour and Lord, by His death. "God, who . . . . spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days, spoken unto us by His Son."

"Philip saith unto Him, Lord, show us the Father." Jesus answered: "He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." "I and My Father are one."

John refers throughout his gospel, to the nearness of Jesus to God; to reveal the will and character of God."

Jesus came to redeem men as Saviour and Lord. He came to heal the moral hurt, to cleanse from sin, to make atonement on the cross, thus showing the highest law of service. "He came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many."

The mother of James and John brought her two boys to Jesus, and desired for them a place in His kingdom, one on the right hand and the other on the left. But His answer was: "Ye do not know what ye ask; are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of?" He was going to give His life on Calvary's cross as an atonement for man.

"For there is one God and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus."

"Ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, but with the precious blood of Christ."

"He was wounded for our transgressions. He was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon Him, and with His stripes we are healed."

Christ had on His own mind and heart the consciousness that our sin rested on Him.

During the agony in the garden of Gethsemane His soul was strangely torn, and prayed "Father, if Thou be willing, remove this cup from Me," nevertheless he was willing to give Himself as a ransom for sinners.

"I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by Me. . . I am the bread of life, that living bread which came down from heaven . . . the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world."

"The living bread, sent down from heaven,
In us vouchsafe to be;
Thy flesh for all the world is given,
And all may live by Thee."

During the opening exercises Mr. Peever made kindly reference to the death of Gordon C. Freeland, once a member of the George Street Sabbath School, who, on the outbreak of the present war, left his home, in Buffalo, joined our ranks in Toronto, and has since given his life for his King and country.

SPECIAL SERVICES AT ST. JOHN'S

Rev. Major G. L. Starr Delivers an Inspiring Message to a Large Congregation

Large congregations attended the services held yesterday in St. John's Church in connection with the Dedication Festival. Rev. Major G. L. Starr, Dean of St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, occupied the pulpit at both services. His presence in the city was particularly appropriate to the occasion. Major Starr was in England at the outbreak of war and lost no time in putting himself in a position for active service. In this capacity he not only acted as instructor, but also ministered to the men on their way to the front. Later, he returned to Canada where he again took up his important duties in Kingston in addition to ministering to the men who were in training at Barriefield. Major Starr's sermons in the evening had a significant meaning to the military as well as the civilian section of the congregation. His message was based on St. Paul who, he said, was recognized as the greatest missionery the world has ever known. St. Paul travelled from one country to another overcoming all obstacles. He was not a diplomat, but a man who struck from the shoulder. At one stage of his career he was shipwrecked on the Island of Crete, yet he never lost heart, but bade his followers — "be of good cheer."

King George's Message.

The story of St. Paul has a timely meaning, said the Rev. Major Starr. When it would seem that the national ship of state is being tossed about the inspiration of St. Paul comes to us, and like St. Paul, we throw out four anchors. Only a few days ago we observed Trafalgar Day; a day that recalled to use the famous message of Lord Nelson who said: — "England expects that every man will do his duty." He knew the spirit of the men whom he led into battle. To-day King George has issued a message that is equally stirring and which appeals to every man in Peterborough as well as all parts of the British Empire. Then again we recall the sinking of the Titanic when the captain stood on the bridge of his sinking ship and said "be British." That is the spirit which is symbolical of one of the four anchors cast out by St. Paul.

Another anchor is represented by prayer. Those who cannot go and fight their country's battles can pray. Prayer is the intervening link between God and man.

Congratulated Peterborough.

Before commencing his discourse at the morning service at St. John's Church, yesterday, Rev. Major Starr of Kingston took occasion to warmly congratulate the City of Peterborough on the splendid success of the recruiting movement here, and also in the generous response to the appeal for national funds. Peterborough was frequently spoken of in terms of admiration, and he believed this city's good example had been a means of stimulating others to do likewise. On this, his first visit to Peterborough he had been very favourably impressed with the city. During the past summer, while officiating at Barriefield Camp, the visiting Major stated that he had met many members of St. John's Church who cherished very warm feelings towards their home Church, which was shared by many other Peterborough men.

6TH ANNIVERSARY OF SACRED HEART CHURCH DEDICATION NOV. 21ST

Rev. Father O'Brien Makes Urgent Appeal for Donations to Accredited Funds—Collection For Poles Next Sunday

Sunday next is the sixth anniversary of the dedication of the Church of the Sacred Heart, and will be the occasion of a general communion and special sermons. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien will celebrate Pontificial High Mass at 10.30 a.m. and Vespers at 7 p.m. The other masses will be at 7.30 and 8.30 a.m. Rev. Father Kehoe of St. Augustine's Seminary Toronto, will preach in the morning and evening.

Collection for Poles.

A collection will be taken up on Sunday next in all the churches of the diocese of Peterborough in aid of the Poles; in fact, in all the Catholic Churches of the United States and Canada. Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, made a rinping appeal for charitable responses to every accredited fund. As Belgium was the battleground on the western front, so was Poland on the east. Russian, German and Austrian armies had devastated the lands of the Poles by numerous advances and retreats. Thousands of cities, towns and villages are in ruins, and the country districts have suffered equal destruction. Father O'Brien said he referred to no particular parish in regard to generous giving to appeals for assistance; it was an obligation which all should realize. While Europe's fields have been battle-swept, here in Canada there has been peace and the blessing of a rich harvest.

Referring to the presence of a squad of 93rd Battalion men, Father O'Brien observed that these men were prepared to pay the ultimate sacrifice in defence of their country; it was the duty of those remaining at home to give as much as they could to the various funds arising out of the war. Charity demanded that succor be given the Poles who, as a people, are destitute and on the verge of starvation. It is not only the duty of those remaining at home to give, but to give until the pinch is felt, remembering the sufferings of Poland and Belgium, and the sacrifice of the men in the battle trenches.

Health Association's Appeal.

Rev. Father O'Brien also read a letter from the Peterborough Health Association, referring to the work of the visiting nurses it maintains. The Association requires about $900 to continue its work until July next.

"IT'S EASIER TO TEACH TWENTY."

"How was the lecture?"

"The subject matter was good, but the lecturer hadn't taken the trouble to arrange it intelligibly."

REV. MR. WEBB'S ADDRESS TO THE 93rd BATTALION

Eloquent Sermon Preached to Peterborough's Soldiers at the Murray St. Baptist Church Yesterday Morning.

THE DANGERS AHEAD

The 93rd Battalion attended divine service at the Murray street Baptist church yesterday morning, when the pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, delivered an eloquent sermon, taking as his text the 11th and 12th verses of the first chapter of the Gospel according to St. Mark. There was a large turnout of the boys in khaki for whom seats had been reserved in the centre of the church. The parade was in charge of Capt. R. P. Watt.

The music by the choir was appropriate to the occasion. The solo, "Land of Hope and Glory" was well taken by Mr. Asa Huycke, the choir leader.

Rev. Mr. Webb spoke as follows:

In preparing of this hour together I have been trying to think of what would be the most helpful to the men before me. I don't think you want oratory, and I am persuaded that you have had a surfeit of some other things, and now as the passing hours bring you nearer to what Tennyson calls "The Jaws of Death and the Gates of Hell," I am persuaded that what you need most is comfort.

I am reading to you from the Gospel according to Mark, the first chapter, verses 11 and 12:

'Immediately the spirit driveth him into the wilderness, and he was there tempted of Satan and was with the wild beasts and the angels ministered unto Him.'

You recognize this as the commencement of Christ's temptation. Mark begins this verse with the word 'immediately.' 'Immediately the spirit driveth him.' Immediately after what? Immediately after the voice from heaven said, "This is my beloved son in whom I am well pleased." Immediately after the applause and the commendation, came the wilderness, and the wild beasts, and the satanic temptation. It will be so with you. Our citizens join in what they believe to be the paean of heaven as they speak in your praise. The cheers of the people are sincere and it must be gratifying to you to have this expression. The men to be honoured most in this hour are those who have not sought the positions of safety but who have said, "Here am I, send me." Send me to the trenches; send me to the conspicuous position under the eyes of the snipers. These are the men that we delight to honour. But I am thinking of what comes after the cheers. I am thinking of you after you cross the channel. I am reminded that the same spirit that brings the applause to you

'Drives You Into the Wilderness.'

Abraham, Moses or Hagar never knew such a wilderness as you to cross. Ian McLaren makes Flora Campbell to say: 'There is so place so lonesome as a crowded city when there is no one to be kind to you.' You are going to a place where millions are not indifferent to you, but hateful to you—to a place where all the ingenuity of a nation is arrayed against you. You are going to be called upon to face an enemy who has thrown honour to the winds and has broken faith with the peoples of the earth.

'No pleasure trip is yours through flood and flame,
You race with death—you're hunting noble game.

It is for righteousness you struggle; it is for the weak you fight; you are called to let the world know that it is now impossible and shall be forever impossible for a man, though he wear a crown, to take Christ's name upon his lips and go forth to trample the innocent under his feet without bringing the wrath of nations upon him. This is your task. I am calling the attention of my people to-day to the almost certainty that a number of these men that they now look upon will die on the fields of France. Some strong limbs that you now see will be shattered; some of those eyes will be blinded; all these men will know the sight of blood and the experience of hunger and cold and lonliness.

Wilderness! Yes, and wild beasts, too. I have talked with a man who has seen his fellow soldier crucified upon a barn door in France. If Paul could say, "I have fought with the wild beasts at Ephesus" because he was confronted by a certain body of men, we could say so much more emphatically.

No One is Neutral.

Neutral! That word is becoming as offensive as some that are born so. Neutral! I have been in the United States during the past year and have met many Americans in this country and I have yet to meet the first one who at heart is neutral.

Will Carlton presents Benedict Arnold, the traitor, seeking admission at the gates of hell, and even there he is denied, as Satan says:

Not you, you'd give away the pass
Rather delve down amid the sulphurous mass outside
And crawl up from beneath.

That is the poet's conception of the one who plays false, who calls treaties scraps of paper and sells honour for power, and such is the enemy you have to meet. Then, 'as the spirit driveth him into the wilderness he was also tempted of the devil.'

You are going forth not only to wrestle with flesh and blood, but with principalities and powers and the spirit of darkness. You are no worse nor no better than the rest of us, and I am not talking down to you when I say that there is a possibility of your becoming intoxicated with both failure and success. There is a danger of your allowing the better man within you to be silenced, and under such circumstances there would be a danger of any one of us lowering our ideals and yielding to satanic overtures. Let there be no compromise in your case. I hope your own hearts speak to you of the contemptible meanness of carrying under the King's uniform an intoxicated body or treating a woman either here or in France any differently to what you would have your own sister treated by a soldier.

The Temptation of Cruelty.

There will be the temptation of cruelty,

"Faces of old ghosts will look in upon the battle."

The ghosts from the Gethsemane of Belgium and the Calvary of Langemark! These memories which 'both bless and burn' will suggest some things to you in that mad hour which will need all your strength to resist. I remember that you are not going to a sham battle, but while there is no sham about it let there be no shame about it. You are going to conquer, but your victory must be one which will leave no remorse for the years which are to come when Germany's sword is broken and the Allies' sword is sheathed.

I am thinking of two pictures. One of them is of the days of the Sepoy Rebellion when the soldiers came upon the naked, dead body of General Wheeler's daughter. She had been subjected to treatment worse than death. With gaunt, white faces the soldiers sat down, cut off her hair, divided it among them, then counted the strands and with a solemn oath swore that for each hair one man would die. That oath was more than kept. The other picture is of one who cause to slay was infinitely greater and whose power was supreme. He cried out "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." Both are pictures of victory.

The Creatures of Circumstances.

Oh, do not forget that for the most part the soldiers you fight are the creatures of circumstances, that personally you have nothing against them, and if it must mean death, let it be death without cruelty.

"In the wilderness with wild beasts, tempted of Satan,' but listen to this, "Angels ministered unto him." So it will be with you. I know of some angels that will be with you. You have the Angels of an Approving Conscience, for,

"What stronger breast-plate than a heart untainted,
Thrice is he armed who hath his quarrel just.
But he is naked though locked up in steel
Whose conscience with injustice is corrupted."

You will have what Christ had — the knowledge that you are where you are, because you are being driven by the Holy Spirit. If revelation gives us any idea of the character of God, if righteousness is the foundation of his throne, then it is His hand that pushes you men to the front—

"To meet the tyrant's brandished steel,
The lion's gory mane."

Then you will have the Angels of Home Love round about you. For:

"The wife who girds her husband's sword
Mid little ones who weep or wonder,
And bravely speaks the cheering word
Although her heart is rent asunder,
Doomed nightly in her dreams to hear
The bolts of death around him rattle,
Has shed as sacred blood as ere
Was poured upon the field of battle."

They cannot—they will not be separated from you, and though the smoky skies of Flanders be above you, you are sheltered 'neath the winds of the Angel of Home Love.

"God is Our Refuge."

And Christ will be there. I am not going to tell you that you are going to have visible forms around about you. I am not teaching you to look for mystical appearances in white, but I am telling you that 'God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble.' I am urging you to say by faith, "Whom having not seen we love, in Whom though we see Him not, believing we rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." Do that, men, and we will all meet again in a world where there will be no more war, whether your bodies lie under the sod of France or march triumphantly into Berlin.

Canadian Troops Are Well Paid

Only Australia Among All Belligerents, Has Higher Rate of Pay for Soldiers in the Field.

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Canadian soldiers at the front are paid at a rate which compares favorably with those of the rest of the Empire, and is decidedly above that of some of the belligerents.

In the field the Canadian gets $1 per day. Australia pays her men $1.50, and New Zealand $1. The Australian general rate is higher by 50 cents per day, but as far as married men are concerned, the separation allowance in that dominion is considerably less than allowed in Canada. The British soldier gets a shilling per day. In France and Germany, and all countries where the service is universal, the men get little more than a pittance. Germany pays them a cent a day, and France, six cents.

Officers of all units of the Canadian divisions, cavalry, artillery and infantry, get the same pay. Including field and mess allowance, it ranges from $3.60 per day for a Lieutenant, to $8.60 for a full Colonel, and $13 for a Brigadier-General. This scale is slightly higher than the British pay for infantry officers, and a little less than the British pay to artillery and engineering officers. It is practically the same as the rates paid in New Zealand and Australia.

At the Militia Department it was claimed to-day that, taken all over, the Canadian scale of pensions is the highest paid anywhere, both in the Empire and outside.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN

Tells How to Retard the Infirmities of Old Age

"I am 77 years old, and for 35 years have worked on the P. C. & St. L. R. R. Also a Civil War Veteran. I suffered from a general nervous breakdown and would have such weak, dizzy spells I would have to go to bed for a day at a time. When visiting friends in Bradford, Ohio, an old doctor recommended that I try Vinol. That very day I bought a bottle and continued to take it regularly. It has done me a world of good, built me up so I feel stronger in every way, and have gone back to work again, and I want to recommend Vinol to any old comrade or aged person who need strength for it is a grand medicine." W. H. Bowers, Steubenville, Ohio.

The reason Vinol is so beneficial to old people is because it contains the very elements needed to replace declining strength with renewed vigor, viz', the medicinal elements of fresh cod livers, without oil, peptonate of iron, beef peptone and a mild tonic wine.

We ask every aged person in Peterborough to try Vinol on our offer to return their money if it fails to create strength.

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

HOW CANADIAN TOBACCO FUND IS WORKED OUT

THE DEMAND.

There are 70,000 Canadian Soldiers in the firing line. The number is increasing every week. Tobacco is an essential to these men with but few exceptions.

THE SUPPLY.

To fill the demand 70,000 packets or more are required each week. Not one tenth of this quantity is being supplied. Each package costs 25 cents. To supply the demand 70,000 weekly subscribers are required.

ALL THE MONEY FOR TOBACCO.

Every cent contributed is expended in the purchase of Canadian manufactured Tobacco and Cigarettes to be sent to Canadian soldiers at the front.

NO EXPENSES.

The whole of the organization expenses are borne by the Overseas Club.

NO DUTY.

The Canadian, British, French and Belgian Governments have agreed respectively to the manufacture of Tobacco in bond and that all Customs duties shall be remitted.

NO FREIGHT CHARGES.

The Steamship Companies have granted generous concessions in the matter of ocean rates. The British Authorities have undertaken to carry the Tobacco to the men on the firing line free of any charge.

MAXIMUM VALUE.

These concessions, together with the special terms arranged with the manufacturers, viz.: The Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, and the Tuckett Tobacco Company Limited, Hamilton, Ontario, make it possible to supply for 25 cents, more Tobacco than a private individual can purchase in a retail store and send to the front for a dollar.

CONTENTS OF PACKAGE.

Each contribution of 25 cents will supply a package containing 50 best quality Canadian manufactured Cigarettes, one-fifth of a pound of Canadian best quality manufactured Tobacco, a box of matches and a reply post card.

REPLY POST CARD.

The object of the post card is to enable the recipient to acknowledge the gift. The subscriber's name and address are written on the post card and the soldier at the front has merely to write his thanks on the back. These post cards bring the sender into personal touch with the receiver and a collection of them make most interesting war souvenirs.

DISTRIBUTION OF PACKAGES.

It is best to leave the distribution of the parcels to the Overseas Club, who, by a carefully arranged system, plan the distribution of the gifts in equal proportions amongst the various regiments. It is possible to send gifts to special individuals, companies or regiments, and if a contributor expresses his wishes in this respect, giving regimental number and full particular, every effort will be made to secure delivery. The Ovrseas Club are now engaged in making arrangements to increase the efficiency of this part of their service.

ON ACTIVE SERVICE ONLY.

Packages of Tobacco and Cigarettes can only be sent to Canadian soldiers on active service; not to those in England or in Canada.

TO WHOM YOU CAN SEND.

Packages may also be sent to the British Navy, the British Army or the Belgian Army, but in the case of Belgian soldiers it is impossible to make delivery to individuals.

FURTHER INFORMATION.

Any further information regarding the Fund will be gladly given on application to the Office of the Overseas Club, Room 90, Windsor Hotel, Montreal.

Germans Have Abandoned Hope Of Reaching Riga And Dvinsk

Enemy Being Driven Back From the Dvina, Which Was Their Objective---Russians Are Within Striking Distance of the Tirkum-Mitau Railway

LONDON, Nov. 15.—Operations on the eastern front have assumed a new importance. In the north the Germans apparently have abandoned any hope of reaching Riga and Dvinsk, and are being driven back from the Dvina, which was their objective. The Russians in the Riga region are attempting an outflanking movement, and their recent successes have brought them within striking distance of the Tukum-Mitau railway, which connects the German fighting front with the fortress of Windau. The Germans are also falling back before Dvinsk as the result of the Russian offensive near Lake Swenton, while in the south Gen. Ivanoff has continued to harass the invaders by repeated thrusts, which during the past five weeks, according to Petrograd officials, have brought him over 125,000 prisoners. In the most recent of these thrusts, near Rudka, the bag totalled 6,000, many of whom were Germans.

The retirement of the German troops under Field Marshal von Hindenburg, which had been attempting to reach Riga, was not due to rain, as was claimed in the Berlin official report, but was the direct result of the Russian offensive. Last night's Petrograd official report states; "In the region of Schlok our troops have advanced to the west of Raggatz, fighting all the time. After eleven days of almost uninterrupted fighting in the marsh region our troops captured Kammern and Anting. The Germans, who suffered heavy losses, were thrown back to the west."

Young Lithuanian troops, the communication adds fought side by side with the seasoned troops, acquitting themselves splendidly under extremely difficult conditions.

The Daily Mail's correspondent at Petrograd telegraphed to his paper yesterday as follows:

"The success reported yesterday in the Volhynia province brings the number of prisoners captured by Gen. Ivanoff's armies during the last five weeks to more than 125,000.

"This is the third time that the Russians have broken through the enemy's front and inflicted a damaging and costly blow."

Dvinsk Fortress Impregnable.

"Had it been of rock," he says, "experts declare it would have been knocked to pieces long ago, but an artillery bombardment is of little avail agianst a rand fortress. It was captured 15 times between September 18 and October 26, and still is not in the German's possession. It has been reduced in size one-half without affecting the strength of the remainder.

"Every rod of land is covered with permanent trenches roofed securely against srapnel and shell fragments and connected with so-called 'fox holes,' small shelters where the garrison is secure against the heaviest shells. Exploding projectiles are smothered in the sand trenches skilfully laid out so that they are mutually outflanking. An apparently successful attack often means the destruction of the assailants by the flanking fires of machine guns. One company thus lost 51 dead on October 28."

Tenders For The Collection of Garbage

Property Committee Will Meet This Evening to Consider the Possibility of Awarding a New Contract—Work May Cost More

CHANGE IN SYSTEM

The Property committee of the City Council will meet this evening to consider tenders respecting the collection of garbage for next year. The committee may recommend the preparation of a new contract based on a favourable tender or may decide to undertake the work on its own account. The latter course is said by those who are in a position to know, to be very improbable owing to the extra cost that woud be involved and the initial outlay that would have to be for equipment, etc. At present the work is being done for the sum of $5,600. This price will likely be raised, as the Council has endorsed the Property committee's recommendation compelling the collectors to remove the garbage from behind the house line of the property and not the street line as formerly. This the garbage collectors claim, will increase the cost of collection, especially if there are many houses like Ald. G. W. Greene's. The latter's house is situated nearly a block from the street line. In the most of cases it will make very little difference as most of the houses are built pretty well out to the street.

$3,000 More.

One prospective tendered intimated that the work would be worth at least three thousand dollers more than was the case this year. He made no allowance for the fact that the work as it is exists at present does not necessitate the collectors working full time each working day. The present contractors are Messrs. Mitchell and Tusner. It is understood they have again tendered for the work.

AN OPPORTUNITY IF RUN DOWN

Take your ticket to Warne's Drug Store and get a $1.00 size bottle of Dr. Mell's Nervine Tonic for 35c. Mrs. E. I can recommend it to all sufferers who are run down." Manufactured by P. Stinger, Hamilton, Ont. 3d-113

HUNT CLUB IS RETURNING HOME

Mr. James Graham of the Shawanaga Hunt Club Captured a Live Deer

A number of the hunting parties have returned from the north country with favourable reports of the season's hunt. Among those returning to-day is Mr. James Graham of the Shawenaga Hunt Club, who will arrive in the city on the 5.30 train this evening. Mr. Graham captured a live deer which he is bringing home with him.

The party comprised the following members Messrs Martin, McFadden, Chas. Gladman, Jas. Graham, Chas Moffat, Chas. Curtis, Albert Curtis Bert Lillie, W. Theobald, Sam Ray, J B Pentland, John Bennett, Mr. R. Hicks and Mr. Jas. Metheral.

A group of children whose mothers belonged to the Daughters of the Revolution were overheard discussing some historic relics which had descended as heir-looms in their respective families. One little girl said that her mother had a knife and fork that Washington had once used. Others named curios of various kinds, each trying to outdo the others in upholding the family importance in regard to antiquity. But, Queen, though the youngest of the lot, carried off the honours. "My mother has a teapot," said she, "that was used in the Boston tea party!"—Woman's Home Companion.

This Winter's Show Will Be Better Than Ever

Regular Monthly Meeting of the Poultry Association Held on Saturday Evening

The regular monthly meeting of the Peterborough Poultry Association held on Saturday night in the Trades and Labour Hall was largely attended and very enthusiastic.

The Coop committee reported progress and will have the coops all finished up in a few days. Special prizes are coming in rapidly and the committee in charge of that end of the work expect to have the list ready for the printer very soon, and judging from the number of inquiries for prize lists from outside sources, this winter's show promises to be larger than ever. In the judging of birds, Mr. W. T. Abbott, assisted by President Kelly, gave entire satisfaction.

The Awards.

Rhode Island Reds (single comb)—1st cockerel and 2nd pullet, Geo. Buller; 1st pullet, A Mealey.

Rose Comb, R. I. Red—1st cockerel and 1st pullet—G. Buller; 2nd cockerel, A. Mealey.

White Leghorns (single comb)— 1st cockerel, 1st pullet—A Mealey; 2nd cockerel and 2nd pullet, J. H. Alexander.

Anconas—1st cockerel and 1st pullet, J. H. Alexander.

Birds for next monthly meeting—Orpingtons and Minorcas and anything special that will interest the members.

Shake-up in the City Council

Forthcoming Municipal Election Promises to Be Bigger Than Usual —The Mayoralty Prospects

The municipal election pot is beginning to simmer, likewise the ward politicians who revel in the fine art of nominating candidates subject to certain influences. The forthcoming election should see a general shake-up in the personnel of the present Council. Seven out of eleven members are due to retire, either voluntarily or by reason of the expiration of their term of office. The first class is represented by Ald. G. W Green, who has announced his intention of contesting the mayoralty vacancy. He has yet one year to serve in his present capacity of alderman, but will sacrifice this in the hope of filling a larger place. The five aldermen whose term of office will expire at the close of the present year are: Aldermen J. Saunders, A. H. Stratton, J. J. Duffus, W Langford and A Weir. The seventh members to retire is Mayor Buller, who completed his second year.

New Faces.

Aldermen J. Edgar, F. H. Dobbin, A. A. McIntyre and G. Evens each have another year to their credit. Should the 1916 Council fail to include a number of the old members, that august assembly will be composed of nearly all new timber, as only one out of the four who remain for another year, have had an appreciable municipal experience. Both Mayor Buller and Ald. Duffus are veterans in the game, and there is a large section of ratepayers who believe that their retirement into the shades of private life will prove a distinct loss to the Council.

While Ald. Duffus has not yet announced himself as a mayoralty candidate, many are inclined to the opinion that he will again contest the aldermanic vacancy in the west ward, where he would give any number of opponents a vigorous battle. Ald. Langford's term of office has been short. He was elected at a bye-election that was held during the year, caused by the retirement of ex-Ald Johnston. There is reason to believe that he will again enter the field. Ald. Stratton will be another candidate for re-election. For the past year he has occupied the position of chairman of the Finance committee, a duty that has involved considerable work of an intricate and important character.

CIVIL SERVANT RECRUITS DRAW ONLY ONE SALARY

OTTAWA, Nov. 13.—An order in council has been passed providing that from November 1 civil servants enlisting for over-seas service will draw their pay as civil servants only when the employment of substitutes is found unnecessary.

It is also provided that in those cases where civil service pay is continued the amount of military pay will be deducted. In any case only to those in the service at the beginning of the war will leave under these conditions for service overseas be granted.

When the war broke out the Government undertook to continue the salaries of their employees while on active service, but this has proven very expensive, as in many cases a substitute has had to be employed while the absentee was drawing his salary as a civil servant and his pay as a soldier.

ASSEMBLY HALL

The special meetings in the Assembly Hall closed last night. The visit of the Lord's servant, extending over the last three weeks, was appreciated and much enjoyed by the local assembly of Christians. All true "soldiers of the cross" and those who have a Godly care for the "furtherance of the Gospel," rejoicing in quality rather than quantity, for the visitation of the grace of God to two young people who profess to have received deliverance from the "wrath to come," "abundant thanksgiving," ascended from many hearts to the Lord, while satisfaction is found in knowing that eternity alone will reveal the full extent of the work done.

While the special effort has come to an end, all are kindly invited to the regular meetings which will (D.V.) be continued. On Wednesday evening the Lord's people come together to wait upon God in prayer, and on Friday at the same hour a meeting is convened for the reading of God's word and the interchanging of thoughts thereon. On Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock a Sunday school is held for the children and a Bible class for the older people, and in the evening at 7 o'clock, for one hour only, a bright meeting is held for the preaching of the Gospel of the grace of God. The hall, comfortably seated, and with lights and heating capacity convenient, will be found on the east side of the first floor of the old Opera House building on George street, and a hearty welcome awaits all who care to come.

WORDS OF PRAISE FOR BOYS OF 93RD

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I feel sure that I am only giving expression to general public appreciation in calling attention to the highly creditable manner in which the gallant boys of the 93rd Battalion conduct themselves from day to day, and as they have done since enlistment began. Their fine, well set-up appearance on parade through the streets, their soldierly bearing and steadiness, and their invariably courteous gentlemanly demeanour off parade, are a great credit both to themselves and their officers, as well as to the city from which they are enlisted, and where they are at present stationed. One might expect to find among some 350 men recruited from all ranks of citizenship, one or two or a few black sheep, but to find a body of such numbers, so splendidly and universally well-behaved, is something that the city should be, and, I am sure, is, proud of. It is no discredit to the small force of military police that they are the most idle and leisurely lot in the battalion, because the excellent behaviour of the soldiers deprives them of any work to do.

I feel sure that a body of soldiers who bear themselves so creditably at home, are so proof against the temptations, that a new kind of life and considerable spare time present, will give a correspondingly good account of themselves when they come to the duties of active soldiering in the battle line; and that we shall have as good occasion to be proud of them for the part they play among fighting scenes as we have on account of their good behaviours in the course of preparation for the work of the trenches and the battlefield.

Yours very truly,
GEO. H. DUNCAN.

LONDON, Nov. 15.—No attempt to apply compulsory enlistment will be made without Parliament's consent, Premier Asquith told the House of Commons this afternoon. He had been asked whether the administration would take the step on its own responsibility. "To do so," said Asquith, "might cause misunderstandings."

LONDON, Nov. 15.—English experts may be sent to Italy to direct the latter's anti U boat campaign in the Mediterranean and the Adriatic, it is confidentially reported this afternoon.

Not only are the British anxious to be of aid to their Italian allies, but it is to their own interest to clear the Mediterranean of hostile submarines as insurance of their shipping generally, and particularly of their transports on their way to and from the Near East.

BERLIN, Nov. 15.—Eighty-five hundred more Serbian prisoners have been captured by the Austro-Germans and the Bulgar troops in Northern Serbia, to-day's reports from field headquarters stated. Twelve cannon also were captured. The invaders are pushing their campaign rapidly.

GERMAN MUST SCRAP SHIPS OR KEEP THEM IN KIEL CANAL

LONDON, November 15.—The Daily Express in the course of a discursive article on the navy asserts that it is allowed to reveal a secret long known in Germany to the effect that the British mine fields have been embarked in the German mine fields protecting their channels and harbors and that unless their ships are scrapped for making war material they will stay in the Kiel canal until the end of the war.

The writer declares, nevertheless, that plenty of space is left to enable them to emerge and fight if they wish, but that they must fight in a place the British navy's choosing. The British armada of patrol boats is equipped with wireless to ensure against surprise.

He declares confidently that there will be no Trafalgar in the present war. The great final naval engagement of the war, he says, was that of the Dogger Banks in January. He adds that a map showing the German submarines captured recently was shown to newspapermen visiting Admiral Jellicoe's fleet. The map covered only the captures up to June. The operations since then, the writer says, have been far more successful.

The Dedication Festival concluded yesterday when the Rev. Dean Starr preached to large congregations. The Dean commended the choristers in the vestry after Evensong on their reverent and effective work in leading the services. Both offertory numbers amply repaid the time spent in rehearsal by the fine rendition yesterday, "Rock of Ages" in the morning and "The Recessional" at night." Mr. H. W. Morphet singing the solo in the latter number with fine effect. The war has played havoc among the choristers: eight are with the colours, and four at the Ross rifle works in Quebec. Of the old guard but four remain, and two of them are with the 93rd Battalion. Eight more voices have kindly come forward and the outlook is encouraging. More voices are needed in the bass section. A rehearsal for Advent music was held after Evensong last night.

BY NOT ADVANCING THE ENEMY IS SLOWLY RETREATING

LONDON, Nov. 15. The news from the eastern front indicates that von Hindenburg's campaign in the Riga Dvinsk region is apparently ended, and that the counter movement of the Russian armies under Gen. Russky is gaining momentum. The Russians continuing their attacks between Olai and the west of Lake Babit, are reported by Petrograd to be forcing the Germans into the woods and marshes, which greatly hamper the movements of the Teutons. In an effort to overcome these difficulties the Germans are exerting every energy to complete the railways which they are building in Courland.

Gen. Russky, who is conducting an aggressive campaign against the Austro-Germans in Russia, in an interview published in the Bourse Gazette, spoke confidently of conditions at the front. He said:

"Without indulging in prophecy, which would be imprudent, I may say that we are now guaranteed against unpleasant surprises on the part of the enemy. The time for surprises is past. But it would be irresponsible frivolity to describe the enemy as exhausted or in the death throes. On the contrary he is strong, but not so strong that we need fear surprises either here or on the western front.

"By not advancing the enemy is really retreating. The Germans now surrender readily in whole companies and battalions and this in my opinion is an ominous sigh. Their men are worn out by privations, cold and the spectre of Winter, and instead of their former self confidence, show decided depression.

Gen. Russky said he considered the Balkan campaign merely an episode of secondary importance.

"It is not there," he declared, "that the fate of nations will be decided."

Canadians Get a Chance to Repair Trenches

And Improve the Drainage—Welcome Lull on the Canadian Front —Health of Men Excellent

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Major-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes received the following communique from the Canadian general representative in France:

"Canadian General Headquarters in France, Nov. 14.— During the week Nov. 5 to 12 the general situation on the Canadian front has remained unchanged. Rain fell in heavy showers at fairly frequent intervals, and at time fog prevailed, but on the whole the weather conditions showed a slight improvement over last week.

"Our working parties have been busily employed throughout the area on repair work, and the improvement of our drainage systems. The enemy has been actively engaged repairing his trenches, and there has been every indication that his trenches were severely damaged as a result of the recent heavy rains. Continuous sounds of pumping and baling have been heard from his lines, and during the daytime his working parties have offered more than usually frequent targets for our artillery.

"As the result of the employment by the enemy of large numbers of men on repair work there has been little machine gun and rifle fire from the German trenches, and only occasionally have German snipers displayed their customary activity. The enemy artillery has displayed a tendency to bombard certain sections of our front lines more heavily than usual, and to concentrate a considerable fire on some of the farm buildings within our area. Very little damage has been done. In every case our artillery has taken advantage of its superior weight and retaliated with a heavy fire, which has effectively silenced the German batteries.

"On various occasions during the period an organized bombardment of sections of the enemy trenches and defence works has been carried out by our artillery, and several of the German fortified places have been destroyed.

"Our patrols and snipers continue to maintain their general ascendency over the enemy. On several occasions officers' patrols have penetrated the German wire entanglements and secured valuable information as to the condition of the German parapets. Few indications of hostile patrols have been found.

"The training of our troops is progressing well, and continues to receive every attention. A large proportion of the personnel of our infantry units has taken a grenade course in one or other of our schools. In spite of the wet weather the health of our troops continues good, and all ranks remain in excellent spirits."

Allied Troops Seeking Refuge in Greece Will Be Disarmed

King Constantine Not To Grant Teutons' Demand To Bar Allied Troops

As Salonika is Open Port There is No Infringement of Greek Rights and Country Will Remain Neutral Until Those Rights Are Transgressed.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Greece will remain neutral; that is, she will not take an active part in the war on either side. But she will continue to allow the Allies to send troops across her territory to defend Serbia.

Such is the interpretation of the answer which King Constantine is reported to have made to the latest protest of Germany and Austria against the landing of allied troops at Salonika.

The reply of the King is said to have been that as Salonika is an open port, there has been no infringement of Greek rights in the landing and that Greece will remain neutral until one of the belligerents has transgressed those rights.

France and Italy have been especially anxious regarding the attitude of Greece. Italy is now actively co-operating with her Allies, having bombarded Dedeagatch and having sent a warship to Salonika. British and French troops are constantly arriving at Salonika and Greece has made no effort to stop them, despite the protests of the Teutons, thus adhering to the new Premier's announced policy of "benevolent neutrality." But the Austro-German protests are likely to be repeated more energetically, hence the arrival of Lord Kitchener is anxiously awaited.

An Athens despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says:

"The possible retreat of the Serbian forces over Greek territory is causing no disquietude in official circles, according to the newspaper Embros, as such an event would be unlikely to strain the relations existing between Greece and the Entente Powers. At the present time the movements of the Serbian army do not indicate that such an eventuality is close at hand."

The British and French troops are meeting with some success, and, besides repulsing the Bulgarian attacks, have undertaken small offensive movements with good results. The Austro-Germans and Bulgarians, however, made such progress from the beginning of the campaign that it will take serious work now to check them.

The Serbians are falling back from mountain range to mountain range before the advance of the Austro-German forces, which report the capture of a thousand or more prisiners daily, a few guns and quantities of stores. They are fighting continuously, however, and are inflicting considerable losses on their pursuers.

Along the eastern front the Serbians appear to be holding their own against the Bulgarions and are making a stand on the western bank of the Rorava River. So stubborn has been their resistance the Bulgarians have had to call for assistance from the Austro-German artillery in their effort to drive the defenders out of Katchanik Pass. Thus far the Bulgarians have been unsuccessful in this effort.

A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from Salonika says:

"The fighting Sunday between the Serbians and Bulgarians in the region of Tetovo resulted in success for the Serbians, who occupied the town of Tetovo, capturing one gun and a quantity of stores. The Bulgarians later recaptured the town.

"A Bulgarian attack on the left bank of the Arnoya River was repulsed with heavy losses. Toward the south, in the Valandovo region, the French captured several trenches.

A despatch from Salonika says it is officially announced that the proportion of wounded to killed on the allied side so far in the Balkan campaign is as ten to one.

French Troops Effect A Junction With Serbian Troops Near Prilep

French Routed the Bulgars in a Big Fight on the Crena River —Serbians Have Retaken Tetovo—Earl Kitchener Has Arrived at Mudros on Lemnos Island.

Russian and British diplomats in Persia, will practically take over the Persian Government, if they did not do so simultaneously with the Shah's departure.

ITALIANS DEMAND AIR RAID REPRISALS

Both Austrians and Italians Claim Victory on the Isonzo Front

ROME, Nov. 1 The raid upon Verona by three aeroplanes which resulted in the death of 30 civilians and the wounding of 40 others, has intensified the bitterness felt in Italy against Austria. The Idea Nazionale demands prompt reprisals, suggesting that all Germans in Italy be interned in concentration camps, that Austro-German property be confiscated and that 5,000 Austrian prisoners be held as hostages.

As soon as he heard of the raid, Pope Benedict directed Cardinal Gasparri, Papal Secretary of State, to telegraph immediately to Cardinal Boetheri, Archbishop of Verona, asking details and instructing him to do everything possible to relieve the sufferers.

"On the Isonzo front our action continued yesterday. We progressed on Javorcek, in the Plezzo basin and on the heights north-west of Gorizia.

"On the Carso plateau we have taken strong entrenchments [illegible] Delle Frasche to the south-west of San Martino.

"Our aeroplanes on the 12th, notwithstanding bad weather, made successful raids over the Carso. They bombarded the railroad stations at Reinfenberg, San Daniele, Syopc, and Dottoghino and long lines of trains standing at the stations. Two enemy machines of the Albatross type and one of the Aviatik type which were met on the way, were put to flight by machine gun fire. Our machines returned undamaged."

A torch fitted with a tube to take gas from any convenient jet has been invented for starting fires in stoves or furnaces without the use of kindling wood.

BRITISH NAVAL WALL NEEDED IN MEDITERRANEAN

ROME, Nov. 15, via Paris, Nov 16 The sinking of the steamer Bosnia, following closely the destruction of the Ancona, and the Firenze, has resulted in a determined agitation for the adoption in the Mediterranean of measures similar to those which have checked submarine activities in the North Sea.

Careful search is being made for the missing boats of the Firenze and Bosnia, but there is no longer hope of finding additional survivors of the Ancona. Latest official reports give the number saved as 289 out of a total of 507 aboard the Ancona. Most of the victims were steerage passengers of whom only 57 were saved.

An official statement from the Italian Government contradicted in the Austrian Admiralty that the submersible first warned the Ancona and then gave passengers and crew 45 minutes in which to escape.

Both official statements, it was pointed out, failed to touch on important points at issue. The Austrian Admiralty did not state specifically that the submarine was an Austrian, though the fact that the statement came from Vienna led to the presumption that it was. The Italian Government, on the other hand, did not make it clear whether the Ancona attempted to escape, as alleged by the Austrian Admiralty, before she sank.

Dr. Cecile L. Greil, of New York, and Giuseppi Torrici, the two American survivors, are en route to Rome to report to American Ambassador Page. Page's best information is that nine Americans lost their lives.

Magical Effect of New Face Peeler

To maintain a clear, rosy, youthful complexion, there's nothing so simple to use and yet so effective as ordinary mercolised wax, which you can get at any drug-store in the original package. Just apply the wax at night as you would cold cream in the morning wash it off with warm water. If you've never tried it you can't imagine the magical effect of this harmless home treatment. The wax causes the worn out scarf skin to come off in minute particles, a little at a time, and soon you have entirely shed the offensive cuticle. The fresh young underskin now in evidence is so healthy and girlish looking, so free from any appearance of artificiality, you wish you had heard of this marvellous complexion-renewing secret long ago.

To get rid of your wrinkles, here's a formula that is wonderfully effective: 1 oz. powdered saxolite, dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this and you will be simply astonished at the results, even after the first trial.

EARLY DESPATCH OF ITALIANS TO ALBANIA

ROME, Nov. 15 The Albanian question is becoming more acute hourly, the belief being expressed in diplomatic quarters that a secret agreement exists between Bulgaria and Greece concerning Serbia Macedonia and Albania. According to the report of agreement the southern part of Albania would go to Greece and the northern part to Bulgaria, the latter country thus realizing its traditional dream of being bathed by three seas—the Black Sea the Aegean and the Adriatic.

The connection is held by many that Italy must participate in the Balkan contest in order to safeguard her most vital interests represented by the supremacy of the Adriatic and the possession of Avlona. The question now to be settled is that of adequate military and political means to protect these interests in such a manner as to be sure of success and also to avoid delay which might render action too late.

Soft, Curly, Wavy Hair Now Easy to Have

(Woman's Realm)

Beautiful, fluffy, natural looking curls or waves, without the use of the ruinous curling iron, are now possible for every woman. Yes, not only possible, but very easily acquired over night and with benefit to the life and health of the hair. It is only necessary to apply a little liquid silmerine before retiring, using a clean tooth brush for the purpose, drawing the hair down the full length of the tresses from root to tip. In the morning the hair will have a most delightful curliness and lustre without the least suggestion of greasiness, and will be quite controllable, no matter how the hair is done up.

As liquid silmerine is procurable at any drug store and as a few ounces of it will last for months no woman need put up with that flat, sank, dank appearance of the hair which gives such an unwholesome look of plainness to most faces.

GEN. JOFFRE AT HEAD OF ALLIED ARMIES IT IS REPORTED

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—That General Joffre, commander in chief of the French armies, has been placed in supreme control of the fighting forces of the allied armies is indicated by confidential advices said to have been received at the Imperial Russian Consulate in this city. That the French generalissimo would soon take this post, if he does not already hold it, has been the report reaching New York from London for some time past. More than two months ago an Englishman who is in a position to know, asserted during a trip here that Sir John French soon would be ordered to take his commands from General Joffre.

Strength was added to the assertion by General Joffre's trip to England, followed soon by Lord Kitchener's hurried trip to the east. From what has been learned, it is said General Joffre made it clear to the British authorities that an undivided management would be required to avoid consequences similar to those that happened the French-British forces during the last advance, when British units on the van found themselves unsupported in the vicinity of Laon, and what might have been a great victory fell short of its goal because "some one had blundered."

It has been reported frequently that there has been friction between Sir John French and General Joffre. It also has been said that between Lord Kitchener and the Grand Duke Nicholas there was some disagreement. With the Grand Duke in the East and Lord Kitchener on his way there, where they might have to cooperate, the act that they were both under the command of one man, it is said, might have a soothing effect.

In diplomatic circles it is expected the official announcement of General Joffre's appointment as commander in chief of the armies of Great Britain, France, Russia and Italy soon.

MISSING WIDOW IS AT HOME OF NIECE

Wealthy Mrs. Goddard, Who Disappeared from Brooklyn, Living With Relative Near Boston.

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 16.—Mrs. Margaret Goddard, a wealthy widow who, according to Mrs. Emma M. Demarth, Klux disappeared last Monday from the Klux home in Brooklyn, went she had lived for the last thirteen years is at the home of her niece, Mrs. Howard A. Cook, at No. 7 Glenway, Jamaica Plain. She denies emphatically that she has any desire to return to the Klux home.

I was not kidnapped or anything of the kind," Mrs. Goddard told a reporter for the Herald this afternoon. "I wanted to come to Boston with Mrs. Cook. I asked her to bring me here and I am going to remain with her."

Mrs. Cook's mother, Mrs. Mary Bamford, who lives with her, is Mrs. Goddard's sister, and she and Mrs. Cook declare that any efforts to induce Mrs. Godard to return to Brooklyn will be vigorously opposed.

Mrs. Godard is eighty-one years old and is so weak physically that she requires constant attention. She also is very deaf, and her mind appears to be slightly clouded, but she seems to realize that she is with her sister and niece and that she came with them to Jamaica Plain of her own accord.

HIDDEN HOSPITAL LIKE CATHEDRAL

Describing an underground receiving station for wounded behind the firing line, a corporal in the R.A.M.C. writes:

"The place looks like the crypt of a cathedral, roofed black arches all whitewashed. In the entrance is a huge hole caused by a shell, hits right on the roof with sandbags at the foot of which pile is round a row of sandbags to form a comfortable settee for the sitting cases.

The cases come in down a gutter, well greased, and after treatment are carried up a slope over rubble and rubbish to the cars.

"Each stretcher case is laid on two trestles under one strong acetylene lamp. The rest of the place are either lighted by a single candle or a hurricane lamp, so you can imagine the weird scene. A small stove is kept always going, and cases are always given meat extract or water according to nature of injury.

"The other night I with all the others, were called out to be heard work up the trenches again. We marched at intervals for safety. It was indescribably weird and dream like to go so quickly, sharing each other's blankets, sometimes going very low as we passed gaps.

Soldier of Fortune ——— by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

"Talk too nice for you to befoul even with your tongue. If you mention her name again except in terms of respect there is going to be trouble.

He laughed, opening and closing his big hands.

"I mean it," I went on soberly. "Don't think I am afraid of you. No, you keep your hands where they are! If it comes to a draw you'll find me quick enough to block your game. Now, listen!"

I made no display of a weapon. He could not be sure that I was armed yet my right hand was hidden in the side pocket of my coat. The brute and the coward struggled for mastery in his face.

"I've told you the truth about who we are and our purpose in coming here," I went on slowly, and clearly, "because I have decided to fight in the open. Now, I want to know who you are what authority you have on the Henley plantation. Speak up!"

The reply came reluctantly, for there must have been a sternness to my face which compelled attention.

"I told yer I 'as the overseer."

"A fine specimen, from the looks of the place. What were you ordered to grow—weeds?"

"That's none o' your business."

"It's the business of the lady up stairs, Coombs, and I am representing her at present. It will be just as well for you to be civil. Who appointed you to this position the administrators?"

"I reckon not."

"Ever hear of a man named Neale—P. B. Neale?"

"No."

"Or Justus O. Vail?"

He shook his head.

"No one sent you any word, then, that we were coming or gave you any orders to look after us?"

The blank expression of his face was sufficient answer. I waited a moment, thinking, endeavoring to determine my next move. This knowledge made one thing clear—we were playing a lone hand. As well planned as was the scheme of those two conspirators, they had reckoned without sufficient knowledge of the existing conditions here. But was this true? Would villains as shrewd as they be guilty of such neglect? Besides, they had assured me that the overseer would be notified of our coming. Suddenly there flashed back to my memory a picture of that murdered man in the rear room. Could he be the connecting link, the overseer sent by Neale? Only the harshest measure would compel Coombs to acknowledge the truth. I drew in my breath, every nerve braced for action. Then I jerked the pistol from my pocket and held it, glimmering ominously in the light, across my knee.

"You probably have some reason for lying to me," I said coldly, "and now I am going to give you an equally good reason for telling the truth. What do you know about the administrators of this estate? There is one named Neale, isn't there?"

"I—I reckon so."

"How do you know?"

"Waal," feeling it useless to struggle against the argument presented by the one steel barrel, "all I know is a fellow com' 'long yere awhile back with a paper signed Neale, thinkin' ter take my job."

"What happened to him?"

"Oh, he just nat'rally got kicked out inter the road, an' I reckon he's a running yet. He was a miserable Yankee cuss, an' I didn't hurt the cuss none to speak of. What yer askin' all this fer anyhow," he questioned anxiously, "an a drawin' that gun on me?"

"It seemed to be the only available method for extracting information. Pardon my insistance, Coombs, but wasn't that dead man up there the fellow Neale sent?"

"Not by a jugful," and I could see the perspiration break out on his forehead. "Why, there wan't none on-yhow. That guy skipped out north ag'in."

"Under whose orders are you in charge here?"

He was so long in answering, his eyes glaring ugly under heavy brows, that I elevated my weapon, half believing he meditated an attack.

CHAPTER VIII.

Circumstantial Evidence.

SUDDENLY I became aware that his glance was not directly upon me, and I lifted my own eyes to the surface of the tarnished mirror behind where he sat. It reflected the large portrait of the late Judge Henley hanging on the opposite wall, and—by the gods—I thought I saw it move, settle back into position! I was upon my feet instantly, swinging aside into a better position for defense. Before Coombs could realize what had occurred I had the gun muzzle at the side of his head.

"Now answer," I commanded sharply. "Whose orders put you here?"

He choked, shrinking back helpless in the chair.

"You won't always have the drop on me."

"Well, I have now. Speak up. Who is the man?"

"Philip Henley," he whispered, so low I scarcely caught the name.

"What!"

"Waal, I told yer," he growled resentfully. "Yer kin believe er not, just as you please, but so help me that's the truth. I reckon I know."

As I stared at him, half believing, half incredulous, I became conscious that she stood in the hall doorway. Coombs lifted his head, glad of any respite, and I glanced aside also, dropping the pistol back into my coat pocket.

"You—you were quarreling?" she asked, coming into the room. "You were so long I became anxious and came down."

"Nothing serious," I assured her smilingly. "Coombs here was a little reluctant to impart information, and I was compelled to resort to primitive methods. The result has been quite satisfactory."

"Kin I go now?" he asked uneasily.

"Yes, by way of the front door."

I watched his great hulking figure until he disappeared along the path leading around the house. I had no fear that he would ever face me openly. All I needed to guard against was treachery. Then I turned and looked into the questioning eyes of the woman.

"What did you learn? What did he say?"

"Only one thing of real importance," I answered in subdued tone, "and I dragged that out of him by threat. He was not employed by Neale, and the fellow who was sent down here to assist us was disposed of in some way."

"Killed you mean?"

"I suspect as much, but Coombs claims he was kicked off the place and returned north."

For a moment she stood silent, breathing heavily, her eyes on my face. In the pause I saw again the picture of the old judge and remembered.

"Why is he here, then? What authority has he?"

"Come outside into the garden and I will tell you the whole story."

In front of the veranda and to the right of the brick walk the latticework of a small summer house could be discerned through a maze of shrubbery and weeds. On a rustic seat within we were completely screened from observation. With flushed cheeks and eyes bright and questioning she could scarcely wait for me to begin.

"Now tell me. Surely we are out of sight and hearing."

"I do not think I shall ever be entirely assured as to that until I know more of our exact situation," I replied, speaking cautiously. "We may have been seen coming here, and those weeds would easily conceal an eavesdropper. The truth is, I have gained very little information of value and am as mystified as ever. If that fellow told the truth it is beyond my understanding. I think he lied and yet cannot be sure. He claims to be working under the orders of Philip Henley."

"What! Impossible!"

"So I felt, and consequently hesitated to tell you, but now that I have been compelled to do so, I will explain in full. He said this under a menace, a condition which often inspires men to speak the truth. I can scarcely imagine his making up such a story, for he is a dull witted fellow, and even before he had threatened to test your claims to be Henley's wife."

"You told him, then?"

"Everything, except the original cause of our being here. I determined this morning to fight in the open, under my own name. That is the right way, is it not?"

"Yes, I think so," and she lifted her eyes to mine. "I like you better for that."

"I think I like myself better also," I said with a laugh. "I confess I didn't care much at first. But after what you said the night of our arrival I began to view the thing in a new light, and to despise my part in it. Yet even then I felt bound to carry out my agreement. It was only when you told me your identity, that I felt free to decide otherwise. I want to serve you, and I want you to respect me. Down in your heart you haven't really been assured that I was not one of that gang of conspirators. You came down here to watch me."

"No—no. I scarcely think I ever did doubt you, only it was all very strange. Nothing seemed real."

"We are both getting our heads above the mist now," I interrupted gently, "and deep as the mystery appears, when finally solved it will likely prove a very sordid, commonplace affair. The main thing is for us to thoroughly understand and trust each other."

"I trust you." And both her hands were impulsively extended. "I have from the very first. I did not come here to watch, but because I believed in you. Truly this was my motive rather than any thought of the property. I came because—because I knew you needed me. I had an intuition that you were going into danger, into some trap. It was not until that afternoon that I realized clearly what this all meant to me personally. I seemed to wake up as from a dream. Then I sat down in the rest room of one of those big department stores and thought it all out. At first I determined to tell you everything, but I did—did not know you at all. I trusted you. I believed in you. I—I had to test you, Gordon Craig."

"My only wonder is that you retained any confidence—"

"Oh, but I did," she insisted warmly. "That alone brought me here. I came back to you that night because—because I believed you to be a gentleman. I am convinced I chose aright. You are the man I thought you to be. I am glad I came."

For an instant the hot blood coursed through my veins. Wild words leaped to my lips, only to be choked back unspoken, although I scarcely knew what strength combined to win the swift struggle. Impulse, made with sudden revelation of love, swept me perilously near to outburst, yet reason held sufficiently firm to restrain the flood of passion. I knew I must refrain; I read it in the calm depths of those eyes fronting me in frank friendship. A word, a single, mad, ill considered word would sever the bond between us as though cleft by a sword. With any other I might have dared all, but not with her. She trusted me—yes! But as a gentleman. Should I fail in that test of her faith I could never again hope to regain my place in her esteem.

"Let's not talk of ourselves," I said, releasing her hands, "but of what we must face here. I have told you that Coombs claims to be working under the orders of your husband. Is that possible?"

"I cannot conceive clearly how it could be, and yet he might have received notice of his father's death in time to assume control of the estate by telegraph or even by letter."

"He might have been the old overseer, however, and retained."

"True. Yet how could Philip Henley know that he had inherited the property?"

She thought a moment seriously, a little crease in the center of her forehead.

"Of course I can only guess," she hazarded at length, "but it would seem likely he was notified of his father's death by one of the administrators and doubtless told at the same time of his inheritance. He was the only son, and there were no other near relatives. It would be only natural for him to retain the old servants until he could come here and select others."

"There is only one fact which opposes your theory," I acknowledged, "otherwise I would accept it as my own also. Coombs plainly threatened to confront you with Henley to test your claim to being his wife."

"Even that would not be impossible," she admitted reluctantly, "for he must have known of the judge's death even before—before I left. Only I do not believe it probable, as he was in no condition to travel and had very little money. Besides," her voice strengthening with conviction, "those men who sent you here, Neale and Vail, would never have ventured such a scheme had they been uncertain as to Philip Henley's helplessness. I believe he is either in their control or dead."

(To be continued.)

DOCTORS DID NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Mrs. Bradley's Health—Her Own Statement.

Winnipeg, Canada. —"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth. The doctors said it was a tumor and could not be removed as it would cause instant death. They found that my organs were affected, and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in.

"After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper, and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. CHILLA BRADLEY, 204 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba, Can.

MARRIAGE PROBLEMS.

"Good morning Parson," said Jenks, the village wag, meeting the parish rector one morning. "I want your advice on a certain point concerning the marriage laws."

"I shall be very pleased to assist you if I can, Mr. Jenks. What is it you're quite solving?"

"Well, I want to know whether it is legal for a man to marry his widow's niece?"

The vicar hesitated before vouchsafing a reply, then very slowly expressed it as his opinion that such a marriage would be perfectly legal.

"That is satisfactory, sir, but would it be possible for such a marriage to take place?" continued Jenks, with a merry twinkle in his eye.

"Certainly if the thing is legalized by law, it is of course possible," replied the clergyman.

"You are positive on that point, I presume?"

"Of course I am."

"Well I can't say that I share your opinion. As a rule in this country wid ows are widows, and if a man wished to marry the niece of such a person I'm afraid he'd have to rise from the grave first. Good morning, parson!" Tit-Bits.

LOOKED THAT WAY.

"I want a man who doesn't smoke or drink."

"What are the wages?"

"Six dollars a week."

"Guess you want a man who doesn't eat, either."

Would Wake Up With Smothering Spells.

There is nothing that brings with it such a fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The terrible smothering, choking up and sinking feeling is caused by the heart and nerves being in a deranged condition, and calls for prompt relief.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in all cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, tone up the nervous system, and the trouble which is the cause of so much fear and anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. Wm. McElwain, Temperance Vale, N.B., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I must say Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are all right. Some years ago I was troubled with smothering spells. In the night I would be sound asleep, but would wake up with my breath all gone, and think I would never get it back again. I was telling a friend of my trouble, and he advised me to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. He also gave me a box which I tried, and I had only taken a few of them when I could sleep all night without any trouble. I did not finish the box until some year later, when I felt my trouble coming back. I took the rest and they have cured me entirely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MISS LAVINIA'S LOVER

The Result of the Search For the Man Who Went Away.

By. VIRGINIA BLAIR.

[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

"Well, of course," Miss Lavinia confided, "I am glad to have it, but it's unsettling."

Mrs. Briggs sniffed. "It wouldn't unsettle me if any one left me $10,000. I would know what to do with it."

Miss Lavinia leaned forward eagerly. "What would you do, Jane?" she demanded.

"Oh, well." Mrs. Briggs hesitated. "I'd get some new clothes right away and fix up the house, and entertain my friends, and take a trip and have an automobile"—

"I have thought of those things, but they don't seem to be just what I want, after all. Maybe I'll just put it out at interest."

"Now, look here, Lavinia Latimer," Mrs. Briggs said solemnly, "don't you do any such thing. You've got enough to live on, such as it is, and my advice is to take some of the money and have a good time. Goodness only knows you haven't had many good times."

"No, I haven't," Miss Lavinia admitted somewhat wistfully. "Well, I'll think it over, Jane."

And after Mrs. Briggs had gone Miss Lavinia picked up her big yellow cat and told him her innermost wish. "I'm going to use some of that money to find out where John Forbes is," she whispered, "but I wouldn't tell Jane."

But to look for the man who had left town ten years ago was not an easy matter. And Lavinia Latimer was not wise in methods. But she wanted to know the fate of her old lover, and so it happened that ten days after her talk with Jane Briggs, Miss Lavinia went to town.

"I'm going to buy clothes," was the reason she gave, but when she came to the big town it was not to the stores that she made her way, but to a dusty, musty little office in a squalid street.

"McDermott, private detective," said the sign.

Miss Lavinia was all pink and white and pretty as she stated her case. But Mr. McDermott set her at once at her ease. He was a brisk little man with curly white hair and red cheeks.

"So you want to find John Forbes," he said. "Is he a relative?"

"Oh, no!" And Miss Lavinia blushed.

"Owe you any money?" McDermott demanded.

"Oh, no, no!" Miss Latimer cried distressfully. "We were engaged fifteen years ago, and I couldn't marry him, because I had to stay with my old father and mother—and he—he went away—and I promised that when I was free I would let him know.

"Oh!" McDermott ejaculated, and after a pause, "Were you expecting to find him still single?"

"I—I'm not sure."

McDermott tugged at his mustache. "The chances are that he'll be married."

"Of course," Miss Lavinia agreed, "but I should like to be sure."

"Surely," said McDermott. "You just let me have the case, and I'll bring you news of John Forbes before you know it."

McDermott reported regularly once a week by letter to Miss Lavinia and as regularly received her answers.

Miss Lavinia wrote on pale violet paper that gave forth a perfume of fresh flowers in the stuffy little office. McDermott found himself laying these letters in a little drawer by themselves, and one day in early spring, when he had traveled out into the country on a case, he spied some violets by the wayside. He picked them and brought them home and laid them with the letters in the drawer.

McDermott had money of his own, so that Miss Lavinia's little fortune had no charms for him, but the thought of her delicate presence in his home often came to him with a sense of irresistible attraction.

"But if she finds John Forbes single she will marry him," he would say with a sigh, and the temptation to overlook clews was great.

In June he called on her and found her in her garden with a little low table in front of her on which was set forth a lemonade service. Miss Lavinia was in pale mauve with a hat wreathed with violets. "When you wrote you were coming," she said to McDermott, "I thought you would enjoy it better here in the garden—it's cooler."

"Well, if you knew what a nice change it was from that office in town," sighed the little man.

After that he came often, and gradually it began to be rumored in the town that Miss Lavinia was "keeping company" with a man from the city.

"Well, I must say that I like his looks," Mrs. Briggs told Miss Lavinia when she came over one morning after McDermott had called.

"He is just a business acquaintance," Miss Lavinia protested.

Mrs. Briggs sniffed. "I guess you wouldn't be dressing up in those pretty clothes and waving your hair just for a business man."

Miss Lavinia blushed and sighed. "You don't know how many things I have to look after since I got my money."

To tell the truth, the search for John Forbes began to weigh on her. She realized that with the coming of John Forbes would end the visits of John McDermott.

McDermott continued doggedly with his search. He didn't want to find John Forbes, or if he did find him he hoped that he would be married. But if Lavinia Latimer wanted anything, she should have it.

And as all things must have an end, the time came when John Forbes was located in a small western town.

"It's your John Forbes, all right," McDermott wrote to Miss Lavinia. "He was born in your town and everything tallies. But I don't know whether he is married. I'll find out. I leave on Monday for the west."

"Please," Miss Lavinia wrote back, "don't look him up. Come out and see me before you go—to supper Sunday night, if you will.

It was the first time that she had invited him to a meal, and her preparations were beyond the ordinary. She had in her days of prosperity hired a competent maid, and they brought out the silver and glass, and when McDermott sat down in the dim, fragrant dining room the feast that was set before him on the old mahogany was of broiled chicken and salad and delicate biscuits and strawberries and cream and cottage cheese and all the wonderful gastronomic triumphs of Maryland cooks.

And when he had finished he sat with Miss Lavinia on the front porch.

"I want to ask you a somewhat delicate question," he said, out of the silence of the dusk. "If I find John Forbes is single, what am I to do about it?"

"I don't know," Miss Lavinia faltered.

McDermott hitched his chair forward slightly.

"You love him very much?" he asked suddenly.

"I'm not sure," Miss Lavinia murmured in the darkness.

"Well, there's one thing I would like to say right here," the little man stated. "I wish to withdraw from the case, Miss Lavinia."

"Oh," she gasped, "but I can't do without you!"

"Can't you?" he cried radiantly. "Do you mean that you could love me? I've wanted to tell you how much I loved you for a long time—only there was John Forbes"—

"Oh, I didn't dream"— Miss Lavinia fluttered.

"It's more than human nature can stand," McDermott went on, "to expect a man who loves you to go and bring back another man to marry you."

"Yes," she agreed timidly, "it is I—I think if you wish it—we will drop the case of John Forbes, Mr. McDermott."

But McDermott didn't drop the case. He went west and looked up the old lover and found him neither single nor married nor dead. But he was divorced and of doubtful reputation.

"He isn't worth another thought," McDermott said hotly when he came back. "And I'm not saying that because I'm prejudiced, either."

"Well, it relieves my mind to know," the lady confessed, "and, anyhow, if I hadn't tried to find him I wouldn't have met you—and"—

"You have promised to marry me in October," said her lover triumphantly, "so who cares for John Forbes or any other man—when you are going to be Mrs. McDermott?"

NEGLECTED COLDS VERY OFTEN TURN TO CONSUMPTION.

Never neglect what at first seems to be but a slight cold. Your head becomes stuffed up; you start to cough; an irritation in the throat follows; it gets lower down; settles on the lungs; you start to raise phlegm of a greenish, yellowish color sometimes streaked with blood, and you cough persistently.

You think perhaps you are strong enough to fight off this trouble, but colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate. Colds if not attended to will sooner or later develop into some serious lung trouble.

Mrs. Willis H. Monk, Lower Ship Harbor, N.S., writes: "Last winter I took a severe cold on my lungs, and I would cough and spit up phlegm and blood. I had the cough for nearly a month, and I got medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good. I thought I had consumption. My friends advised me to use Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I did, and it gave me great relief. I am the mother of ten children, and I always keep a bottle of 'Dr. Wood's' in the house. I will highly recommend it to all, especially to all who have little ones to care for."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is the best cure for coughs and colds. It has been on the market for the past twenty-five years. It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

IF YOUR THROAT IS HUSKY CATARRH MAY BE STARTING

A weak or irritated throat is the first step towards Catarrh. Everything depends on your remedy. A cough mixture slips quickly over the weak spots, drops into the stomach and does little but harm digestion. It's altogether different with Catarrhozone—it cures because it gets right at the trouble. You inhale Catarrhozone, breathe in the vapor of healing balsams that strengthen and restore the weak throat tissues. You'll never have colds or coughs. Throat trouble and catarrh will disappear with the use of Catarrhozone. Get the large dollar outfit which includes the inhaler, it lasts two months and is guaranteed to cure. Gifts That Girls Will Enjoy

Collar and Cuff Set for Christmas

Quaker collar and cuff sets of organdie are easily made and among the most fashionable of dress accessories. They make charming Christmas gifts, and may be made at small cost.

Sheer materials, in cotton or linen, are used to make them, with hemstitching, narrow lingerie laces or embroidery in small sprays forming the decorative features. A quaker set edged with cluny lace is shown in the picture.

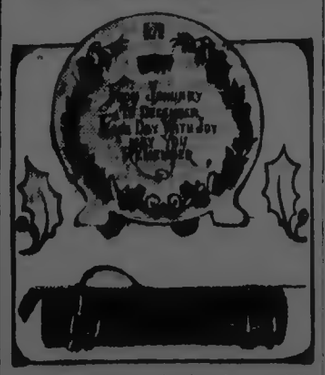
Gauze Bag Holding Puff Balls

Gauze bags, made to hold individual powder puff balls, are among the popular new fads that make lovely Christmas gifts. They are made of chiffon, silk muslin or gauze, gathered over a silk-covered embroidery hoop. Hangers of light satin ribbon are fastened at each side of the hoop with a rosette.

The balls, of absorbent cotton, are finished with tiny bows of baby ribbon matching the hangers in color. As soon as used they are thrown away.

Flowered silk muslin makes pretty bags, with ribbon hangers matching the flowers in color. The little bows are sewed to the balls. The bags hang at the side of the dressing case for the convenience of guests.

Calendar and Hatpin Holder



An attractive calendar for a girl's room and a hatpin holder are shown in the picture above. The hatpin holder is merely a small pasteboard tube covered with moire ribbon with tiny brass buckles, handle and straps of a narrow ribbon. It simulates a golf bag and a hatpin imitating a golf stick goes with it.

The calendar consists of a circular piece having two small feet on one edge, cut from a sheet of celluloid. Two small oblong openings, one longer than the other, are cut opposite the feet.

The face of the calendar is decorated with a painted holly wreath and gilt lettering within it.

Two smaller circles swing on a pivot back of the calendar's face, with the names of the months on one and numerals from 1 to 31 on the other. The tiny pivot is concealed by the lettering.

The calendar is supported like an easel by a strip fastened on at the back.

Man of Swift Promotions

The latest promotion of Sir David Beatty makes him Britain's youngest Vice-Admiral. He reached the highest rank but two in the navy at the early age of forty-four. He was captain at the age of twenty-nine; he passed over the heads of 395 lieutenants when he became a commander, and over the heads of 200 commanders when he became a captain.

FRENCH GAIN SKILL IN AIR FIGHTING

Tactics for Aerial Warfare Are Being Worked Out with Effective Precision

SERVICE HIGHLY ORGANIZED.

Wireless Outposts Enable Communication to be Kept Up 220 Miles from Station.

PARIS Now that France has developed an aerial force with battle planes, cruiser planes, scouts, and lesser aircraft, which the officers refer to as torpedo-planes, it has been necessary to organize this overhead service with the same exactness of details that armies and fleets are organized, with tactics and manoeuvres of advance and retreat, attack and defence. Unlike an army or fleet, which can move only in one direction, parallel with the surface of the earth or water, a fleet of airwarships can move in any direction—upward, downward, forward or backward, and at any oblique.

All of these tactics of the air are now being worked out with precision. Already the official reports refer almost daily to the manoeuvres of an "esquadrille," which is the French term for a squadron of air fighters, and soon there will be mention of the advance or recoil of the "right wing" or "left wing" of these squadrons, as the tactics provide for the same assembling of a number of "esquadrilles" into fleets which can be increased in size almost indefinitely. Wells, the English novelist, suggested the deadly effect of 1,000 aeroplanes hovering over Berlin and dropping bombs. The number and manoeuvre were at the time regarded as fantastic. But the organization of squadrons and fleets of battle-planes and cruisers brings this measurably within realization, and already one attack has been made with 65 aeroplanes, two with more than 60, and five with from 30 to 40 air fighters.

The "esquadrille," which is the unit of the aerial organization, at first consisted of six aeroplanes. But the rapid development of fighting types changed the organization so that the "esquadrille" is now made up practically as follows:

Six scout-aeros (avions d'observation)

Two armed cruiser-aeros with three-inch gun (avions de chasse)

One battle-plane with two three-inch guns and one mitrailleuse (avion de combat).

Nine lorries, nine trailers, nine portable canvas aero-sheds, three autos.

There is one lorry and trailer and one shed for each of the fighting craft, so as to transport it rapidly to any point and house it until needed. The autos are for the commanding officers and to follow up the fliers when possible. Gasoline, tools, supplies, etc., are carried on the lorries.

Officer Commands Each "Esquadrille."

The "esquadrille" thus made up is commanded by a commissioned officer of the army, who acts as pilot of the squadron. Commissioned officers also operate the fighting and cruising aeros, with expert non-commissioned officers and soldiers for the lesser craft. Including the soldiers on the lorries, trailers, etc., an "esquadrille" has a complement of upward of seventy officers and men, of which, however, only a dozen or so are actual fliers.

Rene Bernard, the newly designated Secretary of State for Aviation, has recently given opportunity for the inspection of the new types of air fighters. The battle plane and the cruiser-plane are the two main developments. Only partial description of these craft is permitted; nothing can be stated as to the number of planes of the monster battle plane. But it is permitted to indicate its power by saying that it has carried twelve men in its flights, and that it mounts on its huge outstretched wings two 3-inch cannon, one at either tip, with a rapid-fire mitrailleuse in the middle, just above the pilot. The recoil of the cannon does not jar the craft, owing to an automatic device.

The other type, cruiser aeros, mount one 3-inch cannon in the middle and just ahead of the pilot. These cruisers can mount almost straight up from the ground, at the rate of about 2,000 meters in two minutes, so that they can go straight up to an enemy as soon as he is observed, instead of mounting slowly on long curves as of old.

But France is not stopping with these new devices, and her engineers and constructors are inspired with the thought of a rich prize of 50,000 francs for a still further advance, which will realize 200 kilometres an hour with four motors, two pushing and two pulling.

All Are Directed from Paris.

The "esquadrille" or squadron is only the unit of organization, and it is in assembling them that the real fighting manoeuvres are accomplished. The directing head of the organization is here in Paris, connected with the Ministry of War. Here all the orders are given and the service regulated. The machines themselves are at aero parks scattered all over France. Here they are gathered in hundreds and given their final tests, before going to the fighting line.

But it is on the fighting line that the real manoeuvres begin. The aero parks for actual service are a short distance in rear of the fighting forces, each park at the front being made up of four "esquadrilles." So that, as each "esquadrille" has nine aeros of various forms, the four "esquadrilles" of each park comprise thirty-six aeros, including battle-planes, cruiser-planes and scout-planes. In turn, these parks back of the line are connected so that these equipment of thirty-six machines in each can be rapidly brought together for a concerted attack or defence. As these parks stretch from end to end of the long battle line, their number and aggregate of air craft must be very large. As stated, concentrations of sixty-five fighting craft have already been carried out, and much larger concentrations are in view.

The fighting tactics have developed a number of interesting phases. It is a strange fact that one of the most useful devices has resulted from the capture of an enemy aero. This brought to light a fine instrument of precision, made by a well-known optical firm of Berlin. The instrument records with exactness the moment and place when an aeroplane is precisely vertical above a given point on the ground below. That is, there is no trusting to the eye, and when the instrument shows the vertical point as, for example, an enemy battery below, a bomb dropped from the aeroplane is certain to hit that exact point. It is, in fact, an aerial range finder, showing the exact moment when a bomb will strike a given spot.

Smoke Telegraphy Gives Ranges.

Another strange device used in these battle tactics is a battery of twelve small glass bottles, set in a wire rack within easy reach of the operator. The latter flies over the enemy's lines, the purpose being to signal back to his own batteries how their shots are taking effect, thus giving them the exact range. The little glass bottles contain a liquid which explodes five seconds after the cork is drawn, emitting a little round puff of smoke, or a short trail of smoke. This is aerial telegraphing. The smoke-puffs are dots; the smoke trails are dashes. Thus the pilot talks back to the far-away battery, in dots and dashes of smoke, telling the watchers that their shots are too high, or too low, or too far to the left or right, and thus giving them the exact range.

Still another remarkable development in the French tactics is the use of wireless, by which aeroplanes are kept in communication over a radius of 220 miles with a central station. The aero wireless is a small and delicate set, with light antennae above and from tip to tip of the wings, the wire automatically winding up at the aero is unmounted. These are in actual use, and besides the new French machines the English and Russian machines are being similarly equipped, the demand from these three sources being greater than two large manufacturing companies can produce.

Besides the foregoing rapid development and organization in military aviation, there is a distinct branch of naval aviation, with a war ship of considerable tonnage set aside for this particular purpose, and aerodromes at one of the ports. This naval aviation looks after the coast points, the approach of hostile craft, and the aerial strategy of the sea as the army conducts the aerial strategy on land.

SERBS LOST STORED CROPS.

Government Must Feed Civilian Population as Well as Army.

MILAN Noe. Di Stefani Magrini, the special correspondent of the Secolo with the Serbian Army, says that, owing to the truce last summer between Serbia and Austria after the overwhelming winter defeat of the latter, many Serbian soldiers were spared to attend to the fields. Consequently there were good crops especially in the Morava Valley. In the Pozarevac and Stubatz regions was a vast quantity of grain when the Teutons started their new offensive, and all these harvests fell into the enemy's hands, being sent away to Austria and Germany. The Serbian authorities are now faced with the serious problem of feeding the civilian population and the army.

The correspondent sends another vivid description of conditions based on information of Serbians who reached Monastir from Nish.

"W. left Nish two days after the Government had departed," said one.

"At the railway station there was a great crowd of fugitives who had come from Pirot and Knjazevac. When a train arrived a scene of indescribable pain was witnessed. The crowd took the station by storm, and made a dash to obtain places on the train. Some travelled on the roofs of the carriages and others on the open trucks. Those who could not find places in the train started to march for Pristina. The roads were blocked with fugitives, whose sufferings increased hour by hour."

By pressing a button on the steering wheel a new automobile fender drops a rod carrying a sheet of canvas that serves as a pocket to pick up a person it struck.

KIDNEY DISEASE CURED
SWORN STATEMENT

Of Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Who Gratefully Gives All Credit to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

It is one thing to make big claims for a medicine and quite another thing to produce irrefutable evidence that it actually cures in serious cases.

We prefer to let the cured ones speak for themselves, and that is why you find in almost every newspaper the report of someone who has been cured by the use of Dr. Chase's medicines. To-day we present the sworn statement of Mr. Wesley Maxwell. When a man goes to this trouble in expressing his gratitude there can be no question of the benefit he has received. Mr. Wesley Maxwell, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "I have been using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must tell you that before I started using them I could only make water with the greatest difficulty, and had many severe pains in the back. I am completely cured now by the use of these pills. Before that I used a lot of doctors' medicine without any benefit that I could see. I am thankful for being cured, and can recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills very highly."

SWORN STATEMENT.

"This is to certify that I, Wesley Maxwell, of the Township of Caledon, was cured of kidney trouble by taking Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

"Wesley Maxwell."

(Sworn before me as correct this 6th day of January, 1915. — Wm. Hawkins, Sen. Justice of the Peace).

This statement is also endorsed by the Rev. Geo. W. Robinson, who is Mr. Maxwell's pastor.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S FRENCH DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

No style is more becoming to our little people than the French dress, with its very long waist and short, smart little skirt. It follows strictly natural lines and makes them attractive. In the frock shown in our illustration the bodice has the usual extra length. It is tucked on the shoulders in both front and back and closes in the centre of the back. The neck may be made round or cut out in a shallow square. The sleeves are to be either long or short.

The skirt of this dress has straight edges and is gathered at the top. The use of ruffles is a matter of choice and they may be omitted if desired.

These little frocks are seen at their best in sheer and semi-sheer materials. Organdie ranks first among these, and the ruffles are pretty when edged with a very narrow Valenciennes. If plain white organdie is used for the dress the ruffles may well be of lace, while for something more substantial we have numbers of pretty cotton voiles and ginghams which can be made up with lace or fine embroidery.

In one pretty model of this type the entire body was made of alternating stripes of lace and tucking. This can be made at home or bought already made, and it is among the daintiest of fabrics for a child's dress for state occasions, but far too perishable for general use.

The dress pattern, No. 7285, is cut in sizes 2, 4, 6 and 8 years. Medium size requires with ruffles 2¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 2¼ yards of sash ribbon.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

LOOK AT A CHILD'S TONGUE WHEN CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Take No Chance! Move Poisons From Live and Bowels at Once

Mothers can rest easily after giving "California Syrup of Figs," because in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile, and fermenting food gently moves out of the bowels, and you can have a well, playful child again. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, and they become tightly packed, liver gets sluggish and stomach disordered.

When cross, feverish, restless, see if tongue is coated, then give this delicious "fruit laxative." Children love it, and it can't cause injury. No difference what ails your little one—if full of cold, or a sore throat, diarrhoea, stomach-ache, bad breath, remember, a gentle "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," then look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." We make no smaller size. Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

MISTAKES MADE AT FIRST.

Wrong Sort of Appeal Was Made — Most Effective Argument Has Been the Invasion of Belgium.

DUBLIN Recruiting in Ireland has been placed upon a new basis. Hitherto the work has been entrusted to voluntary committees formed in each county, with a Central Recruiting Council for Ireland. The Lieutenant of a county, usually a peer, has been at the head of the work in his county. Meetings have been held in every part of Ireland, and much zeal has been displayed by the speakers at them, who have included representatives of all parties and creeds. The result has been, as announced by Major General Lovick Friend, the commander of the forces in Ireland, the enlistment of 81,000 men for the infantry.

As the percentage of rejections for unfitness has been as high as 50 per cent., the total number from Ireland who offered themselves for service in the army was about 160,000.

Ireland at the outbreak of the war had more than her proportion of men in the army and in the reserves, and this total has been described by the highest military authority in a public letter as "magnificent." There must be added to it also Ireland's recruitment for the navy, to which a substantial number of men have gone.

A fresh appeal has been made for more men. It will be necessary to fill up the wastage in the Irish divisions at the front. To keep them up to strength a recruitment of about 1,100 men a week is officially stated to be necessary, and unless the Irish divisions are to be filled up from Scottish and English drafts, that number will have to be found in Ireland.

No difficulty, however, is expected to arise in the matter. The rate of recruitment asked for now is less than that reached in the months of April and May last, and experience has taught the necessity for improved methods, which are counted upon to make the task easier. The existing organizations have been thanked for their services, which in that particular form are now at an end, and a new department for Irish recruiting has been established under the supreme headship of Lord Wimborne, the Lord Lieutenant. He has appointed as Chief Director Captain R. C. Kelly, an Irish soldier of distinction, and what is more to the purpose, an extremely keen business man, full of energy and tact. He came over here some months ago as the representative of David Lloyd George's Munitions Department. In that capacity he met the principal manufacturers and employers of labour in Ireland. He has put the munitions business in Ireland well on its feet and gained the approval and friendship of every section.

The choice of Captain Kelly as Director of Irish recruiting has been warmly welcomed by both the Unionist and Nationalist newspapers. He cannot employ the same methods in Ireland as Lord Derby is employing in England. There are no forms in Ireland from which lists of available men to be canvassed can be compiled. The Registration Act did not apply to Ireland. Some districts in Ulster came under it voluntarily, but even in those districts the filling up of the forms was made entirely optional, and there does not seem to be any intention to follow Lord Derby's methods on the basis of the forms filled up in those districts.

It is likely therefore, that the new methods of recruiting in Ireland will have to be based, like the old ones, on general appeals. They may easily prove more effective than in the past, for the voluntary organizations did not always temper their zeal with discretion. Districts predominantly of one political colour were addressed from platforms by men who agreed with them about no Irish matters, and many speakers showed their inability to realize the point of view of their audiences. The kind of patriotic appeal which moves an Englishman may leave an Irishman cold. The most effective appeals addressed to Irishmen have been based upon the invasion of Belgium. The torpedoing of the Lusitania was a powerful stimulus to recruiting, which was still further added to by the sinking of the Arabic.

Ireland was chilled by action on the part of military authorities such as that which refused to allow the Irish division to have its own colours. Even yet, though the Colonists and the Ulster Division have distinctive badges, the Irish divisions have not.

There is also a feeling that the exploits of Irish regiments at the front have not had all the publicity they deserved. Except for individual exploits such as that as gave O'Leary the Victoria Cross, they are felt to have a proportion of the official eye-witnesses.

Still when all is said, the response in Ireland, notwithstanding all difficulties, is regarded as excellent, and the avoidance of such errors as may have been made in the past, it is believed, will make easy what remains to be done.

Just One Application and the Hairs Vanish

(Toilet Talks.)

Any woman can keep her skin free from unsightly hair or fuzz if she will follow these simple instructions. When hairy growths appear apply a simple paste made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. Apply this to the hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a harmless treatment but be sure you get the real delatone.

ANNOYED BY THE VICAR

Refused to Have Bell Tolled for Dead Soldier.

The parishioners of the small Thames-side town of Walton are annoyed with their vicar, the Rev. W. Kemp Russell, because he refused to have the bell tolled either for the passing or the funeral of Corporal Thomas Walwith Phillips, of the Auckland Mounted Rifles, says the London Sketch.

Corporal Phillips died in Mount Felix Hospital from many wounds, and arrangements were made for his burial, with full military honours, in the parish cemetery. The service was conducted by the Wesleyan minister, the Rev. T. Price, at the Wesleyan church (the corporal was a Presbyterian), and the vicar of the parish was asked by the commanding officer of the hospital to have the bell tolled. The Wesleyan church had no bell, and the procession had to pass the parish church.

He flatly refused unless he were allowed to conduct the service, but arrangements had been made, and it was impossible to alter them. The vicar's action has aroused great resentment among the wounded New Zealanders in hospital.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys neutralize irritating acids

Kidney and bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter the acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation, and is very profuse again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Here you have a pleasant effervescent lithia water drink which quickly relieves bladder trouble.

HAS GREECE REFUSED ALLIES' DEMANDS?

There May Be Naval Warfare In Greek Waters

Allies May Send War Fleet If Greek King Refuses Demands

Are Prepared to Use Force If the Promises Essential to Safety of Their Forces Are Not Forthcoming---Kalkandelen Has Been Captured by the Serbian Forces---Enemy Admit Progress in Central Serbia is Slow But Credit Nature of Country For Failure to Advance Quickly.

A NEW ALLIED FRONT IN THE BALKANS

PARIS, Nov. 16.—Naval fighting—German and Austrian submarines against French and British cruisers—in Greek waters, is the distinct possibility of the very near future.

The Greek Government has refused the demand which the Allies insist on, as essential to their safety, that the Allies are prepared to use force to compel compliance with their wishes, and that the Central Powers absolutely will help King Constantine to resist, is admitted in diplomatic quarters to-day.

The Allies are determined, even if Greece will not help them in their Balkan campaign, that she shall at least give them an entirely free hand.

Constantine was asked to guarantee this. He has not done it. If it becomes necessary for the French and British to send a war fleet to Greece to ensure no interference with their Balkan plans, there is just one way that this ensurance can be made effective—by putting another than Constantine on the Greek throne.

The belief here is that nothing Germany can do can avail to prevent the final accomplishment of the Allies' Greek programme, even if it involves uncrowning Constantine.

The submarine, so far as French experts can see, is his only available weapon. The struggle, if it comes, is deemed certain to be a desperate one.

Hopes are entertained here that the Greek King will not dare to defy the Allies.

Pensys Coschin, of the French Cabinet, is in Athens to-day. It is said that British War Minister Lord Kitchener, now on the Island of Lemnos, will visit the Greek capital shortly. The two will see King Constantine.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Greek Government is reported to have modified its position somewhat in favour of the Entente Allies. The correspondent at Athens of the Exchange Telegraph Company says it has been decided that in the event of the Allies to Greek soil, Serbian troops will be placed on the same footing as the British and French.

Premier Skouludis originally proposed to permit the French and British to reach the sea without interference from the Greeks, but to disarm the Serbians who crossed the border. The change is due, the correspondent says, to formidable objections raised by the French Minister at Athens.

The Entente Powers are seeking guarantees from the Greek Government, because they have decided to establish an entirely new front in the Balkans, entailing the presence of a large number of troops, and desire that something more definite than mere promises of benevolent neutrality.

SALONIKA, Nov. 16.—After fighting with reinforced Bulgarian troops in Southern Serbia, the French were compelled to retire at two points in the vicinity of Gradisce, 12 miles north of the Greek border.

A Bulgarian attack along the Cerna River was repulsed with heavy losses to the attackers.

Two or three Bulgarian divisions were engaged, and a desperate attempt was made to pierce the French centre. The engagement was in progress with furious intensity for thirty-six hours, after which the Bulgarians were beaten back along this entire front.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 16.—Late reports have told of attacks on Englishmen in various parts of Persia, with some killings. Among such incidents were the following:

Bushire—Major Olipsant, Captain Banking, and an Indian soldier attached to British Consulate, killed by tribesmen.

Ispahan—Consul Grahame was wounded and escort killed while riding.

Shiraz—Consul and English bank manager imprisoned. Native Vice-Consul and servant killed and a clerk wounded.

BORDEAUX, France, Nov. 16.—The French liner Rochambeau arrived here to-day with Captain Juham still undecided concerning the cause of fire which broke in the vessel's hold off Halifax.

PARIS, Nov. 16.—The Serbians have recaptured Kalkandelen, taking 520 prisoners and large quantities of munitions.

The Bulgarians again have occupied Tetovo, which already has changed hands several times. No great significance is attached to the possession of this town since the forces engaged on either side are small.

BERLIN, Nov. 16.—Terrible natural difficulties, rather than the enemy's resistance, are making the Austro-German and Bulgarian progress slow in Central Serbia. The transport of big guns and supplies over mountains and across swamps and streams in an almost roadless country is admittedly taxing the invaders to the utmost.

The chief damage done by the Serbs to the Orient railroad, before it was wrested from them, was the dynamiting of most of the numerous tunnels, involving a huge amount of repair work.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Conscription is not yet necessary in England, Premier Asquith told the House of Common this afternoon.

He added that he hopes and believes it will not have to be resorted to at all.

NEPHEW OF MR. R. J. KIDD MEETS DEATH BY DROWNING

Mr. Archie Kidd, Son of Mr. Walter Kidd of Pondash, Meets Death While on a Hunting Expedition

BODY NOT RECOVERED

Mr R J Kidd of this city received word to-day that his nephew, Mr. Archie Kidd, was drowned on Saturday last in Ed's Lake, north of Apsley while on a hunting expedition in company with his brother, Walter Kidd, he paddled out into the lake, which was very rough at the time, in pursuit of a deer. The canoe capsized and both young men, who were excellent swimmers, started for an island not far away. The younger brother reached it in safety, but the older one went down. Although he was a splendid swimmer it is believed that owing to the intense coldness of the water he was unable to withstand its severity. Mr. Walter Kidd was four hours on the island before help came, during which time he suffered considerably from cold and exposure. The body of the unfortunate young man has not yet been recovered.

The late Archie Kidd was the son of Mr Walter Kidd of Pondash. For the past few years he had resided in the west, but came to his home this fall in order to enjoy the deer hunt. He was 28 years of age and was a bright, clever young fellow, whose untimely death will be deeply regretted by a host of friends.

THE WEATHER

With the ground frozen, the thermometer down to 30 degrees and snow flakes gently descending, it looked this morning as if winter were just around the corner. However, we should have some fine weather yet, although weather conditions after this date are not to be relied on. Snow has for some days covered the ground from Calgary to Kenora on the Rainy River district, and as the western section of the continent has an influence on the eastern section colder conditions are probable.

COUNCIL TO LOOK AFTER THE SOLDIERS BACK FROM FRONT

Matter Will Be Discussed at a Special Meeting to Be Held To-morrow Night---Monthly Reception For Soldiers ---Battalion Canteen is Opened at the Armouries--Signalling Officer is Here---To-day's Military News.

A special meeting of the City Council has been called for Wednesday evening when matters pertaining to the proposed purchase of the exhibition grounds will be discussed. The Council will also discuss ways and means of caring for returning soldiers. It is altogether likely that a committee will be appointed to deal with the matter. Among other things the committee will be asked to deal with is the question of providing positions for returning soldiers and otherwise assisting them. The Council may also decide to hold receptions once a month instead of giving each individual soldier a reception. This would simplify matters and would create a much larger measure of public interest than the present form of impromptu receptions which are held whenever a soldier returns. By holding them at fixed periods a greater number of returning heroes would participate.

His Worship Mayor Butler is anxious that every man be looked after and is prepared to redeem the pledge which he made to the boys of the first contingent upon their departure from Peterborough, when he said that the city would look after their dependents and assist the soldiers themselves upon their return to Peterborough.

The proposal may take the form of exemption from local taxation and a pension supplementing that provided by the Government for those incapacitated.

Lieut. E. D. Huycke of Peterborough, who is here recruiting for the 33rd Battery, will be found at the armouries at 11 a.m., 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. for the balance of the week to take on recruits. The 33rd Battery, which is known around Kingston as the Peterborough battery, is largely composed of Peterborough men, five officers and the rank and file having already been contributed by the 24th Field Battery. Lieut. Huycke will undoubtedly be as successful in his efforts as were Lieut. G. M. Huycke and Lieut. Hamilton, as the artillery seems a very popular branch of the service.

Half a dozen Peterborough chauffeurs have signified their intention of joining the mechanical transport section of the British army in response to the appeal from the Imperial authorities for 3,000 motor car drivers from Canada. When the word was received at the local recruiting office, the recruiting staff were turned loose and had little difficulty in securing half a dozen drivers. It is expected that the Canadian drivers will be mobilized at Montreal, although Lieut. Hills is awaiting further instructions as to the local men who are anxious to do their bit overseas.

*There is a fine opportunity for Peter*borough young men who want to join the signalling corps to get in line at once. Lieut. Gillham, the signalling officer of the 93rd Battalion reported for duty this morning and is anxious to get the signalling corps under way as soon as possible. It is one of the most fascinating branches of the service and it is expected that many local young men will be anxious to join. They are advised to apply at once. Most of the 57th Regiment signallers are now on active service.

Mrs. Bartlett, Murray street, whose son, Pte. Claude Bartlett is in France with the Canadian Remount Depot, has received a very interesting copy of a French paper, "L'Excelsior," which prints a number of photographs of the Canadian remounts. Pte. Bartlett can be seen in one of them engaged in a wrestling match with a comrade. He was a member of the wrestling class at the Y.M.C.A. before enlisting.

Corp. Fred Collins, an old Peterborough boy and son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Collins, Melbourne street, was in town on a short visit to his home to-day. His regiment, the 9th Canadian Mounted Rifles, Western Canada, who have been training at Bowell Camp, is on its way to England, and Corp. Collins took advantage of the chance to say good-bye. Before enlisting he was with the Hudson Bay Company.

A member of The Examiner Staff has received a most interesting letter from Mr. Chas. H. Hastings, who until the war broke out was a member of the editorial staff of this paper. Mr. Hastings went to British Columbia with the Cobourg Heavy Battery, and when that unit returned east went to England, where he was appointed as a stenographer to Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian representative at the front. In his letter he says he has been in the trenches, although not as a fighter. His longest visit was for two hours. "Funny enough," he writes, "it was in a Peterborough trench. There I met Sergt. Griffin and a fellow whose name I forgot who worked in the Bank of Ottawa."

"I see by a Toronto paper," remarks the former Examiner man, "that Capt. Charlie Ackerman is home. If you see him you might ask him if he remembers being introduced to Sir Max Aitken by Major Guthrie on the road leading from Vlamertinghe to Bruelen."

Mr. Hastings mentioned seeing Sergt. R.A.W. Hay, of the 20th Battery, Peterborough, during a visit to London. Sergt. Hay is on duty in the Canadian Record Office, London.

The announcement that the 40th Battalion was to be recruited in Victoria and Haliburton, with headquarters at Lindsay, is being carried out on the usual Lindsay lines. The Kawartha Standard announces that the machine gun section of the 40th is being recruited in Kingston, and that Lieut.-Col. Fee intends to make an effort to get as many recruits as possible in that place. Last winter Lindsay got her recruits in Toronto.

Corp. John Playford asks the Examiner to make it clear that he was not discharged from the British Army as medically unfit, but got his discharge because his term with the Army Service Corps was already over the re-engagement limit. He has had a wide experience in the Army Service Corps.

COL. MILLS GIVES LIST

The Examiner has received the following interesting letter from Lt.-Col. Jos. Mills of the 2nd Battalion, and slated to command the 93rd Peterborough Battalion.

Flanders, Oct. 28, 1915.

To the Examiner,

Sir,—On behalf of the N.C.O's and men of the 57th detachment now serving at the front, we wish most heartily to thank the girls and boys of the schools who sent out chocolate and gum. It is surprising how much the men appreciate these things, who would not probably think of them at home, but the very fact of their being from home makes us all very grateful indeed. We also desire to thank the girls of the Collegiate Institute for sending "News from Home," which must entail a great amount of time and labour to must also be answering the letters these young men write in reply. We are having our second winter of mud and rain which promises to equal Salisbury Plain. We had a nice day overhead when the King was through our lines, but the roads were awful. It's very hard to keep the feet dry and warm under such conditions, but the men are comfortable clothed. In addition to the regular uniform and great coat is added a long rain proof cape, a Canadian jacket and a short fur coat made of grey goat skin, gloves and sleeping helmets. Then in addition to this he has to carry two gas helmets, his first-aid bandage, iron rations, extra pair of socks, entrenching tool, tooled articles, rifle, bayonet, ammunition pack, sack and haversack, blanket and rubber sheet. So you see a soldier has some load to carry. I am enclosing a list of our men from Peterborough, and what there are doing, and as you will see we are greatly reduced in number. As the writer may not be very much longer with the 2nd Battalion, I would suggest that future parcels be sent to the C.O. of No. 1 Major Vesey, or to Sergt. Ackerman No. 1 Co. who will have them distributed.

Sincerely,
J. Mills, Major.

GERMANS IN A SERIOUS CONDITION IN NORTH EAST

All Available Accounts Agree That the Russians Are Pushing a Strong Offensive and Enemy is Falling Back

BERLIN IS SILENT

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 16.—Germany's silence concerning the developments on its northern front in the Riga and Dvinsk regions, in the face of Russian claims of important gains, led to the opinion here to-day that Marshall Von Hindenburg faces a decidedly serious situation.

All available accounts agree that the Russians are pushing a strong offensive and that the Germans are slowly falling back.

The best judgment here is that Hindenburg's forces have been depleted by the withdrawals of men to other fighting zones.

THE FUNERAL OF SIR CHARLES TUPPER

Special to The Examiner.

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 16.—The funeral of Sir Charles Tupper, with all the honors of a state funeral, was held this afternoon from the Cathedral of St. John, today after the remains had been removed during the night from Halifax to St. Paul's Anglican church, where a solemn service was held. The period of lying in state ended this morning, and from two to twelve hours that the body was on view more than ten thousand people passed before it to look at the face of the great statesman, lying in a plain oak casket, shrouded in the Union Jack.

NO WORD OF ELOPING COUPLE

Cavan Township Woman is Said to Have Eloped With Orillia Man

LINDSAY, Nov. 16.—A despatch from Montreal was received by the officials that the police of that city were asked to locate an eloping couple from Lindsay.

It appears, however, from information obtained that the woman in the case hails from Cavan township, while the man with whom she is supposed to have eloped, is a resident of Orillia.

The woman's husband was in Lindsay on Friday and asked Constable Woods to notify the Hamilton police. He got a letter from his erring wife on Friday and she was then registered at the Westworth Arms Hotel, Hamilton.

Constable Woods was furnished with a description of the pair but it is understood that the police can take no action in the matter.

A LESSON IN DUTY.

Critics may pin-prick Winston Churchill, but they cannot forget he has a double share of courage—the courage of his convictions, and the courage of duty. He has with all the vagaries of conduct attributed to him always been outspoken, and no matter what the cost, has always done his duty to the Empire as he saw it, whether in South Africa, or in the Cabinet; and now he has set a new example of his devotion to her interests. He prefers to wear out or be shot out, rather than rust out in a sinecure cabinet position. In this position his work was light and his pay good. Though he was by the fortune of policy degraded from a higher cabinet position, he did not pout or sulk. He was made of better stuff than a whimperer. He has joined the fighting line in France, and will fight as bravely as his great ancestor, the first Churchill, the great Duke of Marlborough. This is a lesson to the smoking-room critics; a hint to them to go and do likewise. It is also a lesson to many of our young men, who are slow to face the responsibility of enlisting. They see others doing their duty in this respect, and if they are sound in heart as they are "sound in wind and limb," they can't stay home in idle comfort, while their friends, their comrades in private life, are wearing the King's colours.

THE GREAT EYE-OPENER.

This war is in many respects the great eye-opener—it shows some of us where we should stand, and helps bring us in line. Even the Kaiser, the cause of the trouble, is getting his eyes open, and no doubt now sees what a mess he has made of his empire; what ruin he has brought to his empire and his people. If we could get into the recesses of his wicked heart, we should probably notice that he sees with his mind's eye, impending defeat and ruin of his mad schemes. The Kaiser is not the only one by many millions, who have had a new point of view set up by the war and its demands upon our responsibilities. We have a convert "in our midst." Hon. Mr. Blondin is a member of the Government, and as member of a government which is striving in its best way to help the country and the Empire to wage war, he should conform to the official company he keeps. He spoke at Grand Mere, Quebec, and in the course of this made, for him, this remarkable declaration:

> "In any case, those who, during constitutional disputes, have not feared to do violence to the British flag have loved and respected it all the more and have manifested their respect and devotion in the face of the stranger."

These be brave words, coming from a man who not long ago made the statement that the French Canadians owed little gratitude to Great Britain; for they had to "shoot holes through the flag to breathe the air of liberty." It is a good thing that Hon. Mr. Blondin has seen new light. With such a declaration as the latter, with such treasonable utterances unrecanted, he had no place in a loyal Canadian Cabinet—as an adviser of the King in the course of government action taken to defend the flag he held in such ill favour. His declaration made at Grand Mere amounts to a recantation. A prominent disciple of Henri Bourassa, has set an example of deference to loyal opinion in Canada that might well be followed by other Nationalists members of the Cabinet. We may even expect Bourassa to yet see the error of his ways, and possibly became, as his great abilities fit him to be, an important factor in our public life. This war is the melting pot where many undesirable things, many false ambitions, many mistaken courses, are fused into a national amalgam, of use and benefit to the country and the world.

SEPARATORS AND CREAM.

It has been noticed by patrons of cream gathering creameries that variations occur in the percentage of fat as revealed by the test of cream. A bulletin of the Dominion Dairy Department, gives the result of tests to explain the causes of these variations; and the result has been to show that the variations in the "richness" of separated cream are chiefly due to irregularities in the running of the cream separator. The bulletin states this one reason in this way:

"In nearly all separators the proportion of cream is regulated by what is termed a 'cream screw.' When this screw or plug is turned towards the centre of the bowl, it contracts the cream line and gives a richer or higher testing cream. Turning it outward widens the cream line and, therefore, allows a larger proportion of the skim-milk to pass out with the fat, and thus gives a thinner or lower testing cream.

This is satisfactory as far as it goes, but, it does not explain why there is not a similar variation in the price of cream to correspond with the variation of cream quality. There are, however, other causes to account for variation in the richness of cream than "putting on the screws." In addition to irregularities in the way of operating the separator, the quality of cream is influenced by the variation of percentage of the fat in the milk treated, and this percentage itself varies from day to day in the milk of the same cow, or of the same herd; the temperature of the milk, a high temperature, tending to produce better cream; variation in the speed of the separator; and the experimenter thinks that the variation in speed of the separator, is more than any other cause responsible for variations in the quality of cream. But most of the people are not concerned with the separation of cream from milk; what rather appeals to them is the retention of the cream in the milk, which is all that the average citizen can afford. A milk man's life is not altogether a happy one. There are so many conditions that enter in to the attempt to please his customers and give them honest service, that he would be more than man if he met them all. There is the caprice of the customer, generally in the direction of exacting impossibilities; there is the variation in the quality of milk from imperceptible changes in feeding, etc.; and various other flies in the ointment. Then some milkmen are careless, and some perhaps dishonest — milk-and-water moralists; but on the whole the milkmen of Peterborough are a pretty straight lot, and if we reverse the usual process of judgment and judge them as a whole by the best—the majority—instead of judging them by the possible few worst, we shall have no reason to seriously complain. Milkment as a class are no worse in spite of the "kickers" than any other class of merchants or business men; and if it came to a "show down" there are many trades callings and professions which might come out second best.

SOMETHING OF A CRAWLER

What is a Quebec Nationalist, my son? Why, a hybrid Canadian, who expects his neighbor to defend him, while he himself crawls under the barn.—Hamilton Spectator.

PATRIOTIC PRINTERS.

The Typographical Union in Calgary has a record in the war hard to beat. Of 120 members 29 have already gone or enlisted for the front. This is 25 per cent. Those members who have not enlisted are paying insurance premiums for those who have, in addition to contributions made to different patriotic funds.—Toronto Star.

BRITANNIA RULES THE WAVES.

Those who discuss the part that Britain is taking in the war should not forget that what is at once essential to the preparation for war, and one of the great factors which assures the victory of the allies, is this: The British fleet is absolutely mistress of the seas.—Le Canada.

THE MILK IN THE COCOANUT

Great Britain has no right to interfere with United States trade with Holland, or Denmark, or Sweden or Norway; but she has the right to prevent trade in contraband betwegn Germany and the United States through those countries. That right without doubt Great Britain will retain and will exercise until the close of the war.—Winnipeg Free Press.

LEST WE FORGET!

As long as the world lasts and there is any good in human nature, the name of Edith Cavell will be one of the greatest heroines of all nations. What are we to think of the military caste and the Government ruled by that caste which can do such things? The forces of evil have been yoked up by this caste in the State chariot of Germany, and they are prepared to drag it like a juggernaut car over the liberties—I say it deliberately—not only of Europe, but of the world. The sacred cause in which we have to fight is whether a Power which has cast aside faith, honour, and truth, mercy, and pity is to dominate the world.—Earl Selborne.

MR. JOHN REDMOND'S REMARKS REGARDING IRISH RECRUITING

A correspondent who is fearful of the cabled reports about the refusal of the Cunarders to carry Irishmen, afraid of possible conscription, to the United States should lead to popular misapprehension as to the part which Ireland is playing in this war sends a report of John Redmond's speech at Dublin last month, with a request for its publication. There is no ground for fear that the action of the slackers, to which attention has been drawn, will result in any depreciation of the part which Ireland is playing in this crisis of the Empire; there are English slackers, too, in plenty. Mr. Redmond's speech is, however, well worth reading; and we gladly reproduce a portion of it:

Mr. Redmond said that the action of Ireland in this matter of men had been not only magnificent, but when they remembered the past, marvellous. In addition to some 30,000 reservists—and these were official figures—who were called up to the colours from Ireland when the war began, and in addition to some 20,000 Irishmen from Ireland who were in the army at the time the war began, Ireland had sent 91,466 recruits since the war broke out. The city of Dublin had sent 14,157. Of these 91,408 recruits, 44,000 were Catholics and 36,719 were Protestants. To-day, taking the number of men in the army at the commencement of the war, the reservists, who were called up, and the recruits who had since joined, there were in the army now from Ireland 132,454 men, and of that great total 79,511 were Catholics and 52,945 were Protestants. He made inquiries in every direction, and from these he had come to the conclusion—of course, this was not an official figure—that at least 80,000 more men were rejected by the military authorities.

"A Great Tragedy."

At first the standard was high and they were very particular in accepting men. In many places that he knew two out of three recruits were rejected by the authorities; and if they took that figure of 80,000 as approximately correct, then they would find the extraordinary fact that, in addition to the reservists and old soldiers, 160,000 men had, since the war, volunteered for the British Army in Ireland. Truly, indeed, might Lord Kitchener say that Ireland's action was magnificent.

There was no need for him (Mr. Redmond) to say anything about the gallantry of their countrymen in the field. This war was for Ireland a great tragedy as it was for every nation in Europe — a tragedy in which the guilty had not suffered as much as the innovent. But in that tragedy there was one small consolation, at any rate, and that was the sense of pride that those families who had sons at the front must feel that this great sacrifice had been made in support of the cause of liberty and justice, and in support of the cause of Ireland and Ireland's freedom.

Carson's Army.

They owed these men a duty. Ireland had sent these men to the front, and Ireland should stand by them. It would be a deep dishonour to their country, it would be a base betrayal of brave men if they, having sent them into danger, refused to support them, and allowed them, their sons and brothers and kinsmen whom they had sent into danger, to look for aid and support in their extremity, not to their own race, but to Englishmen, Scotsmen and Welshmen. They, therefore, were bound in honour and in duty to send to these gallant men the necessary reserves. This they were going to do, and this they would do.

A Voice—What about Carson's Army?

Mr. Redmond—Pray, do not introduce those topics. But I will answer that question.

Carson's army is at the front at the present moment. I am certain they will acquit themselves like brave Irishmen, and my only hope is that they may find themselves fighting shoulder to shoulder with their Nationalist and Catholic fellow countrymen.

"In conclusion," said Mr. Redmond, "I have to say to you that in spite of the uncertainties and dangers and horrors which surround us at this moment, I personally am as confident of the future as I have been at any time for the last three or four years; because our cause is just, our people are in earnest; they are trained politicians, sane and rational men and they will follow no will-o'-the wisp. For three reasons I am confident that Ireland's freedom and Ireland's prosperity will emerge triumphant from the ordeal of this war."

Irishmen, both Nationalist and Ulsterite, are doing their duty and fighting side by side in the trenches for the cause of liberty; and they will come out of the war with a respect for each other which should make easy the adjustment of the Irish question.

A LATE ARRIVAL.

It is rather a pity the American "champion of neutrals" didn't appear in the lists sooner. Belgium was a neutral.—Montreal Star.

DEMOCRACY AT STAKE.

This the hour when democracy is being weighed in the balance, not in this land only, but in every land. There can only be one victory in the struggle. It will not be France or Germany, England or Russia. It will be the victory of a principle that will run through all the nations, those that lose as well as those that win. It will be the victory of despotism or the victory of freedom, of the governance of the sword or of the governance of the spirit over the whole theatre of human life.—London Daily News.

IS HOLLAND TO BE INVADED?

German activities in Holland, as reported in to-day's cables, have a sinister appearance. Large numbers of German merchants are now at work buying all kinds of commodities which are absolutely prohibited from exportation by the Dutch Government. Particularly large quantities of foodstuffs are being bought. All the goods are being stored in Dutch warehouses, awaiting—what? The Dutch have a comforting explanation. The Germans must be expecting peace, or an armistice, "during which the export problems might temporarily be removed."—Montreal Herald.

STEADILY STRANGLING.

Premier Asquith said the other day that one of the things the British nation must have in the present crisis is a proper perspective. The trouble with those who are whimpering now, and who are crying that we are going to be defeated, is that they lack this proper perspective. Nothing is truer of the present situation than that which Right Hon. C. F. G. Masterman says in a recent article in The London Chronicle: "The observer who wishes the truth should keep his attention rather on casualties than on territories. Germany can be destroyed equally in the heart of Russia, beyond Belgrade, or within the boundaries of France. So long as the daily toll of death and wounds goes on, so long we are every day nearer the inevitable end."—Ottawa Free Press.

ROMANCE IS NOT YET DEAD.

Barrie's Leonora was "one of those round whom legends grow even in their lifetime." Private Johnnie Poe of the British army, slain in battle in northern France, was another such. The papers said he was forty, but we never can picture him as more than twenty-five. Figures must lie when they make out that Johnnie last played in Princeton's back field nearly twenty years ago. Johnnie Poe, as a hero should, shed his years, just as polished marble sheds the rain, and wasn't a day older when he took the King's shilling than back in '98 when he marched away under the Stars and Stripes to help drive the Spaniards out of Cuba. We haven't heard yet what he did in Flanders on the western front; will it be worth comparing with his exploit in Amalpa Harbour, where, as a captain in the army of Honduras, he opened fire on a Nicaraguan gunboat and bluffed it out of the harbour? Or with the time he was marooned in an open boat "to perish on the broad Atlantic"? That time a warship sighted the nearly exhausted soldier of fortune, and the captain called to him: "We can't bother with your baggage." There was a splash—a tiny one; then Poe was hoisted on board. "What did you throw over?" the captain asked. "My baggage," said Johnnie; "I only had a toothbrush." Legend, perhaps, but characteristic. In an earlier generation Poe would have been a frontiersman, with a long rifle and a coon cap, like Daniel Boone in the school histories and the unpictured forefathers of Abraham Lincoln. Born too late for that, Poe made new frontiers of his own, being a true musketeer, a D'Artagnan, but unboastful. According to Thoreau, "the mass of men live lives of quiet desperation." Johnnie Poe's life was something not so drab.—Collier's Weekly.

FRESH AIR HABIT.

There is nothing better for general good health than a reasonable amount of exercise and good fresh air. We are coming to understand the value of fresh air much better than heretofore. The time was when text books in physiology used in many public schools taught that sufficient ventilation for a sleeping room was provided by a single window opened one inch for each person. Now children are taught to sleep with windows wide open, even in cold climates, while office and factory workers demand ventilation which will afford them a reasonable amount of fresh air. A few weeks ago fresh air coaches were inaugurated on the elevated trains in Chicago in answer to a protest against the closed, close and stuffy cars which were in general service. It is said these wide open cars are popular with a good many people, who bundle up well and breathe better air.

There are very many people, however, who are afraid of fresh air, especially if it is cold. They are fussy about the least current of air and live in terror of drafts. They scowl unmistakenly if some of their fellow workers have left a window open so there is a current of fresh and invigorating air. Always afraid of catching cold from fresh air, they are the ones who suffer most from colds, oblivious of the fact that unventilated rooms, stores and shops are breeding places for colds, as the vicious air inflames sensitive nasal passages. Despite all this, it is too often true that a room must be heated to a high temperature which suits the chilliest and thinnest blooded person in it.

Very many school teachers, finding their children sluggish and unresponsive, open wide the windows and declare a recess, with the result that the youngsters brighten up in a remarkable degree. Possibly this same method might be adopted with profit by some business houses so as to wake up their clerks.—Rochester Times.

Electricity is generated by a windmill so successfully at a German technical school that it is estimated that a similar plant could supply light and water for 100 persons at a cost of $125 a year.

HOLSTEIN COWS' MILK NEARLY PERFECT FOOD

Hamilton Expert Talks Interestingly on Dairying Before Breeders' Association

JAMESTOWN, Nov. 13—"I do not believe in little things. I do believe in big things. The Holstein cow is a big thing, and I am glad to say a word in her interest, little as she needs it." This was the introductory statement made by A. A. Hartshorn of Hamilton, N. Y., to the members of the S.W.N.Y. Breeders' association at their meeting here. Mr. Hartshorn is a former president of the Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

The address which President Hartshorn gave was one of more than ordinary interest, as the members of the association who listened to him, nearly 200 in number, knew that every word he spoke came from ripe personal experience.

"The Holstein cow is the foster mother of the race," said Mr. Hartshorn. "Holstein milk is the most nearly perfect human food. I kept Jerseys for some years, and I found that the calves of my best Jersey heifers died when fed on their own mothers' milk. If I wanted to raise them I had to get some other kind of milk. How can we think the tender infants of the human race can thrive on milk from cows who can not raise their own offspring on the product?"

"The expensive element to produce in milk is the butterfat. In terms of food it is a by-product. The essential elements of human food, necessary to sustain life, remain in milk after the cream is taken out, or are in the milk equally of the Holstein cow or the Jersey cow, irrespective of the butter fat. Besides that the milk of the big-bodied, full-chested, large-lunged, big digestive apparatus Holstein cow is a milk of greater vitality and more vigor than the milk of any smaller or tenderer breed."

"The Holstein cow is the cornerstone of the prosperity of the dairy farmers of the state of New York. This cow is the animal of large production, and large profits. It is the cow which can best pay off the mortgages, and pay for our farms."

Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

MOTHER SHIPTON'S PROPHECY

(London, England, Year 1448)

A house of glass shall come to pass
In England, but alas!
War will follow with the work
In the land of the Pagan and Turk;
And State and State in fierce strife
Will seek each other's life.
But when the North shall divide the South
An Eagle shall build in the Lion's Mouth.
Carriages without horses shall go.
And accidents will fill the world with woe.
Primrose Hill in London shall be,
And in its centre a Bishop's See;
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye.
Water shall yet wonders do.
Now, strange, shall yet be true;
The world upside down shall be,
And gold found at the root of a tree;
Trough hills man shall ride,
And no horse or ass be by his side;
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, shall talk;
In the air men shall be seen,
In white, in black, in green.
Iron in the water shall float,
As easy as a wooden boat.
Gold shall be found, and found
In a land that's not now known.
Fire and water shall more wonders do,
England shall at last admit a Jew;
The Jew that was held in scorn
Shall of a Christian be born.
Three times three shall lovely France
Be led to dance a bloody dance
Before her people shall be free.
Three tyrant rulers shall she see;
Three times the people rule along,
Three times the people's hope is gone;
Three rulers in succession see,
Each springing from a different dynasty.
Then shall the worser fight be done,
England and France shall be as one

One-time Proprietor Won Honours on the Firing Line

Enlisted as a Private, But Gained a Lieutenancy and Croix de Guerre for Service in the Trenches

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—One uncertainty that has prevailed in Times Square and among those who affect that locality when the lights are on may now be banished. Jules has been located. He is not dead, as word from the front has made it appear more than once since Jules rushed off soon after the breaking out of hostilities to fight for France. On the contrary, he is very much alive and well, and he wears the shoulder strap of a lieutenant and the Croix de Guerre, the French military medal which some have preferred to the decoration of the Legion of Honor.

A New York man, who is very well known about town, and who has just returned from a business tour of England, Italy and France, brings the news of Jules, whom everybody has known who has known the night life of Times Square. When he was a clerk in the Carlton Hotel in London he had the name of Ansaldi. Some years ago, upon the advice of an American friend, Jules came to the United States and got a job in a Philadelphia hotel. He had not been here long when he found that the best way for a European to make money in the hotel business over here was to forget his family name and take up a tray. So M. Ansaldi boarded a train for New York and landed here as mere 'Jules.' In brief time he had blossomed out as one of the best known figures in the Broadway restaurant business, and when the magnificent gloom of the big eating and dancing palace just below Forty-second Street, in Broadway, now no more, appeared in the final phase as the Cafe de Paris Jules became its head waiter. Then when the modern dance craze approached its zenith Jules went into partnership with the Castles and opened the Sans Souci, next door, and shared in the vast sum harvested Winter before last by that underground temple of tango and trot. It was said of Jules that he was one of the few restaurant managers who could ask a patron $7.50 for a bottle of ordinary champagne and get away with it.

First to the War.

Jules was one of the first of his countrymen over here to heed the call of France, and he sailed away on the very first French liner that left New York after the outbreak of hostilities. Since then word has come back several times as to his death and the manner of his taking-off. The news from Jules, the first authentic information of him that has come since he left for the front, has been brought by the New York traveler just returned.

"I was at the Cafe de Paris (in Paris) for luncheon one day not long ago," he said yesterday, "and found the place crowded with men in uniform. Englishmen, Belgians, and French officers on leave made up most of the patronage of the place that was not feminine. Most of them were in uniform. Something about the appearance of a man at the next table to mine attracted my attention, and he sat with several other officers. I saw that he apparently recognized me, but for the life of me I could not place him. Finally he turned squarely around.

"'Why Mr. Blank, don't you know me?' he asked. And then, upon my appearing puzzle, he said: 'Why, I am Jules—Jules of the old Cafe de Paris and the Sans Souci, in New York.'

"I don't think I should ever have recognized him, he had got so big, so tanned, and so fine looking. He wore the uniform of a Second Lieutenant in the Chasseurs a Cheval, and the numeral on his collar indicated that he belonged to the Eighteenth Regiment of that arm of the service. Upon the breast of this smart cavalryman was the War Medal.

"'This is the first leave of absence I have had in the year I have been over here,' he told me, 'and you are the very first of my old patrons I have seen since I left New York.

Enlisted as a Private.

"'When the war began I was 41 and too old to be called, so I came back to France and volunteered my services. I enlisted as a private in my old cavalry regiment and saw service all through the early part of the war and the flanking movement, that drove the Germans back from Paris. After our experiences in the neighborhood of Ostend, where it developed that cavalry was of no avail, our regiment was dismounted and we served in the trenches.'

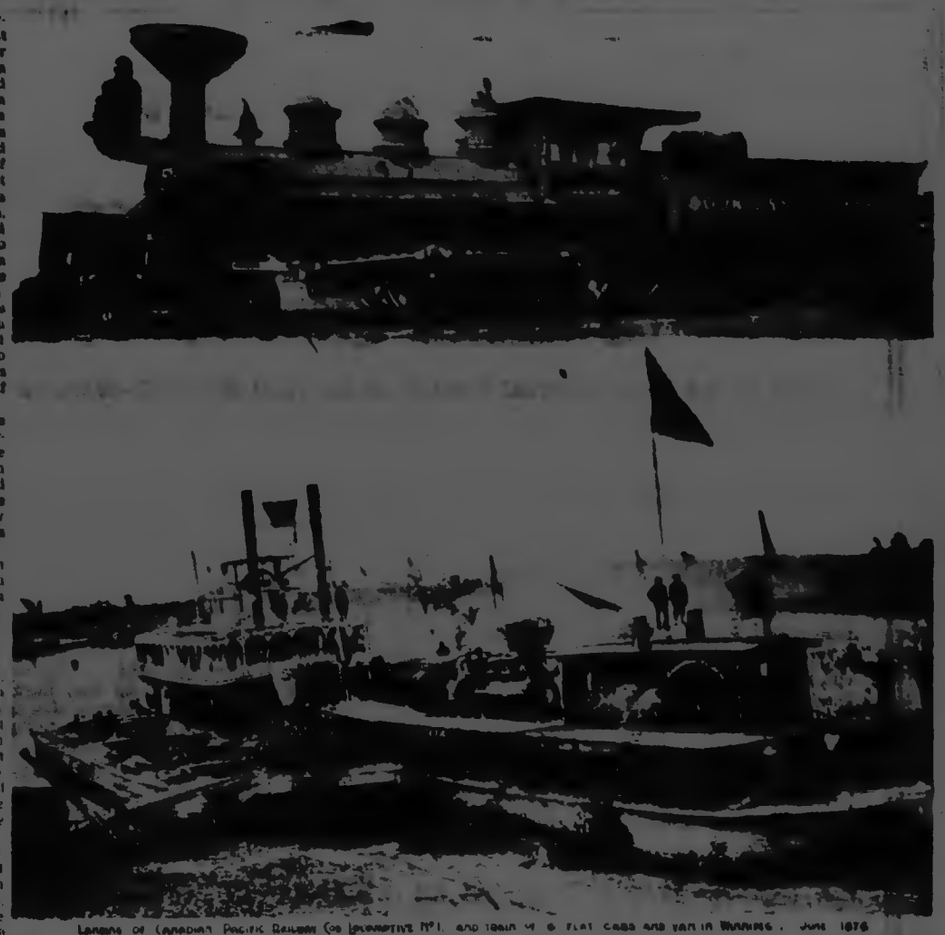
"Jules was so excited over meeting me and hearing about New York that he couldn't eat. He said his furlough was for only seven days. He had just returned from visiting his mother in the south of France, and was on his way back to join his regiment, which was then in the Vosges. He invited me to come and spend a couple of days in the trenches with him, but the military authorities prevented me from acting upon his invitation.

"I asked Jules how he had won his war medal, but he blushed, and would not tell me. I gathered that it was for some important piece of reconnoitring he had done behind the German lines. He was full of praise for the magnificent spirit of the French soldiers. I asked him if he intended returning to the restaurant business after the war. He pondered for a time.

"'I am afraid not,' he finally replied."

MANITOBA'S FIRST LOCOMOTIVE

On the 9th day of October, thirty-eight years ago, the first blast of a locomotive whistle ever heard in Winnipeg foreboded the doom of Red River cart trains, flatboats and steamboats in transportation between Manitoba and Minnesota. Of the iron horses, which on that day blew its challenging blast to Indian pony and settler's steer alike, two pictures of which are here reproduced, the first being of its arrival at Winnipeg before being hitched up, and the other when, after the third of a century of good service, it was unharnessed and put to pasture, and to rest as a souvenir in the pretty little park in front of the Canadian Pacific's Winnipeg station. There it stands, embowered in flowers in summer, and housed under glass in winter, to greet the curious eyes of passengers who have been borne to the city by the modern mighty Moguls which have followed in the path of this time-honored pioneer.



LANDING OF CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY (NO. LOCOMOTIVE No. 1, AND TRAIN OF 6 FLAT CARS AND VAN IN WARING, JUNE 1876

On each of its fore "shoulders" are the maker's plates, bearing in a circle the lettering "Baldwin Locomotive Works, Phila." and within the circle in three horizontal lines, "1873, M. Baird & Co., No. 3660." On each side of the cab, "C. P. R. No. 1," appear in yellow and similarly on the tender "Countess of Dufferin."

The engine was so named by Joseph Whitehead in token of its having been inspected by the Countess of Dufferin in the fall of 1877, when she accompanied her famous lord, then governor general, on a visit to the northwest. Prior to its purchase from the North ern Pacific Railway, by Mr. Whitehead, it ran between Brainard and Jim Town, and was known as number 58 according to Joseph Fahey. And it was always known during construction by the name of the Countess, until it was turned over to the operating department, and had the distinction of becoming the number one of the long series which has followed it on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

While the Countess enjoys precedence as the first engine to arrive at Winnipeg, as it was not landed in Winnipeg, but on the St. Boniface side, to work on the construction of the Pembina Branch, the honor of being the first locomotive to steam into Winnipeg fell to the "John Haggart," which came across the Red River on rails laid on the ice in December, 1879, to be employed on the contract of John Ryan & Co., for the construction of the first 100 miles of the C. P. R. west of Red River. This latter item was also kindly given by Mr. Fahey, and affords another example of the number of Irish names so long connected with that great railway.

The steamer Selkirk arrived at Pembina with three barges, having on board a locomotive and tender, a caboose and six platform cars, in charge of Mr. Joseph Whitehead, contractor on the C. P. R. The pioneer locomotive was hailed by the settlers with the wildest excitement and greatest enthusiasm, especially as Mr. Whitehead had steam up on his engine, and notified the inhabitants that the iron horse was coming by the most frantic shrieks and snortings. On passing Fort Pembina, the flotilla was saluted by the guns of the (U. S.) artillery, and upon arrival at Pembina it was met by Captain McNaught, commanding at Fort Pembina, and his officers, Hon. J. Frankenfeld, N. H. Nelson and his associates in the U. S. customs, and the population en masse. The flotilla was handsomely decorated with flags and bunting, proud of the high distinction of carrying the first locomotive destined to create a new era for travel and traffic in the great northwest.

According to the "Manitoba Free Press" of Oct. 9, 1877. "At an early hour this morning, wild, unearthly shrieks from the river announced the coming of the steamer Selkirk, with the first locomotive ever brought into Manitoba; and about 8 o'clock the boat steamed past the Assiniboine. A large crowd of people collected upon the river banks, and, as the steamer swept past the city, mill whistles blew furiously, and bells rang out to welcome the iron horse. By this time the course had assembled at No. 6 warehouse (at foot of Lombard Street) where the boat landed, and in the crowd were to be noticed people of many different nationalities represented in the prairie province.

"The Selkirk was handsomely decorated for the occasion with Union Jacks, Stars and Stripes, banners with the familiar 'C. P. R.,' and her own bunting; and with the barge conveying the locomotive and cars ahead of her, also gaily decorated with flags and evergreens and a barge laden with railway ties on each side, presented a novel spectacle. The whistles of the locomotive and the boat continued shrieking, the mill whistles joined in the chorus, the bells clanged—a young lady, Miss Staccine, pulling manfully at the ropes—and the continuous noise and din proclaimed loudly that the iron horse had arrived at last. Shortly after landing three cheers were given for Mr. Joseph Whitehead, and in a few minutes a crowd swarmed on board and examined the engine most minutely. The caboose and flat cars, which also came in for their share of attention, each bear the name 'Canadian Pacific' in white letters. After remaining a couple of hours, during which she was visited by many hundreds, the Selkirk steamed to a point below Point Douglas ferry, where a track had been laid to the water's edge, on which it was intended to run the engine this afternoon.

"In yesterday's issue an account was given of a trip to and reception at Pembina. Leaving there the boat had to proceed slowly, the broad tow rendering the greatest caution necessary to prevent grounding. The tow, too, was difficult to handle, but Capt. Holmes and his officers brought it through without the slightest mishap. At Crooked Rapids considerable difficulty was met with and from daylight till three o'clock yesterday afternoon was occupied in passing that dangerous locality. The Selkirk could have reached here in the evening, but as Mr. Whitehead, desiring to run into Winnipeg in daylight, had the boat tied up for the night at LaMay's and steamed down this morning.

"Colonel Ruttan, who was engineer on the construction at the time, says that the 'Selkirk' with her barge 'Freighter' (on which was the engine) after putting ashore at number 6 warehouse (at the foot of Lombard Street), dropped down and crossed to the mouth of the Seine River, near the right bank of which the engine and cars were landed, to work on the Pembina Branch construction.

"After many years' active service on the main line, the Countess was relegated to serve as shunting engine in the lumber yards at Revelstoke. From this obscurity it was rescued a few years ago and placed in its present prominent position by the great company which it had served so long and well."

WINGS 100 FEET ACROSS.

Biggest Aircraft Will Have Engines With Total Horse Power of 1,800—Carry 35 Bombs.

NEW YORK, Nov. 15.—Colonel Thomas L. Eggleston, of Washington, D.C., announced at the Hotel McAlpin that the Christman Aeroplane Company of Washington had closed an order with representatives of the Allies to supply them with eleven Class B battleship cruiser type aeroplanes, which are to be larger than any yet built, at a cost of more than $1,000,000.

He gave a detailed description of the giant machines to a reporter from The Times, and said that, now the plans had been accepted, construction would start immediately.

The machines are the invention of Dr. W. W. Christmas, of Washington, who has been an inventor and aeronautical enthusiast for the past six years. In 1911 he built an aeroplane of the same type he is now to build for the Allies, and it was so successful that he planned to start a mail route between Washington and this city. This failed for lack of interest and support.

The Class B battleship cruisers, the design of which has been accepted by the Allied aeronautical experts, are many feet larger, and will carry tons more than any yet planned or built. Their wings are 100 feet over all, and the machines will be 104 feet from tail to propellers. They are built on the cantilever truss principle, similar to that used in bridges and other steel construction requiring great strength, combined with light weight, and will be entirely of steel. On this construction principle they can be built to any size within reason.

Built With Twin Bodies.

Like the great machines recently built for the French Government, the Class B battleship cruisers are of the double fusilage type. They will have twin bodies, each body carrying one engine, and will be driven by twin propellers. These engines, or motors, will have 900 horse power each, making a total of 1,800 for the machine, which is greater by nearly 1,000 horse power than any ever used to drive an aeroplane.

The offensive and defensive equipment of these aeroplanes is by far the heaviest ever carried by any heavier-than-air craft. There will be four machine guns, two fore and two aft. These will have a calibre of between one and a half and two inches, and will be capable of between twenty and forty shots a minute. They will be used with high explosive shells or shrapnel and it is planned to use them for attacking moving bodies of troops. It is expected that they will be particularly useful in battles where the enemy is trying to bring up reinforcements, which cannot be reached by the field artillery.

A squadron of these Class B battleship cruisers, dropping shrapnel on the enemy in the open, will be able to create great loss of life and will be a great deterrent to the rapid-reinforcing of the fighting line at threatened points.

The speed called for in the specifications is higher than any before specified, except in the tiny scout cruisers being built for the British Government at Buffalo and Toronto by the Curtiss Aeroplane Company. These great fighters must make eighty-five miles an hour with their full load and crew of six men and with half their load and the same crew must be able to make not less than 100 miles an hour.

To Carry 14-Inch Bombs.

They will be especially equipped for bomb-dropping. The bomb-dropping apparatus will be arranged so that bombs up to fourteen inches in diameter can be handled. There will be three shell-racks holding thirty-five shells each. The apparatus is of a new type and is built to drop the bombs with the greatest accuracy. These fourteen-inch shells will be powerful enough to destroy modern fortifications, and when dropped on a city will create great devastation.

The entire machine will be armoured and be able to weather the storms of shrapnel now hurled by the anti-aircraft guns and shelters are to be arranged so that the pilots and other members of the crew will have the greatest possible safety in their work. The vital parts of the aeroplanes, such as the tanks and motors, will have especially heavy protection.

Owing to the construction, should one motor become disabled, the machine will be able to continue its progress, although with diminished speed, until it is possible to volplane to safety. In fact, it will be possible to cruise under one motor.

The specifications call for the Class B battleship cruisers to carry between 25,000 and 32,000 pounds surplus or extra weight. That is, in addition to flying "stripped," they must be able to carry close to fifteen tons dead weight.

The largest aeroplane now being used in Europe are the Canada and super-Canada machines, built by the Curtiss Aeroplane Company in Toronto. These are about the same size as the great Russian Sikorsky aeroplanes and are 102 feet over all on the wings and carry a dead weight of about a ton. They have a maximum speed of ninety miles an hour and carry two machine guns. The Class B battleship cruisers will have the same arrangement of guns as the aeroplanes of this type. The guns are mounted so that they may be fired in any direction, both above and below the machine, thus making it possible to attack enemy aeroplanes or Zeppelins from beneath.

The success obtained in the Canada and super-Canada classes is thought by those familiar with aeronautics, to have led to the demand for greater and more powerful machines. This demand will be met by the new battleship cruisers, which will be able to drop between 15,000 and 20,000 pounds of explosives, and which will be the most destructive weapon yet invented.

THE LAW OF THE SEA.

There was a very bad first night in a New York theatre. That is to say, the night was a good night as nights go in New York during the theatrical season, but the play that had been offered was bad.

At the end of the second act the long-suffering audience was about ready to quit. A few got up to go and others followed, until the aisles became congested.

Charles Hanson Towne arose in his place well down front.

"Wait!" he called out in a clear, loud tone, "women and children first!"—Saturday Evening Post.

There is one thing the business girl does, sooner or later, and it is about the worst thing she could do. She goes without her lunches, sometimes because she thinks she has to, or sometimes to pay for some foolish piece of finery which she doesn't like after she gets it. If she takes her lunch, she often omits breakfast.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Why Recommended

"My case was very serious and I was so sick that everybody expected my death any day. No suffering could ever be worse than what I had to endure.

I could feel at first the gravel passing through my bladder but now I am as strong as ever. I weigh about 20 lbs. more than when I started to take Gin Pills.

I beg you to publish my letter so that people may know what Gin Pills had done for me. The first box relieved me a good deal, eight boxes were sufficient to cure me entirely, and bring me back to perfect health.

GALLANT DEEDS OF GUARDS IN THE GALLIPOLI STRUGGLE

Won Hill 70, Then Lost It—Losses So Heavy That Three Times the Original Strength Has Passed Through the Division's Ranks.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 16—Elia Ashmead-Bartlett, who was the British press representative at the Dardanelles, chronicles in simple but telling phrases the gallant deeds of one of the commands which played a conspicuous part in the Gallipoli fighting. In part he says:

"The purpose of this article is to do belated justice to the role played by the Twenty-ninth Division in the heroic struggle in the Dardanelles. The renown of this division is world-wide and their number will ever in the future be surrounded by that mixed halo of romance and glory which attached to Caesar's Tenth Legion and Napoleon's Old Guard. In fact, the Twenty-ninth earned for themselves the title of 'The Old Guard' of the army.

Unfortunately but few of the original veterans, who landed at Sedd-ul-Bahr are left, for nearly all are dead or invalided home. Some, in fact, have been wounded many times.

"As the division has played a more prominent role in almost every engagement that has been fought on the Peninsula during the last six months, I do not know how many times it consumed itself in furious attacks on the enemy's works, but already, I believe, at least three times the number of its original strength, has passed through the ranks.

"The Twenty-ninth Division landed under the command of Major General Hunter Weston and has since been commanded by Major General de Lisle. All four countries England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, have the honour to be represented in its ranks.

"On August the 6 the division was holding its old position on the left of our line at Helles, across the Gully ravine, and on that day the Eighty-eighth Brigade delivered a most gallant assault on a section of the enemy's line over ground devoid of cover.

"While the landing at Sulva Bay and the great advance from Anzac were taking place, the Twenty-ninth held its ground and successfully repulsed attacks from the Turks.

"When the attempts of the new divisions to take the Anafarta Hills definitely failed by Aug. 10, it was decided to make a final effort to cut the enemy's lines of communication by employing the Old Guard. Secretly at night three brigades were brought up in trawlers from Helles to Sulyla and landed without the Turks being aware of the movement.

"In my accounts which have appeared in the press of the events of this memorable Aug. 21, chief credit is being given the newly arrived yeomanry, because they were the only corps which the censor allowed to be mentioned, but in reality the second mounted division of the yeomanry were held in reserve behind Lala Baba until late in the afternoon, and they only came into action after the repeated efforts of the Eighty-sixth and Eighty-seventh Brigades of the Twenty-ninth mounted division failed to shake the enemy's defense.

"The yeomanry deserve every credit for the magnificent manner in which they behaved when in action for the first time. They advanced two miles under a hail of shrapnel over ground which afforded not so much as a blade of grass as cover before they reached the dead ground at the foot of the enemy's works.

"It was the Second Brigade, under the Earl of Longsford, consisting of Bucks, Derks, and Dorsets, which made the final glorious charge in conjunction with the Eighty-seventh Brigade; and obtained temporary possession of Hill 70, which had subsequently to be abondoned in the night. The losses of this brigade were very heavy, the Bucks regiment losing almost all their officers and men.

"The arrival of the Twenty-ninth Division on the battlefield stimulated the whole army and showed how seriously our leaders regarded the task ahead. The division was ranged along a line stretching from Hill 70 to Hill 112. The Eighty-seventh Brigade was ordered to attack Hill 70, and the Eighty-sixth Hill 112. The South Wales Borderers acted as a connecting link between the two. The Eighty-eighth Brigade which had suffered very heavy losses at Helles on Aug. 6, was held in reserve.

"The men of the Twenty-ninth rested quietly in their trenches during the morning. They realized that the eyes of the whole army were watching them and that a signal, if dangerous, honor had been conferred on them. Throughout the afternoon the Eighty-eighth Brigade made repeated efforts to advance on Hill 112, suffering heavy losses, but could make no progress in the face of the enemy's determined resistance.

"When the final effort was made to capture Hill 70, late in the afternoon, the South Wales Borderers, who had been held in reserve, were brought up. This regiment advanced against the south face, and dug themselves in beneath the crest before the Second Yeomanry Brigade, under Lord Longford, came up from behind Lala Baba. Here they remained until it was almost dark, taking part in the final charge which gained possession of the crest.

"It will thus be seen from this brief summary that the brunt of fighting on Aug. 21 again fell to the Twenty-ninth Division, but even the efforts of these heroic troops, ably seconded by the Yeomanry, failed to achieve success against an enemy equally brave and equally determined, who enjoyed the incalculable advantage of fighting behind intrenchments on commanding hills. But the Twenty-ninth Division has only added to its fame by this failure."

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Some little time ago there were representatives requested from each of the churches to meet and discuss and decide it. Maybe whether to submit the question of local option once more here. After much discussion it has, I believe, been finally decided to allow the bars full fling for another year at least. Oh church of the living God where are we? Some weeks ago I commenced to read the Bible through in hour spells. I have just got through the Book of Acts. Paul asked the question in one place, 'Have ye or you received the Holy Ghost since ye believed? And is this the teaching of holy writ, to allow a business like that to flourish in this our fair city? I trow not. Some little time ago in speaking with a friend about this matter I said I felt strange when I met a member of a church that would use his influence to uphold this business. He said, you must allow a man to have his own opinion. Now, my views are that it is very easy to become a member of a church, and I have tried it different times, but the applicant should at least be willing, and endeavour to, take the Bible as the guide of life. Especially in Essentials, read Isa., 28:1-5, or in connection with the Life of the Strongest Man, Judges, 13, or the Wisest Man. Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and who ever is deceived thereby is not wise, or the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty. Does he not also tell us at the last, it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. Isn't it woe and woe to it in this life, now beyond in first Cor., 6.10, excludes from the kingdom of heaven. Does not all history in this world condemn it? Does not the whole world nearly at the present time cry, put the liquor down? Are we not at the present time fighting for our very life?

Some years ago I was standing on the sidewalk on the market talking to another man about some business when the late James Stratton came along. He poke and then passed on a little way and stopped, and when he left he came back and told me he had been very sick and thought he was near the close. I proved the question, 'How did the future appear?' In substance, he said 'Ich on-ht.' Will the liquor business give it? Look at some things for us to rely upon. The spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God, and if children then heirs, heirs of God and joint heir with Christ.

I have at different times stood beside different persons in the past about to pass from earth away, my father amongst the number, and I pressed some of those questions, and some at least have spoke with great assurance about the future. Some time ago I was requested to go to see a person with whom I had a very slight acquaintance, if any. I felt curious to know what was wanted. He told me in substance he was soon to pass away from this world to the future, and he had made no preparation. Could I truman any help. We read together, talked and prayed together, and I am inclined to think we went together. He lived some weeks. I stood very near the remains at the funeral and I heard the Rev. Mr. Webb speak with great assurance about the departed in regard to the future once more I ask, will the liquor business give it? I have stood between parties as a lad and tipped the terrible stuff on the ground. I have gone into a great many houses in my time and the only time that a landlord requesting me as a gentleman to step out. My answer was, I am going in here. Three different times repeated and I went in though he was a great deal larger man than me. I was not as gentle then as now to God, all the glory for His goodness to me.

I have been in full sympathy with the young girl who wrote:

All that my soul has felt and known
Then look upon the wine cup's glow,
Think if it's beauty can atone,
Think if its flavour you will try
When all proclaim 'tis drink and die
Tell me I hate the bowl,
Hate is a feeble word,
I loathe abhor my very soul,
With strong disgust is stirred,
Whenever I see or hear or tell
Of that dark beverage of hell.

Contract For Garbage Collection Awarded to Justice Blodgett

His Nearest Competitor Was Two Dollars and Ninety-nine Cents on the High Side—New Contract Compares Favourably in Point of Cost With This Year's Contract—Successful Tenderer Must Furnish Approved Securities.

At a meeting of the Property Committee, held last evening, it was decided to accept the tender of Mr. Justice Blodgett, respecting the collection of garbage throughout the city for the year 1918. The contract price is $5,998, which is $373 more than was paid for the work this year. Considering that the new contractor will have to go three feet inside of the house-line, instead of the street line, for the garbage, and that the present area has been extended to the south and east wards, the city will have made as good, if not better, bargain than was the case this year. The present contractors were the highest bidders of the five that tendered. As one Alderman put it they failed to conform to specifications when preparing their tenders.

The Tenders.

Tenders were called for the whole city, that portion of the city now known as the present area, and the present area with the extensions added. They were Nos. 1, 2, and 3, respectively. The tenders follow:

E. K. Graham—
No. 1—the whole city $9,000
No. 2—the present area 5,000
No. 3—present area and extensions 6,250

Justice Blodgett—
No. 2—the present area $4,998
No. 3—present area with extensions 5,998
The whole city was not tendered for in this case.

W. Manley—
No. 2—present area $5,000.99
No. 3—present area with extensions 6,000.99
Whole city not tendered for.

A. B. Downer—
No. 3—present area with extensions $8,350
Only one tender submitted.

G. Mitchell and F. Turner (present contractors)—
No. 2, present area, garbage to be placed on street line $5,634
No. 2—present area, garbage to be placed inside house line.. 7,512
No. 3—present area with extensions, garbage to be placed on street line. 8,451
No. 3, present area with extensions, with garbage placed inside house line 11,262

If debarred from taking pickings, add two hundred dollars to first two and three hundred dollars to last two

The Discussion.

Before proceeding with the discussion regarding the tenders the Committee adopted a resolution recommending that the matter of garbage collection be made in accordance with the new by-law and that the contractors be required to go three feet back of the house-line for the garbage. This will avoid the necessity of the householder placing the garbage on the street line, which is the practice under the present by-law. Sanitary Inspector Spence pointed out that a similar regulation was enacted in Toronto one week ago, and that Peterborough was one week ahead in formulating and putting on record such a clause, as the matter was taken up nearly three weeks ago and subsequently endorsed by the Council.

Members of the Committee regretted that they were unable to consider the tenders of the present contractors Messrs. Mitchell and Turner, as they were too high. It was claimed that the contractors had departed from the basis upon which the tenders were authorized to be made.

Ninety-nine Cents.

There was a difference of two dollars and ninety-nine cents between the tenders of Blodgett and Manley. Why the latter tacked ninety-nine cents on to his tender was a mystery that proved too deep for the aldermanic mind. Ald. Langford was in favour of deferring action in order that a deputation from the committee might interview the men and arrange a compromise if possible. He said it was a pity that Manley should be shut out altogether after figuring so close. Others of the Committee were inclined to the opinion that Manley and Blodgett were in collusion and intended working together providing one or the other got the contract. Sanitary Inspector Spence volunteered some information that strengthened this deduction.

The aldermen as a body were not partial to the proposal to negotiate with the men, preferring to let the contract to the lowest tenderer who in this case, happened to be Blodgett.

On motion of Aldermen Edgar and Duffus, it was decided to take in the present area; also the proposed extensions, and award the contract to Justice Blodgett providing the latter furnishes sufficient securities for the fulfillment of the contract, failing this the contract will go to the next lowest tendered, subject to similar conditions. The securities are to be approved by His Worship Mayor Butler and Ald. McIntyre, Chairman of the Committee.

They were instructed to see that the contract was air-tight. The proposed extensions are such as will require one extra team to cover.

The Extensions.

The extensions take in the following: Between Douro Street and Maria Street, and including both sides of those parts of Douro and Rogers Streets and in the South Ward following the line of Park Street to Albert Street, and Albert, Alfred and Chamberlen Streets to the Monaghan Road, the Monaghan Road to Romaine Street, Romaine Street to Lock street, and Lock, Crescent and Perry Streets to George Street, and north on George Street to the present area.

HERRINGS PLENTIFUL AT BOBCAYGEON

BOBCAYGEON, November 16 say! the herring are running! Maybe that does not mean much to Lindsayites, but the advent of November is always looked for anxiously for with the coming of cold weather the shoals of these small fish come up the river. They make a particularly nice flavour of food, quite the equal in flavour to brook trout and much easier to catch. Three hundred in an evening is an ordinary catch and a sight not easily forgotten is to stand on the middle bridge and in the light of the arc lamps watch the little fellows disport themselves by jumping out of the water. If a fish diet induces to brain power we shall be pretty brainy people during the coming winter and if language can be found to express the great thoughts that surge through our massive crania you may expect some valuable contributions towards literature before the suckers run in the spring.

NOTED METEOROLOGIST PREDICTS HARD WINTER

ENGLAND TAKES STEPS TO PROPERLY CARE FOR TROOPS.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—At the request of the army authorities a government meteorologist has drawn up a forecast of the weather for the coming winter, according to the Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, in which he prophesies that the season will be the worst ever known.

The meteorologist visited the Alps and obtained views of experienced mountaineers. The latter told him that the Alpine field mice, instead of burrowing some 10 or 12 inches, as usual, in order to pass the winter comfortably, have gone down fully three feet. Trees and plants point to the same conclusion, the ash and heather being particularly emphatic in their weather signals.

The army authorities already have acted on this advice in preparations for clothing the troops during the cold months.

WHEN BLOOD IS POISON.

The blood must be filtered, otherwise the liver is overworked, and becomes torpid, and you are poisoned. If the kidneys fail to do their work, the poisons are carried to every part of the body. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills you get both these filtering organs working right, and also secure healthful action of the bowels. For this reason these pills are the most popular family medicine. They cure biliousness, constipation, chronic indigestion and kidney disease.

TO FERRET OUT FAVOURITES.

From Sinecure to Trenches is to Be Fate of French Idlers.

PARIS, Nov. 15.—A league has been formed here by the parents of a hundred soldiers who are serving at the front with the object of ferreting out and reporting to Minister of War Galliení, cases where young men fit for military service are occupying positions in the interior which are more or less sinecures through the influence of powerful friends and the persons who are protecting them. The league hopes to co-operate in this way with M. Galliení's campaign to root out favoritism.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION A WONDERFUL SPECTACLE

D. W. Griffith's Magnificent Picture Delighted Large Audience at Grand Last Night

A SPLENDID ORCHESTRA

The wonderful motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman" and undoubtedly the climax in the art of motion picture photography and effects was presented to a very large audience at the Grand Opera House last night and held the spectators entranced, as no other picture has done. Spectacular effect piled on spectacular effect, wonderfully impressive battle scenes in which miles of trenches, the bursting of hundreds of shells, the charging of troops combine to give a magnificently realistic effect, Sherman's march to the sea, the assassination of President Lincoln, the escape of the refugees from Atlanta, the wild night ride of the Klu Klux Klan, exciting scene after scene, make "The Birth of a Nation" the spectacle of the century. Words cannot describe the effect—the picture must be seen in order that its beauty may be appreciated. Interwoven through the excitement runs a pretty love story. Many thousand people and thousands of horses are used in the 5,000 scenes of the production. Mr. Griffith utilising a small army of men and women to get the desired effect. "The most stupendous dramatic and spectacular enterprise that the brain of man has yet visioned and realized," is the programme's description of the picture play, and after seeing it, one is forced to the conclusion that the language is not in the least exaggerated.

A feature is the wonderful musical effects produced by a symphony orchestra under the direction of Mr Geo. Wiseman, which accompany the development of the spectacle. The music is as wonderful as the picture —than which no higher praise can be given.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be seen at the Grand at matinee and evening performance to-day and to-morrow.

Germans Imitating Trade Marks Of Neutrals to Hold Commerce

Scrapping Their Dies of "Made in Germany" They Have Created a Flourishing Traffic to South America and Thence Back to British Markets in Articles the Products of Neutral Firms.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—By no means the least interesting chapter to be written of the European war is that concerning the commercial machinations by which Germany has been piling up trade defences calculated to counteract and undo the economic pressure placed on her by the Allies, writes a commercial correspondent who has had long experience in dealing with the business houses of Germany.

As the war advances, he says, the secrets of the careful devices of the German war lords in the commercial arena are leaking out and the Allies are beginning to see what tremendous and unscrupulous forces have been organized against them.

There are, broadly speaking, three main descriptions of commercial conspiracy which Germany is using in the present war to prevent the strangulation of her export trade. The first device was to have ready and waiting secret agents as employes in the great number of works on the enemy side of the frontier, which in the early conquest of territory would fall into German hands.

This was projected two, and even three, decades ago, and the Germar officers now controlling the output of the many mills, factories and iron works in Northern France and in the eastern area of the war have, as expatriated Germans in the pre-war period, been fulfilling the orders of the German War Staff as directly as any commandant of the field. Secondly, German undertakings in foreign countries, under ownership which cannot be traced to the true quarters, are far more numerous than has been supposed.

The substitution and flagrant defiance of the merchandise marks act of all countries is being practised most skilfully and extensively by Germans at the present time. German houses have been only too happy to "scrap" the dies with which they have previously stamped their goods "Made in Germany." The marketing of the numerous "fake" English and other commodities thus produced by the German factories is effected through neutral countries. Germany has neighbours whose frontiers are guarded in a military sense, but whose commercial avenues are nevertheless open for the assistance of Hun merchants and their hirelings. There is a flourishing trade flowing at the present moment from Germany to South America, and thence back to British and other buying markets.

The Belgian government has taken the precaution of passing a law declaring null and void contracts with which it is discovered German manufactures have been binding hand and foot Belgian tradesmen to compel them to deal in German produced goods for a certain number of years after the war. This has been largely attempted in both Belgium and Holland.

Before the war there had been springing up in Germany chocolate and cocoa works of considerable size, which were beginning to prove formidable competitors in England. This market, of course, was closed altogether to those exporters on the outbreak of war, but by ingeniously copying the trade marks, boxes and general style and get up of the goods of a number of chocolate manufacturers, the German factories have managed to dispose of quantities of their chocolate through neutral countries. Moreover, they have actually used those chocolate boxes as a means of disseminating German "war news," doubtless with the view of influencing opinion in neutral and also allied countries.

It has recently come to light that boxes of chocolate bearing imitations of the name, brands and trade marks of the well known firm of Messrs. F. S. Cailler, of Bros, Switzerland, have been circulated in this way in Russia. For some time, apparently, nobody doubted the genuineness of these goods, and it was only when the fact of their containing German propaganda came to the ears of Messrs. Cailler, who immediately instituted an inquiry, that this further instance of German duplicity was unmasked. The Huns had not been tampering with genuine boxes of Cailler's chocolate, but had imitated boxes, wrappers, trade marks and all.

This revelation opened the eyes of many persons to the extraordinary ramifications of the German system of commercial warfare. Germany is certainly developing her organization against commercial defeat quite as vigorously and circumspectly as her military dashes against the steel walls which encircle her.

THE PETERBOROUGH BUSINESS COLLEGE

Now Affiliated With the Business Educators' Association of Canada

After the war is over it is safe to say that business will flourish. Well trained young men and women will be in much greater demand than before the war. Thoughtful pater families should be preparing their boys and girls now. Scores of young men and women now in good business positions in Peterborough and elsewhere testify to the value of the educational training for business received at the Peterborough Business College. Under an able principal and assistant teachers, excellent results have been abundantly demonstrated.

The value of the business education obtained at this college in the past has been greatly enhanced by its recent affiliation with the Business Educators' Association of Canada. This association has for its object the elevation of the standard of business education received at Canadian Business Colleges and Schools of Shorthand. Local students in our Business College will in future be working here to try for their examinations as set by this Association. The control of all matters referring to examinations are under an independent Board of Examiners. This Board arranges the examination papers for all the affiliated colleges and also adjudges in a fair and entirely independent of any local influence. It will thus be seen that by this affiliation the prestige of the Peterborough institution has been enhanced, and its students are placed in a position of a higher range of credit, equal to those of any of the larger colleges in the Dominion.

Mr. McKone, the present principal of the Peterborough Business College, is largely indebted to the careful management and excellent work done under his predecessors, and for the high standard which has been maintained that has permitted this important affiliation being accomplished.

Refuse is of Some Value

Present Contractors Make Allowance For It When Tendering

Ald. A. A. McIntyre's theory regarding the potential value of certain classes of refuse collected by the garbage collectors was substantiated last evening when the tenders for the new garbage collecting contract were opened. The last tender opened was that of Mitchell and Turner, the present contractors. Their tender specified that if they were to be debarred from the "pickings" the sum of two and three hundred dollars respectively, would have to be added to the tenders submitted. This is an admission that the refuse in question is of some value some months ago Ald. McIntyre estimated the value of this refuse at approximately five hundred dollars a year.

GERMANY IS MAKING EFFORT TO GET FOOD FROM TURKEY

Fat Granaries Along the Bosporus Hold Supplies Which the Fatherland Needs—But Serbia is in the Way

Germany, according to private advices received recently from English sources, is making an effort to get food from Turkey and avail herself of the fertile plains of her Ottoman ally, but this her foes regard as almost hopeless. Private advices from Greek sources, however, indicate that there is a fighting chance for help coming by way of Constantinople. The situation is one which means a tense struggle against hunger and the reaching about in all directions for succor.

A Greek merchant who recently received advices from Constantinople, Smyrna, and other points, said that there was no doubt that Germany would seize large granaries along the Bosporus stored with wheat raised in Anatolia, and transport it through Bulgarian and Rumanian territory to Austria, and hence into the chief centres of her own dominions.

"Although many of the Turkish population are in want," said he, "that would not deter Germany from doing as she pleases. After the last Balkan war Turkey agreed to supply Russia with a large amount of wheat every year. In event of the Turkish crops failing Russia was to send a certain amount of grain to Turkey to meet the needs of the population. As a matter of fact, there are in Anatolia and other sections fertile plains, of which only 10 per cent. are under cultivation. The inhabitants are not numerous enough and they lack the necessary agricultural machinery and implements to do anything like intensive farming. In the hands of the Germans, who are good farmers and very systematic in everything they do, this territory could later be made the means of supplying large quantities of food.

In the meantime, I am informed that along the Bosporus there are many granaries which have supplies which have been accumulating for several years. Any agreement which Russia may have had with Turkey has been abrogated by the war. The fortunes of battle will determine whether or not Germany will be able to utilize Turkish territory for the feeding of her people. As a matter of fact she is already doing so to a limited extent, and if she opens a wide rode through Bulgaria and Rumania from Constantinopole she should be able to relieve the situation considerably. German officers are in command in all parts of Turkey, for as the Turkish rule dropped to pieces it was picked up by the Germans.

"Even in Symrna there are German policemen on the streets. There, by the way, are stored many tons of figs which could not be forwarded on account of the war, although many important New York houses have had orders in for them for many months. Some of the figs are issued as rations to the soldiers. I doubt not that if full communication is opened up that figs will become a very popular article of diet in the Fatherland. They contain much sugar and starch.

"What, with wheat and figs, Germany ought to do fairly well. Her military and diplomatic powers are being concentrated at the present time to get food. That is the question of the hour with her. She wants the aid of Greece to keep an open road for provender. She needs soemthing to eat for her people and her cattle. As far as other food products are concerned, there is not much which is now available. There may be more, some time.

"Turkey of course, ships out dates, olives, seeds, a few vegetables, a little mutton, but she has not much to offer, and her own population is not thriving. However, who can tell what changes may come if the Germans get the country well under control. I do not think that Berlin is indulging in any wild flight of fancy, however, when promises are made that the Germans shall be fed from Turkish sources. Germany may even have her eye upon the great valley of the Nile, where she would try conclusions with England for what was once the granary of the world."

Allied Troops Can Enter At Salonika But Cannot Retire By Same Route

LONDON, November 16.—The intimation of the Greek Government that all Entente allied troops seeking refuge in Greek territory will be disarmed, has been the cause of considerable anxiety to the Entente powers, and consequently Field Marshal Earl Kitchener's Near East visit gains added importance.

According to belated despatches received from Athens, Greece bases her decision on international law, while the Entente Ministers contend that the right accorded troops to enter the country through Salonica, permits them to retire by the same route, should it become necessary for them to do so. The Ministers are demanding that Greece unequivocally define the attitude she will observe should such an eventually present itself.

WHAT KITCHENER WILL TELL KING

Besides the claims to hospitality which the Entente allies declare they have on Greece in view of the then Premier Venizelos' invitation to them to send a force to Salonica to enable Greece to fulfil her treaty obligations to Serbia, which however Greece repudiated, Earl Kitchener or the Entente Ministers are likely to draw the attention of King Constantine and his government to the fact that the constitution of Greece was guaranteed by France, Russia, and Great Britain, and that it was only obtained after Great Britain had ceded the Ionian Islands to that country, and the three powers had agreed to contribute 4,000 pounds ($20,000) yearly to the personal use of the King.

MAY LOSE THONE.

This, it is contended, binds the Greek people to the Entente allies, and should King Constantine overrule the constitution which the followers of M. Venizelos insist he did when he dissolved the Chamber, it is suggested in some quarters that King Constantine would be remined that his retention of the throne of Greece depends on the continuance of friendly neutrality toward the Entente powers.

The Germans, on the other hand, are declared to be assuring the Greek government that Greece will be protected against the Entente allies should that country support the Central powers, and that as evidence of the ability of Austria and Germany to do this they are despatching more submarines to the Mediterranean, which could be used against any fleet threatening the Greek ports.

MUST GIVE GUARANTEE.

The correspondent of the Daily Mail at Athens cables his paper to-day as follows: "The Entente powers, having decided to create an entirely new front in the Balkans, assembling the greatest of a very considerable number of troops, it has been considered necessary to obtain from the Greek Government something more definite in the way of a guarantee for the security of the allied forces than mere promises of benevolent armed neutrality.

"The nature of these guarantees has not yet been declared but I am informed in high diplomatic quarters that they will in high diplomatic quarters that they will tenance of national dignity of Greece."

The Budapest newspaper Vilag states that Bulgaria and Greece have signed a pact for the distribution of Macedonia. It is indicated that Bulgaria is prepared to cede certain territory to Greece no matter if the latter country goes to war or not.

WILL NEVER CONSENT.

A despatch from Athens says: "Demyo Cochin, Minister without portfolio in the French cabinet, has arrived here and was heartily welcomed. It is said that he will meet Lord Kitchener, the British War Minister, at Salonica.

"The Russian Minister, Prince Demidoff, in a newspaper interview declares that the Entente powers would never think of dragging Greece into the war by deliberately entering Greek territory. The Minister adds that neither the British, the French nor the Serbians would consent to being disarmed and interned, since in the special circumstances of the case the provisions of international law could not be said to apply. He adds that he believes Premier Skoulondis is seeking a solution of the situation which will be satisfactory to all the parties."

Asked to Stop Tango to Consider Enlisting

Startling Interruption in Ottawa Tea Room Made Slackers Uneasy

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—The activities of the unofficial recruiting sergeants who are working strenuously for the local recruiting campaign have no respect for places or persons, and do not hold sacred the leisured hour or two that the youthful slacker of Ottawa likes to spend with tea and toast and tango. The young men with the fox trot faces and the hesitation attitude towards enlisting awoke to a realization of this on Saturday afternoon in a local tea-room, when they were each presented with a neatly-typed invitation to stop dancing for a moment and to consider the call of their country.

The annoying part of the whole affair was the keen interest the young ladies took in the missives. They could not be stuffed up a fellow's sleeve with his handkerchief or slipped quickly into a vanity case. The ladies insisted on knowing what sort of letter it was that was so important that it had to be delivered in the middle of the sacred tea hour.

The missives read: "Have you yet considered that you're called upon to help defend Canadian homes and Canadian women?"

A most inept reminder to intrude at such an hour, and one that made the partners of the invited ones look longingly towards the tables where other girls sat secure in the knowledge that their men were in khaki and having learned the quick march had a perfect right to spend their spare hours in doing the one-step.

One of the Best Series of Meetings Ever Held in S. A. Temple

One of the best series of meetings ever held in the Salvation Army in this city was held on Saturday, Sunday and Monday last. Brigadier Bettridge, the Commander of the Young People's work in the Dominion of Canada, and Captain Spooner, Organizer of the S. A. Life Saving Scouts, were in command.

On Saturday night they were met at the G. T. R. Station by the Y. P. Band, and all the young people who have enlisted for Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, and marched along Charlotte Street, up George Street and down Simcoe Street, to the Temple. At 7 o'clock two open-air meetings were held, one at the corner of Hunter and George, under the command of Sergeant Major Blunt, and the other at the corner of Simcoe Street, under the command of Mrs Badley, followed by a great welcome meeting inside, at which both the Brigadier and Captain took a prominent part. Adjutant McElhiney had welcomed them on behalf of the corps.. At ten o'clock on Sunday morning the Brigadier addressed a young people's meeting, while Capt. Spooner and Adjutant McElhiney went up to the Old People's Home and tried to cheer them up. At the same time, a meeting was held with the prisoners in the jail by Mrs Hedge and Mrs. Lloyd.

At two o'clock the Brigadier addressed the Sunday school at the Temple for a few minutes, after which Mr. H. J. McCannon drove him to Byersville Sunday school in his auto, where he addressed the teachers and young people there, going on [illegible] school at Bradley where he also spoke to about seventy-five teachers and scholars assembled there. Returning to the Temple in time to take part in the service there. In the meantime, Mrs. McElhiney was visiting the women imprisoned in the jail, talking and praying with them. At 6.15 two open airs were held, one at the Oriental Hotel and one under the leadership of Adjutant McElhiney on Charlotte street. These were followed by a great service inside, at which both Brigadier Bettridge and Captain Spooner delivered powerful addresses, the result being sixteen souls at the mercy seat.

Brigadier Bettridge and Captain Spooner being the guests of Fire Chief and Mrs. Howard for the week-end, he made arrangements with Alderman G. Walter Green to take them in his auto to several points of interest around the city, for which they were very grateful. Last night from six to eight there was a pie and cake social held in the lower hall, followed by a great service in the auditorium. The main features of the evening were an address given by Captain Spooner on the objects, aims and purposes of the Boy Scout movement, after which those boys who wished to join the Life Saving Scouts were taken below and instructed by the Captain. Brigadier Bettridge wound up the meeting with the aid of the Songster Brigade. This finished one of the most interesting and profitable week-ends ever held at the local corps of the Salvation Army.

The Life Saving Scouts will meet tonight at 8 o'clock, to be measured for their uniform.

TRIUMPH FOR THE BASIL CORPORATION

The success of "The Birth of a Nation" is a triumph for the Basil Corporation, which handle the wonderful picture in Canada. The Basil Corporation of Mr. B. S. Courtney as Manager, will also have complete control in Canada of other Griffith pictures and are priding themselves on the fact that they give a New York production of the picture wherever it is shown. The patrons of the Grand last night saw "The Birth of a Nation" just as it was shown in New York with a splendid orchestra and all the effects. This will be the case with other presentations under the auspices of the Basil Corporation.

LOSSES IN DARDANELLES AVERAGED 795 A DAY

LONDON, Nov. 16.— The average daily losses in the Dardanelles for the entire period from May to October were 795, Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under Secretary for War, told the House of Commons this evening. The greater bulk of these men, Mr. Tennant said, were the sick, who aggregated 90,000. Of the sick, he added, eighty per cent. might be expected to return to the fighting ranks.

HURRY YOUR PARCELS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 15.—Canadians who intend to send Christmas parcels to relatives and friends at the front are advised to lose as little time as possible in mailing them. Under ordinary circumstances the last boat carrying Christmas mail would leave Canada about December 11 or 12. The trans-Atlantic service is at present uncertain, however.

The Kingston Standard says: Mr. Thomas Nash, of this city, received a letter this morning from "Jack" Mills, of the Princess Pats, one of the Kingston boys who went to the front from here, and in the letter is the information that the Princess Pats will leave very soon for Serbia with a British Expeditionary force.

Pte. Mills says that the rest of the boys are all fine and that Pte. Nickle, son of W. F. Nickle, M.P., of this city, is taking out a commission as lieutenant in the Princess Pats.

It will be remembered that Pte. Mills was the clever goal tender of the Frontenac junior O.H.A. team for a couple of years and went to the front with the reinforcements for the Pats, which he says is practically a new regiment now.

All the Peterborough members of the 39th Battalion Band are home from Kingston on week-end leave from Kingston.

Two Peterborough artillerymen were among the Canadian soldiers who returned on the Metagama on Sunday. They were Gunner H. King and Gunner Mordie McGill of the 4th Battery. Corp. Victor Cummiskey, of Birdsall, who was at the front with the Royal Canadian Dragoons, is also among the number. They will arrive here the latter part of the week.

PADDY LAVIN ACQUITTED ON SHOOTING CHARGE

Jury Accepts Self-Defence Plea of Former Pugilist and Saloonkeeper.

BUFFALO, Nov. 16.—After eight hours of deliberation, Patrick C. Haynes, better known as Paddy Lavin, ex-prize fighter and former saloon keeper, was acquitted on a charge of shooting Wm. Kennedy. About 200 spectators cheered when the verdict was announced before Justice Marcus in Criminal term of Supreme court.

Lavin was advised by friends immediately to leave the court room, and go home for fear of some demonstration by the crowd that remained about city hall from early afternoon awaiting the verdict. With his counsel, former Attorney-General Edward R. O'Malley, he left the building, stating he was going directly home to tell his wife of his victory.

Lavin shot Kennedy twice on the night of September 14th in a quarrel at West Eagle and Pearl streets. He claimed Kennedy had threatened to kill him for several months and when Kennedy and Joseph Lyons, former bartender for Kennedy, rushed at him in Eagle Street, Lavin testified, he tried to shoot Kennedy in the legs to scare him away. Lyons, Lavin insisted, grabbed his right hand, in which he had the revolver, and twisted the arm until two shots were discharged into the back of Kennedy who was clinched with him.

Twice during their deliberation the jurors asked for assistance from the court. Once they desired to have evidence of four witnesses read to them. Later they wanted further instruction on the law governing self-defence. It is said the first vote of the jurors was eight for acquittal and four for conviction until the next to the final vote stood 11 to one for acquittal.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

TARGET TIPS

A SPORTSMAN'S CREED.

Just at this time of year when hunters everywhere are limbering up for the long anticipated hunting trips, I think a little space devoted to a Sportsman's Creed may come in handy.

True sportsmen know the following rules and act according to them religiously. The beginner is apt to be careless at times.

1. Never point a firearm at any living thing unless you actually intend to kill; also carry your weapon carefully.

2. Don't be a game hog. Learn the game law by heart and see that you and your hunting partners follow it. The hunter—not the kind of gun—is responsible for the game hog.

3. Play square. Give your partners just as fair chances at the game as you have.

4. Do your full share of work in camp.

If you follow these rules you will not only enjoy your hunting trip, but you will find that true sportsmen will be mighty glad to have you as a partner.

A.R., Okanogan, Wash.

1. Will shot which one loads himself and dips in hot tallow to make them stick together lead a gun or hurt it otherwise?

Ans.—It cannot cause leading or hurt the gun.

2. What shot will chamber the best in a 12 gauge shotgun, full choke, for ducks, 2, 3, or 4, and for chickens 5 or 6?

Ans.—For ducks No. 4 shot is considered best. For chickens No. 6.

3. Which do you think is the best gun for hunting deer, bear, coyotes, etc., a 30-30 Remington high power, or a .22 Savage high power?

The ballistics of these cartridges are: .30 Remington, muzzle velocity 2,020 ft. seconds; muzzle energy, 1,540 ft. lbs. Range for accuracy, 500 to 700 yds. .22 High Power, muzzle velocity, 2,700 ft. seconds; muzzle energy, 1,132 ft. lbs. Range for accuracy, 300 to 500 yds.

A Subscriber, Burlington, Vt.

1. What is the trajectory at 200 yds. of the .351 cal. rifle, also the extreme range of same holding the arm at an angle of 45 degrees?

Ans.—When shot at 200 yds., the bullet rises 7.2 ins. above the line of sight at 100 yds. The extreme range is in the neighbourhood of 2,000 yds.

2. Is the 26in. barrel as accurate as the 26in. barrel?

Ans.—Yes. The length of barrel does not affect the accuracy.

3. Does it harm an automatic to keep the action well greased? I have been told it did.

Ans.—It certainly does not harm any rifle to keep the action well greased, but a heavy, sticky grease might interfere with its operating perfectly.

4. What is the greatest distance at which a bear or deer could be stopped with the .351 calibre rifle?

Ans.—This question cannot be answered with any degree of definiteness, but I certainly should not wish to use this cartridge on deer at over 150 yds.

5. Can you overheat a rifle barrel by shooting it?

Ans.—A rifle barrel can be overheated by shooting it, but no heat would affect it unless it began to get red hot and the shooter would be almost sure to burn his hands before that point was reached.

6. About how many rounds had the following rifles ought to shoot before showing wear—32-20, .38 Special, .401, and .351 calibers, if they were well taken care of?

Ans.—The first two should last four thousand to five thousand rounds, and the second two from two thousand to three thousand rounds.

7. Which way would you advise using a brass rifle brush, with or without oil?

Ans.—Use oil, as it makes the brush slide through the barrel and assists in the removal of powder residue.

A.B.McC., Westover, Pa.

Has the Remington .30 high power rifle as much velocity and striking power as other makes of same calibre? Is it strong enough for deer?

Ans.—The .30 Remington cartridge is of the same power as the regular 30-30 cartridge. The difference between the .30 Remington cartridge and the standard 30-30 cartridge is that the former is made rimless and the latter has a rim. Either of these cartridges are powerful enough for deer.

N.J.P., Falls, Pa.

Is the 12 gauge, 32-40 Three-Barrel Gun Co.'s 32-40 rifle barrel intended for high power ammunition?

It is probably not adapted to high power ammunition, although I am not just sure on this point. I would suggest that you write to them for more definite information.

G.L.K., Battle Mountain, Nev.

Do your remarks in a recent issue regarding use of Lesmok and semi-smokeless powder apply to 25-20 Winchester shells? If so, where can shells so loaded be procured? Many rifle shells of various makes and calibers are used in this section.

Ans.—It has been found that Lesmok powder is not adapted to other than the .22 rim fire sizes. Lesmok and semi-smokeless powders are by all odds the best in .22 caliber shells, but in the larger sizes, which are centre fire, the smokeless loads are best.

G.A.R., Evansville, Ind.

1. Which is better for hunting purposes, accuracy considered as well as power, the 32-40 HVS or 38-55 HVS?

Ans.—I cannot answer this until you say what kind of game you are going after. If for moose, the 38-55 would be better, and I would be inclined to favour it over the 32-40 for all large game shooting.

2. Is the 45-70-500 powerful enough for African game? Is it as good as the .405?

Ans.—African game runs all the way from deer as small as a fox terrier dog to the elephant or hippopotamus and the extremely tough rhinoceros. The 45-70 would be too powerful for a great deal of the game and not powerful enough for another portion of it. A hunter in Africa should have an assortment of at least three different rifles. The .405 is usually considered big enough for the biggest game except elephants, etc., for which game the most popular is a very powerful double barrel rifle.

3. Does the Marlin Company make an Autoloader? Does the Colt Company still make the double action, solid frame, side rod ejector revolver similar to the single action frontier model?

Ans.—The Marlin Co. do not make an autoloader. I am not sure, but I am under the impression that the Colt Company have discontinued the revolver you mention.

E. W., Cherokee, Ia.

May I ask what size target and bullseye and at what distance should be used shooting a .22 S & W revolver, 3½in. barrel? What cartridge is best adapted to this arm? Will the .22 long rifle give good results? What degree of accuracy can be obtained with this arm?

Ans.—The standard target for revolver shooting has a bullseye 1 1-10 in. in diameter and nine ring and an eight ring of black, the eight ring being 3.72in. in diameter. These targets can be secured from most sporting good houses. The distance is 20 yds. I would recommend for use in your revolver .22 long rifle Lesmok or semi-smokeless cartridges. I would not expect too much from this weapon. It is made for self-protection for ladies' use.

C.J.D., Lawrence, Kans.

1. Please send me data about organizing a revolver target shooting club. Also, what are the standard targets used for revolver shooting at 15 yds. and at 20 yds.?

Ans.—Write to I. B. Crabtree, Valesville, Conn., secy. United States Revolver Association, who will be glad to give you the information with regard to organizing a revolver club, and also the standard targets and distances.

2. Ans.—No.

J.A.P., Brunswick, Ga.

1. Would the Model 1912, 16 gauge repeating shotgun with 26in. barrel give a similar shooting quality to the Model 1897, 16 gauge repeating shotgun, with 28in. barrel at the longest possible range?

Ans.—Yes.

2. Would a Model 1912 12 gauge repeating shotgun with 26in. barrel give similar pattern and penetration to another gun of same make, but with 30in. barrel? Could the first one at a distance of 70 yds. do the same work as the second one? And if so, why do not the manufacturers supply all the guns with a 26in. barrel which would be light and beautiful instead of furnishing different lengths up to 32in.?

Ans.—The length of a barrel has nothing to do with the shooting quality. Different length barrels are supplied because they have an effect on the balance of the gun.

3. Sometimes the manufacturers in recommending one of their guns say: "We recommend the purchase of the —— grade gun because it is the most gun for the money that has ever been put on t. American market." What do they mean? That an imported shotgun of similar price would be better? Or that the same money can buy a better gun in the European market?

Ans.—The United States leads the world in the manufacture of low price shotguns. In the very high price grades there is little difference, but in the cheap repeating shotguns, for instance, American makes have even no serious competitor in other countries.

4. Which, in your opinion, is best—the British, French, or American shotgun?

Ans.—Individual differences between two guns of the same make are frequently greater than the differences between very high grade shotguns of American or foreign make.

5. I like the Remington and Winchester repeating shotguns — pump action—better than all, but do you think the above guns could give me similar shooting quality to a high-grade double-barrel shotgun?

Ans.—The latest experiments seem to indicate that the single barrel shotgun gives better results than the double-barrel gun. There are scientific reasons for this, among which are the unequal expansion of the barrels in a double-barrel gun, owing to the fact that the barrel is supported on one side only. You will really get better shooting from a single barrel gun than from a double barrel gun. When it comes down to brass tacks though, there isn't much difference anyway in the high grade guns. The difference would show more in the single barrel guns in the cheaper grades in comparison with double barrel shotguns.

J.G.D., Didsbury, Alta.

1. I have a single shot .22 rifle (new), but find that, by placing it in a vice, it scatters about 5 inches when shot at a target 50 yds. distant. What is the trouble?

Ans.—Clamping a rifle in a vice is not the best way to test its accuracy. In fact, it will sometimes cause inaccuracy. The only proper way to test a rifle is by shooting it from a machine rest, a machine made up to hold the rifle, and which will permit it to recoil; or by shooting it from a prone position with a sandbag rest for the muzzle. You do not state what make the rifle you are using is, nor the ammunition you are using. I would try using the rifle as suggested above, and if that does no good, try different makes of ammunition.

2. What make single shot rifle, .22 caliber handling short, long, long rifle and extra long cartridges would you recommend for accuracy?

Ans.—The extra long cartridge is no good. Of the .22 rim fire cartridges the proper ones to use are the .22 short or the .22 long rifle. Do not use .22 shorts in a rifle chambered for .22 long rifle, that is, if you wish to keep your rifle shooting accurately. There are a number of good makes. It would not be fair for me to name any particular ones. Ask your shooting friends.

3. What powder is the least harmful to the barrel? Which is the most powerful of the .22 cartridges?

Ans.—Lesmok or semi-smokeless powder is least harmful to the barrel, and also the most powerful and accurate. I recommend unhesitatingly the use of either of these two powders in preference to either black or smokeless. Smokeless is very hard on the barrel and is not as accurate as the Lesmok or semi-smokeless.

4. Is a choked barrel in a .22 any advantage for power and accuracy?

Ans.—The rifle barrel should be the same diameter all the way through.

5. I have noticed some .22 shells not filled with powder. What is the advantage of this?

Ans.—You do not say what size of .22 shells. BB caps are made with very heavy priming and no powder. I do not advise their use, as the priming composition will tear the very life out of the inside of the barrel?

6. Do other firms than Winchester and Dominion manufacture .22 cartridges?

Ans.—There are a number of British firms manufacturing .22 calibre cartridges. In the United States the principal manufacturers are Remington-UMC Co., Winchester Co., Peters, U.S. and Western. Of the American firms mentioned, the Remington-UMC Co. also have a Canadian factory where .22's and several other sizes are made.

Even Manchurians Flock to Join Army of the Russian Ruler

HARBIN, Manchuria, Nov. 16.—Russia's last call for reservists took 3,000 men from this city, which has a population of 80,000 inhabitants. Although Manchuria is not Russian territory, and Harbin is nominally a Chinese city, Russian control of the railways and other great corporations, which are developing North Manchuria has made the line between Siberia and Manchuria very imaginary. For many months after the war began Manchuria did not feel the effects of the struggle, but recently it has fallen heavily under the grip of war. Troop and supply trains, which are robbing this new country of its settlers, its live stock and its grain, pass through the city constantly. Scarcely a home in Harbin has escaped the last sweeping call for reservists, and recently casualty lists bear the names of many young Russians who left Manchuria to fight for their Emperor. All business in Manchuria not directly connected with war supplies is practically at a standstill. The staffs of business firms have been depleted and in many offices the work is being carried on chiefly by young Danes and other European neutrals.

Before the Russo-Japanese War there were few settlers in this part of Manchuria and Serbia. Since that time the Russian Government has offered very favorable terms to prospective landowners and at great cost has located many peasant farmers in Siberia near the Manchurian border. These men were carried east with their families at very low rates. Immigrant lodgings were afforded at various points along the railway and the Government advanced large sums of money to get the new farmers started.

Now the very men who were brought to Manchuria at such great expense and pains are being torn from their new prairie homes to join the army. But there is little grumbling on the part of the stolid peasants. They do not question a call from Petrograd. The same power which made it possible for them to acquire a farm in this new country now demands their service, and they start for training camps with the blessing of the priests, who have their complete confidence.

Mobilization.

The reservists from various towns along the western part of the Trans-Siberian Railway are taken chiefly to Harbin or Vladivostok for mobilization. As nearly every station reservists and their families are waiting for orders. The Government has provided chapels in many of the railway stations located far from a Russian church. Travelling priests hold services in these occassionally and at this time they are busily holding masses for the men about to leave their families for the front.

At one station, east of Harbin, the correspondent of the Associated Press saw an open-air mass held for 800 men who were about to enter a troop train. The men were closely grouped about the priest, with the long beard and hair common to the clergy of the Russian Church. He wore a yellow satin robe, richly embroidered in gold, and held aloft a golden cross which reflected the rays of the sun, which was just setting at the edge of the vast prairie behind them. The reservists chanted the responses with unwavering voices and listened with rapt attention to the priest. Their religious fervor was shown especially by the eagerness with which they pressed forward to have their brows moistened with holy water after the priest had pronounced the benediction. Many of the reservists led their sons forward with them so they might stand together before the priest and receive his blessing.

Throughout the service the wives, mothers and sisters of the reservists stood at a respectful distance and listened mutely to the inspiring singing of their manfolk. They had no part in it, and manifested more of the enthusiasm shown by the robust men, standing with bared heads completely under the sway of their spiritual adviser whose intensity of manner was heightened by his unusual garb. No man could have more closely approached in appearance the great artists' conception of Jesus Christ and the priest's inspiring influence upon such an unhappy mission was little less than miraculous.

Even the tearful embraces of wives and mothers did not dampen the ardor of the men, who bravely answered the warning whistle of the waiting engine and sang the Russian hymn as the train whistled them off to an uncertain fate.

CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE FORMED AT THE Y. M. C. A.

At a meeting of the City Basketball League held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, six teams lined up for the coming season. The opening night will be on Wednesday, November 14th, when the team representing Crossman's, will meet the Bankers' team in the first game at 8 o'clock, and the 43rd Battalion's team will meet the Veterans at 9 o'clock. The Hooker Rink management was desirous of entering a team in the League but as this would make a seven team league, and with no other strong team in sight, it was decided to limit the league to six teams. The Pennant Club of Murray Street church was also represented but decided not to enter the City League. A Church League will be conducted if sufficient teams are found to be interested.

The following is the schedule:

Wednesday, Nov. 14—Crossman's vs. Bankers; 43rd Batt. vs. Veterans.

Saturday, Nov. 17—Bankers vs. Collegiate; Excelsiors vs. 43rd Batt.

Wednesday, Dec. 1—Veterans vs. Excelsiors; Crossman's vs. Collegiate.

Saturday, Dec. 4—Collegiate vs. Excelsiors; Bankers vs. 43rd Batt.

Monday, Dec. 6—Crossman's vs. 43rd Batt.

Wednesday, Dec. 8—Excelsiors vs. Crossman's; Veterans vs. Bankers.

Saturday, Dec. 11—Collegiate vs. Veterans; Bankers vs. Excelsiors.

Wednesday, Dec. 15—43rd Batt. vs. Collegiate; Crossman's vs. Veterans.

The following rule was adopted. After a player has played in one game with any team he may not play with any other team.

LANNING WILLING TO SELL RED SOX

Owner of World's Champions Finds No Gold Mine in Baseball

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 15.—Joseph J. Lannin, sole owner of the Boston Red Sox, champions of the world, in full control of Fenway park, all representing an investment of near a million, is willing to dispose of his interest in baseball at what he considers a fair price.

But, to show that Lannin has grave doubts as to the possibility of a sale for the next year or two, he has plans under way for the improvement of Fenway park, and will continue to arrange his playing talent with the idea of going after another championship next season.

Gets Into Thick of War.

President Lannin took the Boston club two years ago, right at a time when the Federal League had started to bother the players. The result was that the new man in baseball found anything but pleasant conditions, but he was game to the core and went right straight ahead, purchasing the Providence club as a war measure and showing from the start that he was one of the gamest fighters ever introduced into the game.

Last season President Lannin lost perhaps $60,000 in his baseball ventures. Considerable of the money was paid for players, especially Shore and Ruth from the Baltimore club, who are assets.

However, the season was anything but profitable, although the Boston man worked night and day for the benfit of his club. This season things have broken more to his liking. He has just made up the losses of last year and is now considerably ahead of the game, with a championship team, a first-class ground and loyal support of the Boston fans that ensures good times ahead, and yet, if any man thinks baseball a gold mine and wants to invest Lannin will give him a chance to bid.

Has Many Other Interests.

President Lannin has many interests to look after outside of baseball. His large hotel at Garden City, on Long Island, should be enough to keep one [illegible] has been giving [illegible] time since purchasing the Red Sox. Here in Boston Lannin also has extensive real estate interests, owning two of the largest apartment houses in the city, as well as a very large garage now in course of construction.

Therefore, finding his many interests are overtaxing his strength, he is of the opinion that he should give up baseball if he can do so without loss. At the close of the world's series he returned to Boston and immediately wrote President Ban Johnson a letter explaining his position fully, so that the American League president was the first one to know Lannin was willing to dispose of his interests in baseball if agreeable to the other American League owners.

Seeks Good Baseball Men.

Lannin's experience with ball players has influenced him to some extent. He has discovered that the signing of players is anything but a pleasing task. He realizes that players' salaries must be cut, not only in Boston but all over the country, and he hates to take that step. If he continues in the game he will have some good bright baseball man look out for these unpleasant business details. In fact, he has such a man in view.

If baseball conditions were such as they were three or four years ago the chances are President Lannin would enjoy his connection with the game, but the many disagreeable features that have crawled into the business end of the sport during the last two years have shattered his baseball ideals, and while things appear to be moving along smoothly, indicating better conditions next season, the owner of the major league baseball club is always bound to face disagreeable situations.

SCHEMES TO BEAT ENGLISH BOOKMAKERS

In the spring of 1913 a funny little affair happened at the Wye race course. The small Wye telegraph office was suddenly flooded by a shoal of wires from London. The torrent started mysteriously at midday, and did not stop till nearly three.

The messages, which were unclaimed, turned out to be bogus ones, used simply to block the line. For three hours the two telegraphists were busy taking down messages like "I am Henry the Eighth, I am," and "A Happy New Year," while dozens of people stood angrily demanding why they could not get through to London.

The idea in "coups" like this is to get [illegible] on some [illegible] visiting the [illegible] town, with whom the bets have been made, from covering themselves by backing that horse on the course, and so spoiling the starting price.

The cleverest piece of turf knavery ever carried out was simply dazzling in its neatness. In the days when our leading sporting paper supplied all the dailies with the racing returns, betting, etc., a man called on the editor of that paper and offered to report an out-of-the-way meeting. He had to be there officially, so could do it cheap. As the meeting was quite unimportant, the offer was accepted.

In due time the programme of the meeting came in and was published in all the papers, followed by the handicaps, the list of arrivals, etc.

The bookmakers in town, of course, booked bets freely over the hill country meeting. Next day the racing results made the meeting out to be quite successful. The papers complimented the officials, and encouraged them to do even better next year.

Didn't they wish they could? The whole thing was bogus from beginning to end. Town, fixtures, judge, jockeys and horses were the pure invention of some brilliant "boy." So was the race course, the racing, too. But the betting was not. Scores of bookmakers lost heavily over races that had never been run.

An attempt was made not long ago to repeat this trick by inventing a small jumping meeting. It fell through only by the merest accident. All the details had not been properly thought out. The bubble was burst when the telegraph department began to make enquiries, their special telegraphists not being able to find the place

HIGHEST MOUNTAIN WILL BE KNOWN AS MOUNT CAVELL

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—With the view of perpetuating the name of Miss Edith Cavell, martyred English nurse, the proposal is made to change the name of Mount Robson, the loftiest point in the Rocky Mountains, to Mount Cavell. The matter has only reached the suggestion stage, however. Sir Richard McBride, Premier of British Columbia, originated the idea, and it has been taken up by several patriotic societies on the Pacific Coast.

The Canadian Geographic Board was communicated with on the subject to-day, but the matter has not yet been considered officially. Changes in geographical designations are rarely made in a hurry. The records of the Board do not make clear how the peak came to be named Robson, but so far as can be learned it was called after one of the pioneer fur traders.

While there is every sympathy in Canada with Miss Cavell, and it is recognized her martyrdom most appropriately might be commemorated, some opposition already has asserted itself to the proposal that it should take the form of renaming Mount Robson.

POLICE FUSILADE ENDS SQUATTER'S 'OASIS' IN CHICAGO

"Invaders" Attack Shack on Fashionable Lake Shore in Sunday Closing Raid

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 16.—After an exchange of fifty shots the police invaded and captured Captain George Wellington Streeter's "District of Lake Michigan," a plot of filled-in land on the shore of Lake Michigan, where Streeter had successfully defied the officers who sought to arrest him on a charge of violating the Sunday closing order.

Mrs. John Holst, wife of one of Streeter's tenants, was slightly wounded. Streeter, his wife and fifteen others were arrested and 192 cases of beer, six rifles, four revolvers and a quantity of ammunition were confiscated

The land claimed by Streeter by squatter's right adjoins the fashionable lake shore residence district. Streeter and his wife went there in a sailing vessel years ago. They were wrecked off the shore and the land involved was formed by sand filling in between the wreck and the beach. Streeter called the new made land "the United States District of Lake Michigan" and refused to recognize any authority other than that of the United States. The city never has recognized his claim, but any purchasers have preferred to make a settlement with him rather than face a possible question about title.

Since Mayor Thompson's Sunday closing order Streeter is alleged to have done a thriving Sunday business in bottled beer at his shack and several charges of selling liquor without a license are pending against him.

The main force of the police invaders consisting of thirty-five patrolmen, two patrol wagons, an ambulance and a reserve force from the Fire Department, was stationed just out of sight of the Streeter shack, which he has named "The Oasis." Eight detectives, personally unknown to Streeter, entered "The Oasis," where, it is said, they found several customers. After giving his order one of the detectives signalled to the attacking force and the police charged on the district with a rattle of gongs from the patrols and ambulance. Streeter, according to the police, seized a rifle and fired, but was overpowered by the detectives within the building.

Several shots then came from adjoining buildings, the police say, and in answering a shot from the house of John Holst the police are believed to have wounded Mrs. Holst. Customers in Streeter's resort sought refuge on the floor and behind tables and counters.

Harry de Carmaker, seventeen years old, who lives with Streeter, was found shivering on a cake of ice in a refrigerator, guarding the supply of beer with a rifle. He surrendered without firing a shot.

After the police made their assault a fire company pulled down "The Oasis."

Charges of assault with intent to kill, violation of the State Tippling law and of keeping a disreputable house, were placed against Streeter. Most of the others arrested were accused of living in a disreputable house. All were released on bond.

Polish Actors Suffer For Jeering Germans

"During the war," says the Novoe Vremya, "the theatres of Warsaw have been giving performances without any interruption. But with the German occupation many things were changed, even in the world of art. The latest reports from Warsaw tell us that the Military Governor, General von Besseler, has ordered the closing of the principal Polish theatres and has caused the arrest of several well-known actors. It appears that at certain performances the Polish actors had made allusions to the German occupation and jeered and ridiculed the stupidity of the German military regulations imposed on the city with draconian severity.

"In the beginning, the heavy working intellect of the Germans failed to grasp the real drift of the sarcasms and they were at a loss to account for the hilarity caused by these among the audience. After a while, however, the point of the jokes penetrated, and then the popular theatres were closed, and the artist jokers were put behind bars. In order to prevent a repetition of the 'scandal' the German Governor has established a strict censorship over everything that is intended for public production on the few stages where performances are still permitted."

DINAH MIGHT

A baby girl was recently brought to a clergyman to be baptised. The latter asked the name of the baby:

"Dinah M.," the father responded.

"But what does 'M.' stand for?" interrogated the minister.

"Well, I do not know yet; it all depends upon how she turns out."

"How she turns out? Why, I do not understand you," said the cleric.

"Oh, if she turns out nice and sweet and handy about the house, like her mother, I shall call her Dinah May. But if she has a fiery temper and displays a bombshell disposition like mine I shall call her Dinah Might."

Chase of Danish Steamer Vinland Causes Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Recent renewal by England of her warship patrol of the United States Atlantic coast, culminating in the chase of the Danish steamer Vinland into Norfolk, may result in a protest and demand for withdrawal of the British cruisers. Both the State and Navy departments were to-day investigating the case of the Vinland.

Officials pointed out that the American steamer Hocking was seized two weeks ago only a few miles out of New York harbor and taken before the Halifax prize court. Men from another British cruiser boarded the American steamer Zealandia at Progreso, Mexico. The chase of the Vinland was deemed cumulative evidence of presence of a considerable British patrol off American harbors.

After the interment of the German raiders, the Prinz Eitel Friederich and Kromprinz Wilhelm, the last of the German sea raiders, the British patrol was largely withdrawn, but has now apparently returned to American waters.

The Navy department may provide a convoy for the Vinland to prevent her from seizure by British warships believed lying in wait off Cape Henry. If it is established that a British vessel entered the three-mile zone while pursuing the Vinland, it is regarded certain a protest will be made.

Lord Kitchener Depended Upon to End the Menace of the Greek Policy

Threat to Intern and Disarm Allied Troops In Event of Retirement From Serbia Contributes to Uneasiness in Great Britain

LONDON, Nov. 17. Lord Kitchener's first effort in Greece, London believes, will be to make certain the status of the Allies, which, accepting the invitation of the Greek Government through the then Premier, Mr. Venizelos, to use Greek territory for an advance into Serbia, now is threatened with internment and consequent disarmament should circumstances compel it to retire from Serbia. The new Athens Ministry has plainly intimated that any entente troop seeking refuge on Greek soil will be disarmed. The British, French and Russian Ministers on Saturday called on the Premier and protested against the issuance of such orders, but so far advices from Athens do not record a change of policy on the part of the Government.

The possibility of internment for the Anglo-French forces, it must be confessed, is causing much uneasiness here, and Lord Kitchener is expected to make it his first duty to assure the safety of the army in the event of a reverse. The uneasiness is intensified by the continued antagonistic attitude of King Constantine and his Ministers to every suggestion from the Entente Powers.

The reports from Athens say Greece bases her decision on international law, while the Entente Ministers contend that the right accorded to troops to enter the country through Salonika permits them to retire by the same route should it become necessary for them to do so. The Ministers demand that Greece unequivocally define the attitude she will observe should such an eventuality present itself.

Besides the claims to hospitality which the Entente Allies declare, they have no Greece in view of Mr. Venizelos' invitation to them to send a force to Salonika to enable Greece to fulfil her treaty obligations to Serbia, which, however, Greece repudiated, Lord Kitchener or the Entente Ministers are likely to direct the attention of King Constantine and his Government to the fact that the constitutionalism of Greece was guaranteed by France, Russia and Great Britain, and that it was only obtained after Great Britain had ceded the Ionian Islands to that country and the three Powers had agreed to contribute £4,000 ($20,000) yearly for the personal use of the King.

This, it is contended, binds the Greek people to the Entente Allies, and should King Constantine overrule the constitution, which the followers of Mr. Venizelos insist he did when he dissolved the Chamber, it is suggested in some quarters that King Constantine would be reminded that his retention of the throne of Greece depends on the continuance of friendly neutrality toward the Entente Powers.

The Germans, on the other hand, are declared to be assuring the Greek Government that Greece will be protected against the Entente Allies should that country support the Central Powers, and that as evidence of the ability of Austria and Germany to do this they are despatching more submarines to the Mediterranean which could be used against any fleet threatening Greek ports.

Meantime the fight for Serbia proceeds without abatement. The Austro-Germans and Bulgarians mention repeated successes, but it is apparent that their progress is slow, the Serbians now having reached their mountain fortresses in Central Serbia and the roads, or want of roads, making it difficult for the invaders to bring up their heavy artillery, with which they always back up their infantry.

In the South there is little or no change. In the district north-west of Uskub the Serbians still hold the Katchanik defile, barring the Bulgarians from the great plain of Kosovo, while to the south-west of Uskub a desperate struggle has taken place for the possession of Tetovo, which has changed hands several times. The Bulgarians recaptured Tetovo on Sunday, but a report received at the Serbian Legation says the Serbians again have reoccupied the town.

The Bulgarians are reported in great force south-west of Veles, where they hope to check the French advance on that town and in the direction of the Babuna Pass, further west.

Puts Another Face on It

Many a man jauntily takes his cup or two of tea or coffee at a meal and declares that it doesn't hurt him!

But wait until the poisonous drug, caffeine, in tea and coffee begins to show its cumulative effects, and puts a different face on the proposition.

It's a fact anyone can verify, that caffeine hardens the arteries, brings on premature old age, and sallows and wrinkles the skin. Some of the signs are headache, irritability, biliousness, heart flutter, sleeplessness, dizziness, "fog," and so on.

The way out is to quit both tea and coffee, and for a pleasant, healthful beverage use

SOLDIERS WIVES ARE PENALIZED

German Municipal Authorities Make No Allowance for War.

There is little disposition on the part of the municipal authorities in Germany to make allowances on the unusual circumstances due to the war and the old "streng verboten" idea seems as strong as ever, according to reports from several parts of the empire. Even to the wives and other female relatives of the men at the front no favors are shown, and they are fined or imprisoned for the slightest violation of more or less important ordinances. This is evidenced by the following cases printed by the Schlesische Bergwacht of Waldenburg, Silesia, under the title "Disagreeable Pictures of the Present."

"In Weiszstein lives a woman with three children who is obliged to get along with the Government's monthly war allowance of 30 marks, ($7.50,) as she has not been long enough in the town to receive the local pension. Being unable to buy shoes she wears wooden slippers, which naturally make considerably noise on the stairs. Her landlady complained about this noise, and now the poor woman must pay a fine of 6 marks from her scanty income.

"An elderly and extremely delicate woman, whose oldest son and only support has served in the Austrian army since the beginning of the war, has been unable to obtain a single cent from her Government. Her protests to the Austrian consulate are fruitless, presumably because not understood. At last, an effort to get a little money, she made up some little peppermint cakes and sent her youngest son, a school boy, out to sell them. She was ordered to pay a fine for having broken the license law, and not being able to pay it, she must now go to jail.

"At Schwanowaldau, in the district of Landeshut, a certain Herr von Portatius lives upon a lordly estate. This gentleman has ordered his employees to round up all the poor female relatives of soldiers who are trying to add a little to their limited incomes by gathering mushrooms and berries at his lands. Everyone who is caught is fined without mercy, and in case she cannot pay, is sent to jail. Recently a 70 year-old woman had her bag, with its painfully gathered contents, taken from her and was fined in the bargain.

"While looking for rooms in Katzenatz, a soldier's wife was informed by a landlady that no wives of soldiers were wanted and that she only let rooms to women who could prove that their husbands were exempt from military duty."

SIX GUNS ON HUN AEROPLANE

The following description of a German battleplane captured by the Russians and taken to the Russkoe Slovo:

In one of the sectors of our northern front artillery succeeded in bringing down a German aeroplane of quite a new type. It was a biplane, fitted with two frames of steel tubes, and was armed with six guns. Each of these armoured frames contained two machine guns, a light quick firing gun and cases filled with shells. The propelling power is supplied by two 11 h.p. motors. In the middle between the two frames, but a little above them, is the car, also armoured, where the pilot sits.

The crew of the "double-tail" comprises two men, including the pilot, the observer and the machinist.

The machine was captured, thanks to the pluck of one of our airmen who, getting under the murderous fire of the enemy, succeeded by a clever manoeuvre in throwing it within the zone of our fire, at the imminent risk of being shot himself.

A shell struck the lower part of one of the propellers of the German aeroplane, which became uncontrollable and obliged it to descend to earth.

STILL STARVE BELGIUM

Latest Barbarities and Deceptions of Germans Are Exposed

The former Mayor of New York, Hon. George B. McClellan, has been visiting Belgium in charge of German officials. His observation tour was carefully planned and mapped, and he came away highly enthusiastic about what Germany has accomplished in her mission for the elevation of the Belgians. The Honorable ex-Mayor published a glowing account of Belgium rising anew, greater than ever, from her ruins, thanks to German "kultur." But Mr. McClellan was not left long to enjoy credit for his "revelations." The general secretary of the Central Committee of the Belgian Relief Fund, James Gustavus Whitely riddles the superficial assertions of Germans "beneficence" made by McClellan. From a first-hand knowledge of Belgian conditions, Mr. Whitely, himself a neutral American with an official status, shows how the iron hand of the German oppressor in Belgium grips the little country with a merciless clutch, squeezing it until it shrieks.

The facts learned from Mr. Whitely about the present conditions are of absorbing interest. Belgium is being used as a milch-cow for Germany. Germany is collecting from the impoverished Belgians 480,000,000 francs a year, or about $96,000,000. She leaves the Belgians to utter starvation. What the German system is can be guessed from the typical case of the artificial silk mills at Tubize. This concern employed about 7,000 people. In December, 1914, it obtained permission to resume operations on condition that its product should go to the United States. After the mills were in operation the German authorities tore up the agreement and demanded that only a third of the product should go to the United States, the remaining two-thirds to be made into nitro-cellulose (for explosives) for the German Government. The Belgians refused to make explosives to kill their fellow-countrymen. The mills closed down. When the Germans have found it impossible to compel the Belgians to work for them in such factries, they have, in many cases, taken out useful parts of the machinery and sent them to Germany. Business in Belgium under such conditions is at a standstill.

On many occasions the Germans have tried to coerce Belgian workmen into doing work that would release German soldiers for service. At Lucre, in May, 1915, they tried to starve the workmen into submission. As told by Mr. Whitely, the facts are that the Communal officials were forbidden to give relief, in goods or money; all relief officials were imprisoned; and two soldiers with fixed bayonets were sent to each workman's home to arrest him. If the man was not at home the wife or one of the children was taken as hostage. In one case a girl of 14 was taken. The men prisoners were harangued by a German officer who called on them to choose. The alternative was imprisonment in Germany. Every man refused to work. After nine days' bread-and-water diet in a cattle car, the men were sent to a detention camp in Westphalia, where punishment for infraction of the rules was to put a brick in each hand, tie two bricks on the back, and then make the prisoner run for several hours, crossing and re-crossing a small stream with steep banks. In dozens of other cases coercion of this type has been applied to Belgians to make them contribute to German revenues. Germany has burned and pillaged scores of Belgian towns and villages. She has massacred thousands of innocent offensive Belgian men, women and children. She has stifled all Belgian trade and commerce, is his final and parting shot at the pompous New Yorker.

Earlier Test of Entente

Agadir, a seaport in the southern part of Morocco, became the object of international attention in 1911, when Germany announced that the gunboat Panther had been sent to the port "for the protection of German interests" there. In the diplomatic crisis between Germany and France that naturally followed England supported France, and Germany was compelled to acknowledge the supremacy of French claims. In return, however, France ceded to Germany 112,000 square miles in the French Congo.

Bubble Pipes That All Enjoy

A small wooden rack or one of celluloid, such as are sold for holding tooth brushes, a few clay pipes and four yards of bright red baby ribbon, serve to fix up a gay little gift holding promise of fun for the young people. And bubble blowing is not beneath the dignity of their elders; everyone indulges in this pastime.

Two other pipes may be suspended from this rack by shorter lengths of ribbon and the man who prefers to blow smoke to bubbles will like a rack which holds a fresh pipe or one he may offer his friend.

Bootees and a Coat Hanger

The warm looking and dainty bootees shown in the picture will be easy to make by those who understand crocheting. They are crocheted of white zephyr and shaped to fit over the knees. A beading is worked in near the top and narrow pink satin ribbon run through it makes it possible to tie the boots so that they will not slip down.

A novel and very pretty touch is given these bootees by the tiny pink rose buds that are embroidered on them with silk floss.

Little wooden hangers are covered with cotton for a padding and over this light satin ribbon is shirred. The hook is wound with the ribbon and the hanger finished with a pretty bow.

Buckingham's Workshop

One of the finest carpenter's workshops in London is at Buckingham Palace. A little while ago the King had this workshop entirely refitted, and it now contains a splendid electrically-driven turning plant. In many of the rooms at the different Royal residences may be seen substantial, well made pieces of furniture that are the handiwork of the King's carpenter. All the packing cases in which the Royal gifts of flowers, fruit, and game are despatched to various friends of their Majesties and charitable institutions are also made in the workshop at Buckingham Palace, where about 3,000 packing cases are turned out every year.

Austrian Brutality

An Austrian soldier is here shown being punished for speaking disrespectfully to his superior officer. He is strung up by the wrists, his feet being allowed barely to touch a stone which rocks from side to side under his weight, thus throwing a frightful strain upon his wrists, arms and shoulders.

EDITH CAVELL

Room 'mid the martyrs for a deathless name!
Till yesterday, in her how few could know
Black War's white angel, succoring friend and foe—
Whose pure heart harbored neither hate nor blame
When Need or Pity made its sovereign claim.
To-day she is the world's! Its poignant woe,
We thought had been outwept, again doth flow
In tenderest tears that multiply her fame.
Oh, something there is in us yet, more bright
Than Rouen's hungry flames—that could consume
Jeanne's slender limbs but not her spirit's might.
Fate still has noble colors in her loom.
One lonely woman's courage in the night
Has sealed the savage Hohenzollern's doom!

—Robert Underwood Johnson, in New York Times.

Racing and Canada's War

The statement that racing is necessary for the improvement of the breed of horses is open for argument in normal circumstances. Advanced now as a reason why the tracks should not close during the war, it is a pretence that deceives nobody. How could the breed of horse be affected one way or the other by the cancelling of a season's or two season's racing fixtures?

Not much more respectable as an argument is the plea that we need racing and other sports and amusements so that the public may be beguiled from the gloom and sorrow caused by the war. It ought to be nobody's duty at the present time to cause the public to take a more cheerful or optimistic view of the situation. On the contrary, the duty is for us to be rather more than less impressed by the terrible nature of the struggle in which this country is engaged, and with the necessity for making greater efforts and harder sacrifices to ensure ultimate victory. If racing has the effect of distracting the attention of thousands of young Canadians from a contemplation of their own duties and responsibilities in this struggle, nothing further need be said against it.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Tommy "Trains" at Sea

Life drill is one of the most important things the Tommy on a transport has to learn. At any moment the ship might be attacked by hostile craft from air or sea, or fire might break out. In order to be ready for any such event the soldiers are constantly put through rehearsals of their life drill. Suddenly the bugler sounds an alarm. Every man rushes on deck to a place, which has been previously pointed out to him, to await orders. With lightning-like rapidity life-belts are hauled up from below and served out. By the time the Colonel comes round to inspect the life-belt parade, everybody on the ship, with the exception of the invalids, is expected to be attired in a cork jacket. The strictest discipline is maintained. Indeed, until the "Dismiss" sounds, perfect silence has to be observed.

Huns' New Air Weapon

Recent reports show that Germany has put in the air a triplane—that is, an aeroplane with three sets of planes. The machine the Germans have brought into action has three pairs of wings one above the other, and is fitted with four propellers, each driven by an engine of 200 horsepower so that the whole machine has 800 horsepower. Further, it does not carry weapons of the machine gun type generally used by aeroplanes, but much larger guns which fire actual shell, and do much more damage than any machine gun.

Bakers who sell short-weight bread in New Zealand during war time, and who are successfully prosecuted, are compelled to advertise the fact in the newspapers.

Unsightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside, you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years, a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lemon D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Backache

The artist sketched this picture from life in a Toronto blacksmith shop, in order to get the correct pose of the smith at the anvil and shoeing a horse. Is it any wonder that the blacksmith's greatest troubles are backache and derangements of the kidneys? The constant strain on the muscles of the back and kidneys interferes with the filtering action of these organs. The uric acid poisons left in the blood cause pains and aches, backache and rheumatism, and such serious diseases as Bright's disease and hardening of the arteries result.

But it is not the blacksmith alone who is tortured by backache, for there are many occupations in which the continuous strain on the back leads to much suffering, and also to serious disease.

Blacksmiths have always been strong in their praise of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and by telling others of the good results accomplished by this treatment have added much to its popularity among farmers and horsemen generally.

Being direct and prompt in their action, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills appeal to the man of action. The liver is awakened, the bowels aroused and the kidneys strengthened by the influence of this medicine. The filtering and excretory organs lose no time in cleansing the system of the poisonous matter which gives rise to pain and disease. Constipation is overcome, kidney derangements corrected, digestion improved, and you feel fine. Put them to the test when you are feeling out of sorts. Let them prove their value. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

MIKADO IS DEMOCRATIC

KIOTO, Nov. 15.—In days not far distant the people of Japan were forbidden to gaze upon their monarch. When the Divine Ruler passed through the streets houses were closed and barred and windows darkened, and the inhabitants prostrated themselves in silence and in homage.

When the circumstance of history is placed side by side with the modern Summer incidents at Nikko, with an Emperor sauntering about a public thoroughfare enjoying his vacation, while numbers of people passed unknowing, unrecognizing, almost touching him, there is to be had some comparison of the old and the new Japan.

The sauntering Emperor was Yoshihito, who embodied both the ancient sanctity and the new democracy. He wore an ordinary western sack suit of gray, and a Panama hat, such as might be seen on Broadway any day, protected his head from the Nikko sun. No guard was visible, only two members of the household walked behind, and as the Emperor stopped to enjoy some shop window, they entered occasionally to make some purchase. Yoshihito likes to encourage the merchants of the empire. He is a great favorite at those same art shops at Nikko which have attracted so many thousands of American visitors.

Popular belief and a deep reverence for their Emperor as a lineal descendant of the Sun Goddess have invested his person with such an atmosphere of sanctity that the masses of Japanese—the older people especially—logical and practical as they undoubtedly are, do not willingly give ear to reports that their sacred monarch is proficient in French, is fond of billiards, and even occasionally wears a sack suit.

In the course of his short life—he was born in 1879—the Emperor has established more than one precedent to be expected of a monarch not averse to the acquisition of foreign knowledge. Through him more than one tradition of the Court has been blasted. By the imperial house law he attained his majority at the age of 18. A few years later, in 1900, he was married to Princess Sadako, daughter of Prince Kujo. On July 30, 1912, he succeeded to the throne of his ancestors.

The Emperor is endearing himself to his people much as he did his father by skill in simple arts that make a strong appeal. In a country where is held an annual poetic competition directed by the imperial household, skill as a poet (artist he an imperial asset, and the Emperor, by the consent of the judges is so skilled.

Another example of the democracy of the Emperor was furnished last month during the army manoeuvre in Northern Japan. It has been a custom for cities and towns to make lavish expenditures in decoration and festivals during the passage of the monarch. This time Yoshihito issued a request that no special preparation be made for his visit. The people were to go about their business as usual, and make no contribution for decoration and pageant. He wished, he said, to proceed to the manoeuvres simple and quietly.

He Was Thankful.

Friend—What are you thankful for this year, Uncle Rastus?

Uncle Rastus—Well, suh, on de wealth side Ah am thankful foh de things Ah've got, an' on de health side Ah am thankful foh de things Ah haven't got.—Life.

KITCHENER A MATCH FOR WILY ORIENTALS

Resourceful Linguist Spied Upon the Mahdi—His Methods and Thrilling Early Experiences

Away in the early eighties Kitchener was engaged with a surveying expedition near the Dead Sea, when the alarming intelligence was brought by Arab runners of the total massacre of Hicks Pasha's army, a force numbering nearly 10,000 men, by the fanatics of the Mahdi. The natives were immediately thrown into a panic of consternation and excitement, while utter bewilderment ran riot in the minds of those at the head of Egyptian affairs. Communication with the beleaguered districts was well-nigh impossible, but evidence was not wanting that the Mahdi's army was annexing station after station on its victorious route. In the dilemma there was only one thing left to be done, and that was to penetrate to the Mahdi's camp and endeavor to discover his plans, and the possibility of his carrying them out with the forces at his disposal. It was an intensely dangerous scheme. Detection meant a death of the most fiendish nature imaginable, preceded by those horrible atrocities beloved of Oriental minds.

Resource and Courage

Major Kitchener, already well known as a man of extraordinary resource and courage, volunteered for the hazardous mission. Every attempt to dissuade him from entering upon such a terrible dangerous undertaking was futile, he was irrevocably determined on going. Shortly afterwards an Arab date-seller might have been seen leaving Korti, apparently pursuing his humble vocation in a quiet, businesslike manner. It was Herbert Kitchener, and for an extensive period he was to all intents and purposes completely lost to civilization. The stirring adventures, hairbreadth escapes, and the innumerable thrilling experiences which befell him during that terrible time are indelibly engraved on the mind of that dauntless soldier. Repeatedly he was a target for bands of prowling robbers (he was twice, at least, shot at by Bedouins), and not always did he escape with a whole skin. It is said that a number of years ago a bullet dropped from the back of his throat on to his plate, having been embedded there by the Remington of a cowardly Dervish.

Many of Lord Kitchener's early adventures will never be known—he is not apt to talk of his own prowess, and there are many reasons why it is not desirable that the method pursued by him so successfully should become known to those whom he so cleverly, to use a popular expression, hoodwinked. But it need hardly be added that disguise in his case would have been useless had he not devoted weeks and months of patient study to acquiring the curious and complicated languages of the various tribes with whom he was to be brought in contact. While in Palestine he took the trouble to acquire a practical knowledge of the Turkish and Arabic languages, and with the exception of the celebrated Sir Richard Burton, probably no Briton has ever accomplished more extraordinary feats in the way of deceiving clever and astute Eastern potentates, ever on the lookout for foes in disguise.

Spy Caught Spies

Indeed, it is not too much to say that to his extensive knowledge of the native habits and ways, and his ability to converse freely in almost any dialect spoken north of the White Nile, Lord Kitchener frequently owed his life. These qualities were never utilized to a better purpose than on that occasion when by a clever ruse he brought about the doom of a couple of spies. It was a case of setting a spy to catch a spy, and Kitchener came out on top. The occasion was when Wolseley's belated force was advancing up the Nile to the relief of General Gordon. The patrol, when going their rounds, discovered two suspiciously-looking characters prowling about, and immediately ran them into the guard tent. Yet another was captured a few minutes afterwards, and he likewise, was unceremoniously bundled in beside his fellow-countrymen.

Quite an animated and excited talk immediately ensued between the three a talk which lasted for nearly an hour, after which the tent door was quietly opened and Herbert Kitchener stepped outside. "I am going to the General's quarters," he explained to the astonish sentry. "They are Dervish spies, these two scoundrels." They dug their own graves the following morning.

Lord Cromer can speak Russian fluently. In addition, he speaks French, German and Italian, and has a considerable knowledge of Arabic. He was able to speak French fluently when he was five years old.

King George's Little Joke

A story has come out of a rather amusing incident which occurred at a banquet given in honor of the King and Queen of Italy on the occasion of their last visit to London. King George loves his little joke, and, as the Lord Mayor sat down after his laudatory remarks regarding the Royal visitors, His Majesty, turning to Queen Helena, said, sotto voce, "Have you got your speech ready?" "My speech!" gasped the Queen, in consternation, but her momentary distress was relieved when she saw the twinkle in the mischievous eyes of the King.

AUSTRALIA'S NOVEL CONSCRIPTION SYSTEM

Compulsory Service For Every Fit Youth Over Long Period Produces Hardened Marksmen

In Australia they refer to the product of their new defense system as the "C.M.F." That means the Commonwealth Military Forces. Politically, the outstanding feature of the "C.M.F." is that it was called into being by a Labor ministry. The Australian Prime Minister who promulgated the Defence Bill upon which the present system was built was an ex-coal miner; the Minister of Defense was a carpenter.

The Australian system is of comparatively recent growth. In 1870 all Imperial troops had been withdrawn and in their places were formed small groups of permanent professional forces around which it was intended to build an organization of citizen soldiery. An effort was made to operate this scheme successfully by means of a partly paid militia. In conjunction with this militia there was tried a scheme for military instruction in school for boys.

The step was taken at the close of the Boer War of opening opportunity for military training for any citizen of proper age and physical condition who desired it. Whether because of poor administration or lack of incentive, the system established in 1903 was found to be so unsatisfactory that in 1909 a law was passed making military training compulsory. This law did not become operative until June 30, 1911. During the intervening time enlistment continued to be voluntary.

Few Exempt; All Surprised

When the new law went into effect in 1911, even with the preparation that had been made for enforcing its provisions, the departure from the old theories of national defence was a most radical one. The male citizens of Australia awoke to the fact that from the age of eighteen to the age of sixty, they were members of the army defence and bound to military service should war come, but only within the limits of Australia. Those citizens between twelve and twenty-six years of age, except those who could take advantage of the exemptions in the Defence Act, found themselves compelled to undergo certain prescribed periods of military training in the several branches of service.

Must Pass All Tests

From the time that he reaches July 1st of his twelfth year, every Australian youth who has been found to be morally, mentally and physically fit is forced to give strict attention to this matter of muscle-fitness. At the time that he enters the ranks of the twelve-year-old cadets, he receives from his government an outfit of soldier's clothes. Ninety hours out of each year for two consecutive years he devotes to military training. If he passes the prescribed test at the end of each of the first two years, he is allowed to become a senior cadet. His senior cadetship lasts for four years. Each year he must receive not less than four 4-hour drills, twelve 2-hour drills, and twenty-four 1-hour drills. His equipment is extended to include a cadet rifle and belt, and if his marksmanship develops to a stipulated point he is allowed to take part in target practise with a service rifle. During the senior cadet's four years his instruction progresses from the manual of arms and close order drill into open-order exercises and the study of minor tactics. Through the periods of both his junior and senior cadetships his natural tendencies are watched, and he is encouraged toward the Branch of the service in which he seems to take the strongest interest.

At nineteen provided he has passed successfully each year's examination, the Australian cadet becomes a member of the citizen army. He is supplied by the Government with a complete war outfit. Each year, until he is twenty-six, he must present himself for not less than sixteen days of training, of which eight must be in camps of continuous instruction. Attendance at one muster parade is all that is required of him during his last year. Then he is discharged from active service. His discharge at twenty-six depends upon his ability to present twelve annual certificates of proficiency. Failure at examination in any one year means that the year's work must be repeated until the examination is successfully met. He is liable for service until he is sixty and severe punishment is provided for reprisals or hindrances to serve.

That is the Australian system. Already it has produced soldiers in large numbers so superior in body and in military knowledge as to be selected for service where the fighting has been the most violent. It is expected that the system, under normal conditions, will maintain constantly a defensive force of 150,000 cadets and 120,000 citizen soldiers. The annual cost in the neighborhood of $15,000,000.—Harper's Weekly.

MARRIAGE MOURNERS.

Rites of a German Club When One of Its Members Weds.

There are other places besides All Souls' college, Oxford, that penalize a member who marries. Many readers have doubtless heard of the Bachelors' club in London. When a member so far forgets the principles of the club as to marry he is promptly expelled. By payment of a fine of $125 he can, however, retain an honorary membership, but of course he cannot enjoy the privileges of this select band of nonmarrying men.

There is a similar organization in Germany—the Junggesellen club. Whenever there comes to the officials of this club any intimation that a member contemplates matrimony he is immediately summoned for trial in the club court, with the president as judge. The culprit is allowed to plead in extenuation of his offense, and upon his skill in presenting such plea depends the amount of his fine, which ranges from $100 to $1,000.

The humorous feature of the fine consists in the purpose to which the money is applied. The money is devoted to a dinner, whereat all members appear in mourning attire. At the conclusion of the repast the president solemnly reads the sentence of expulsion, and the delinquent is led from the room amid the groans and lamentations of his erstwhile clubfellows.—London Tit-Bits.

LUXURY IN ARGENTINA.

The Big Story They Tell of a Buenos Aires Hotel Charges.

The hotels of Buenos Aires are fairly good and very expensive. One of the cheapest rooms I saw in the Plaza hotel was $7 a day, European style. There are good Spanish hotels with rooms from $2 a day upward.

The Plaza is, perhaps, the most cosmopolitan of all the hosteiries of the city. In its ballroom and its drawing room I was reminded of the Waldorf-Astoria. The meals are a little higher than in the big hotels of New York city. But there are numerous small restaurants where good refreshments may be had at reasonable prices.

As an example of the charges in the big hotels of Buenos Aires I may quote a story told me by an Argentine official. He said that some years ago a commission of European ambassadors was entertained by the Argentine government at the Bristol hotel on the Avenida de Mayo and that the bill for soap and perfumery was $15,000 a week. Nobody seemed to complain and apparently everybody was satisfied.

Luxuries seem to be necessities to the Argentines, for I was told that the tariff on champagne is only 2 per cent. while that on a plow is 50 per cent.—National Magazine.

The Shrewd Advertiser.

The thoughtful man thinks ahead. The prudent man profits by his ability to forecast the future as well as to scrutinize the present. One of the most prominent advertisers in the country says he makes it a rule to increase his advertising appropriation whenever business slackens and he doubles and trebles it in times of severe business depression. This is his logical conclusion: "The new customers that I get when times are hard I always keep when times become good. They come to me largely from those who lose them because they fail to continue their publicity campaigns. A business depression in this country never lasts long and it is always seed time for me. The harvest follows when prosperity returns." It is a wise man who knows his own business better than the other man does.

Preferred the Men to Talk.

A Philadelphia writer who belongs to the Society of Friends is a charming story teller. Here is one from his store of Quaker anecdotes.

"The story goes," he said, "that loud talking among the congregation once interrupted a certain Friends' meeting. The women at this meeting sat on one side of the room, the men on the other. The speaker when the talking became intolerable paused and looked at the audience reproachfully.

"A woman, rising, said to him:

"'I beg thee to take notice that the talking you object to comes not from our, but from the men's, side of the house.'

"The speaker smiled upon her. 'So much the better, good woman; so much the better,' he said. 'It will be sooner over.'"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MY LADY DAFFODIL.

How She Happened to Wear Her Yellow Gown That Night.

By VIRGINIA BLAIR.
[Copyright, by Associated Literary Press.]

In Miss Priscilla's garden there was a clump of daffodils.

"I am going to pick all of them," said Judy Perkins, who was Miss Priscilla's niece.

"Please don't, Judy," said Miss Priscilla faintly.

"Why not?"

"Because," was Miss Priscilla's woman's reason.

Judy looked at her. "Tell me," she urged. "You are blushing, and you can't have any secrets from me, Aunt Pris."

Miss Priscilla beamed. It was such a new delight to be bossed by this beautiful being who had come all the way from Europe to the little country village to see for the first time her father's sister.

"Tell me," Judy repeated and drew the little lady down beside her on the garden bench.

Judy listened intently while Miss Priscilla stammered out her little romance. "So you and he always sat on this bench by the daffodil bed, and you wore a little yellow dimity gown, and he called you 'My Lady Daffodil?'"

"Yes." Miss Priscilla's voice was dreamy. "And he used to quote some verses that ended:

"And then my heart with pleasure fills
And dances with the daffodils."

"Why didn't you marry him?" Judy murmured.

"There was a misunderstanding," Miss Priscilla said, "and he went away, and I haven't heard from him since, and that was twenty years ago."

Judy enveloped the shabby black figure in a big hug. "Dear Aunt Pris," she said, "and you have been alone and lonely all these years, while I have been having a good time."

"You couldn't know," Miss Priscilla said, "that after father and mother died I invested all of my money in a mining scheme that failed."

"No; we didn't know," Judy said, "and you have scrimped and saved and gone without pretty things while I have simply squandered piles of money on gowns."

"The one you have on is a beauty," Miss Priscilla said. "You look like a rose."

Judy laughed. "The rose and the daffodil," she sang. "We belong in your garden, Aunt Pris."

"Miss Priscilla," said some one from the other side of the fence, "may I have a rose from your garden?"

"I told you last night you couldn't, Bobbie," Judy retorted.

"Don't quarrel," Miss Priscilla expostulated. "Come up presently and have lunch with me."

As she left them Judy stood looking after the slender, old fashioned figure. "Did she ever tell you about the daffodils, Bobbie?"

"No."

"He was her lover and he went away—and his name is Constantius Mercer."

"Do you know," Bobbie said, "there's a man at the hotel named Mercer—C. Mercer?"

Judy grasped his hands across the fence. "Bobbie, boy," she said, "suppose it should be the same one—and suppose he is coming back here to look up Aunt Pris."

"She must have changed awfully in that time," Bobbie said. "She—she isn't very pretty now, you know, Judy."

"She's beautiful," Judy said defiantly. "Her hair is lovely and her eyes"—

"Constantius is probably old and bald and ugly—but of course that doesn't count."

"Well, one doesn't exactly look for beauty in a man"—

"If one did one might be disappointed," Judy murmured pointedly. Then she went on, "If it is Constantius he'll probably be over this evening, Bobbie."

"Why."

"Because she said he always came at twilight, and—and lovers don't forget such things, Bobbie."

"Don't they?" Bobbie demanded with some interest. "Will you remember that I always came at high noon in time for lunch, Judy?"

"Aunt Pris," Judy said a little later when they were at lunch, "I'm going to get the dinner tonight and I want it late. Bobbie's coming and I'm going to put on style."

Bobbie looked up in amazement, but Judy's eye warned him. "You are to come at 7:30," she said. "I want to show you what a fine cook I am."

After Bobbie left Miss Priscilla protested.

"Please," Judy began, "let me get the dinner and—and I want to dress you up and have you play lady for once in your life. You are going to wear a pretty gown tonight," Judy said decidedly. "Come on upstairs and choose one, Aunt Pris."

Once in Judy's room that enthusiastic maiden dumped on the bed a dozen gowns before she found the one she sought.

"There," she said at last, as she took down a fluttering fluffy thing of pale yellow chiffon. "Put that on and see how you look, Aunt Pris."

"Oh, my dear," Miss Priscilla protested. But Judy commanded, and soon Miss Priscilla was encased in the wonderful gown.

"But your hair's wrong," Judy decided and pulled out hairpins and curled and patted and puffed the shining brown locks into a wonderful coiffure—topped with a gold comb.

"Why, it's just the way I used to wear it," Miss Priscilla said.

"And now you are to take a book and go down to the garden seat and stay there until I call you to dinner."

A half hour later Bobbie appeared at the kitchen door.

"Judy," he said in an awed voice, "I didn't know clothes could make such a difference."

"What?" asked Judy, abstracted. She was deep in the mysteries of mayonnaise.

"Miss Priscilla is down by the daffodil bed in a yellow gown, and she looks like a girl with her hair done that way. And Constantine is headed for the garden. He is a good looking old duffer, Judy."

"I hope he has piles of money," Judy said.

"I'll run back and dress," Bobbie said. "But I wish you'd let me get the Lady of the Roses if he gets My Lady Daffodil, Judy."

"Go 'way," said Judy, but her eyes were kind.

There were golden shadows across the grass as Bobbie went toward the gate, and Miss Priscilla's gown made a spot of gold in the dusky corner where the daffodils grew. And at the gate Bobbie met Constantius, but the man scarcely bowed. His eyes were on that golden spot in the dusky corner.

"My Lady Daffodil," he said softly.

Miss Priscilla turned, started up, and her eyes were like stars.

"Connie"—she gasped, and then Bobbie fled.

And when he crept back later he found shades on the silver candlesticks.

He produced a great bunch of daffodils and Judy put them in a silver bowl in the center of the table.

"Judy, this is my old friend Constantius Mercer," said a happy voice.

Constantius held Judy's hand and looked down at her. "Priscilla and I have been wondering how you happened to make her wear that yellow gown today."

"A little bird told me you were at the hotel."

"A little bird?"

"Bob-o-link," said Bobbie from the other side of the table.

"Oh," and Constantius grasped the other's hand. "I told you I knew Miss Perkins?"

"Yes," said Bobbie, "and I told Judy, and thereby hangs the tale."

But Constantius was not listening—hand in hand with Miss Priscilla he was looking at the daffodils that nodded under the golden light.

And Judy, watching the old lovers, turned her eyes presently on her young lover and then her hand went out to him and behind the backs of the others he bent and kissed her.

Willing, but Helpless.

"Shave," was all he said, and he snapped it out as if he wanted to be let alone during the operation.

"You oughter have a hair cut, sir. Needs it badly," said the barber.

"No; I want a shave," said the man.

Everything was quiet for the next few minutes, and the barber scraped away. Then, the bristles removed, the barber ran his hands through his hair, preparatory to combing it. That seemed to remind him of something.

"Hair's getting thin, sir. Shall I put on some follicular freshener?" he inquired.

"No!" snapped the man.

The barber fussed about some more and then, "Try a facial massage—just what you need," he said.

"No; I only want the shave," said the man firmly.

This appeared to get past the barber, for as he was flirting with the combs and brushes and looking over the customer's cranial development he remarked in a friendly and kindly tone, just as if the idea had that moment occurred to him, "You oughter have your hair cut, sir."

The tired man's patience was all gone now. "Hang it," he exclaimed, "if you are so anxious to cut somebody's hair, why don't you cut your own? It's four times as long as mine."

Sadly the barber looked at himself in the glass. His locks were best described by the mid-Victorian terms "ambrosial and umbrageous."

"If I could I would," he answered.—New York Press.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N. B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat troubles and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

GIBRALTAR IS TAXED BY FLOOD OF WORK

Not much is heard of Gibraltar in the press, but, according to the Colonial Journal, few places outside the battlefield have been so much affected by the war. The ceaseless patrol of the straits, the examining of all ships passing through the straits, the arrangements for the removal of contraband, the internment of enemy reservists and the institution of a prize court at Gibraltar, have severely taxed the local navy and military establishments At the same time, the work of the civilian officials have also, as was natural, been largely increased, especially in the case of the port, police, customs and law departments. From all sections of the community the government received loyal the enthusiastic assistance.

The position in August was one of some difficulty. Spain, on which the colony had hitherto largely relied for food supplies, had placed an embargo on the export of all such commodities and prices rose in the Gibraltar market. There was an immediate rush to withdraw deposits from the government saving bank, and from the saving bank the Anglo-Egyptian bank, and it became speedily evident that the withdrawal of the bulk of these deposits might well be anticipated.

The bank note ordinance was immediately enacted, and the issue of currency notes of values ranging from 50 cents to $250 was effective at once in restoring public confidence and checking the run on the banks. The note issue has proved a complete success.—Exchange.

Franz Abt, the song writer, long since passed to the beyond, was a surprising gourmand. A goose, he used to say, "is a pretty bird, but it has one great fault it is a little too much for one, and much too little for two."

Coming out of a restaurant one day, looking supremely happy, Herr Kappelmeister, said a friend to him, "you seem to have dined well." "Yes, I had a fair dinner," was "turkey." "And was there a good company around the board?" "Yes, good but small; just myself and the turkey and myself."

LABOR SHORTAGE TO FOLLOW WAR SAYS ENGINEER

Man Saving Devices to Be in Great Demand and Women To Rise in Value

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Cheap labour will no longer exist in Europe after the war, according to the views expressed by F. C. Cornet, one of the most prominent Belgian engineers, in the American Machinist. He says typewriters and labour saving equipment for office uses will be in great demand and that domestic labour saving machinery will also come into its own. The United States, which has specialized in both these branches, will most probably be called upon to supply these demands.

Further, M. Cornet is of the opinion that the lack of skilled male labour will result in "women coming into their own," and there will be a great demand for them to do the work hitherto reserved for their husbands and brothers. He says in part:

"Do American manufacturers realize what an enormous amount of machinery of all kinds will be needed in Europe during the reconstruction period that will follow the war? I have especially in mind the intensely industrial regions of Belgium and northern France, where the daily fighting will soon complete the annihilation of anything that perchance may still be standing.

Reconstruction to Come.

"When the European horror comes to an end, construction in the devastated regions will not be long in starting in earnest. Money in abundance will be forthcoming, no matter what amount is required. Those who know by whom the Belgian and French industries are controlled have no doubt on this point. It is probable that even now plans have already been made by some to repair the damage as soon as circumstances permit. So far as the coal industry is concerned, I would not be surprised if they began hoisting coal out of their deep shafts and making coke long before the last gun of the war has been fired. The steel plants, foundries, machine shops and glass works will not be far behind

Labour to Be Higher.

"Before proceeding further I want to give it as my opinion that European manufacturers will, after the war, attach more importance to the labour-saving devices than they have done heretofore. It is not that labour saving was ever considered by them as of little women. Labour never was as cheap in Europe as we have been accustomed to think it was. It never was cheap enough, at any rate, to justify manufacturers in disregarding it as an item of cost. During the last eighteen years the labour question has gradually grown in Europe until it is now one of great magnitude.

"Although the European manufacturers have always recognized the importance of labour saving machinery, they never did it to the point of maintaining their plans in the same state of up to dateness their American brethren have always been in the habit of doing.

"After the war labour in Europe will be scarcer and infinitely poorer quality than at any time since the close of the Napoleonic wars. If, as prophesied here, the industries re-start before the war is over, while the men are still with the army, the manufacturers will have to be satisfied for the time being with no other labour but the women and the poorest class of men the old and the crippled

Women to Come Into Own.

"In writing these lines attention has been paid only to the mining and manufacturing industries. But it is not hard to understand that the same economical conditions that will affect the shop and the mine will bear as heavily on all places, high or low, where man or woman is employed—public and private offices, banks, and stores, hotels and private houses. Woman will come into her own. The more educated ones will find the public and private offices and the banks no longer closed to them. They will move up from the stores and the shops, where they have been confined before. To fill their places the storekeepers and shop owners will offer such attractive wages to the class from which domestic servants are recruited that this most unpopular branch of employment will soon be deserted."

SOONER ONE DEAD HERO THAN DOZEN LIVE COWARDS

ST. JOHN, N.B., Nov. 16.—"My boy is dead, but he died the death of a hero," said Mrs. James Glass of Spar Cove Road, St. John, when informed that her son Pte. Walter H. Glass of the 26th Battalion, had been killed in action on October 27.

"I would sooner have one dead hero than a dozen live cowards in my family," she continued. "Of course we shall greatly miss him but our sorrow will be tinged with pride to the knowledge that he was no coward.

"My two other boys are doing their bit, one in the same battalion and another as a munition worker in England, my husband has tried three times to enlist but he has been rejected and my only regret is that I am not a man so I could take the place of my boy who has been killed.

Afflicted with Lame Back
THREE YEARS AGO
COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR.

Women are coming to understand that weak, lame and aching backs from which they suffer so much excruciating pain and agony are due to wrong action of the kidneys.

The kidneys are overtaxed—given more work than they can do, and when the back aches and pains it is hard for a woman to look after her household duties, for no woman can be strong and well when the kidneys are out of order.

On the first sign of any weakness in the back Doan's Kidney Pills should be taken. They go right to the seat of the trouble, cure the weak, aching back, and prevent any serious kidney trouble liable to follow.

Mrs. L. Gonshaw, 683 Manning Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I take great pleasure in writing you, stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills. About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep the floor. I was advised to use Doan's Kidney Pills, and before I had used one box there was a great improvement, and my back was completely cured. I highly recommend 'Doan's' for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

SOME VIEWS ON SOAP.

Difference of Opinion as to Using It on One's Face.

Here comes Health Officer Ford with advice to use soap. He says it does not injure the complexion, and that it increases the general cleanliness of the race.

On the face of the advice Health Officer Ford appears to be very old-fashioned. Modern exquisities shun the use of soap, except in the bath and for purposes of removing difficult dirt from the hands. Soap on a pretty face is almost sacrilege. Warm water and washcloths are relied on to remove all soil from delicate complexions without the danger of soapy alkalies.

But in reality the doctor is new-fashioned. For our old heroes and heroines did not even know the meaning of soap. Laura, Berengaria, Beatrice, Rosamund, and Marguerite lived before soap was invented, yet they were cleanly damsels, inspirations of poets, wielders of iron sway over men of brains. The ancient—Sappho, Ashasia, Cornelia, and even Poppaea—never dreamed of such a thing as soap.

On the whole Dr. Ford must be classed as a mediaevalist. He is neither ancient nor modern. And there is no likelihood that his advice will have the slightest effect on the users and nonusers of soap.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

GIRLS! HAVE A MASS OF BEAUTIFUL HAIR, SOFT, GLOSSY, WAVY

25 cent bottle destroys dandruff and doubles beauty of your hair

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing, your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any, that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment, that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

Curious Rites For Brahmans Killed In War

Correspondent Describes Weird Ritual at Cremation of Indian Soldier

Sussex Downs near Brighton, Eng. Nov. 1.—"Ram Ram satya hai; Om Ka nam satya hai." It is the funeral chant of the far east, intoned many times a day now, thanks to the war, on the picturesque Sussex Downs of England.

Just as the sun drives its first golden rays through the haze of early morning a strange procession of barefooted, turbaned figures, chanting in measured tones that rise and fall whinefully along the valley, ascends the frassy slope and deposits on the ground its burden, a form swathed in folds of flowered creton and covered with white chrysanthemums.

You are witnessing the funeral rites at the creation of a Brahman of the Arya Somaj, whose ashes will go to his people in far India and be scattered on the waters of his favorite native river. Brahmins are never buried.

On the crest of the hill before the chanting mourners is the "ghat"—crematorium; a small enclosure sheltered by a corrugated iron screen. A stately Brahman steps forth from among the gesticulating mourners, and unlocks the gate, disclosing three platforms of cement. The funeral party enters, carrying the body. The first platform is carefully cleaned and sprinkled with water. Thus it is purified for the reception of the dead. Heaps of wooden blocks now are piled upon it in the form of a coffin.

Then follows the ritual. The mourners surround the body in a semi-circle. The flowered creton is drawn, revealing the peaceful, bronze-pale features of a youth. The jet hairs falls back straight from the forehead. The face is sprinkled with cleansing water, then drops of honey and ghee— (clarified butter made from Buffalo's milk)—are given to the lips.

Squatting on their haunches, the mourners, hands folded, eyes downcast, chant—first murmur, then a soft-drawn veil, then shrill sounds like the howling of the wind, and finally a shout. While this is repeated many times, comes the burning. Ghee is poured upon the pyre. Raisins, almonds and other foods are scattered liberally over the body.

The brahman ritual, which consecrates death unto fire, stipulates that four things precede the burning—odiferous, nutritive, sweet and curative.

The body now is laid gently upon its platform and covered with wood and straw. Burning camphor is poured on each corner and in the centre of the pyre and a mass of flame leaps upward from the slab. Ghee, fruits, scents, saffrons, and spices are fed to the blaze by the mourners; and to the weird; chanted dirge the Brahman's body is consumed.

To-morrow his ashes will be taken from the ghat and placed in a box addressed to India. A photograph, taken after death, accompanies the box. Thus will the parents know that their Brahman offspring died for England.

BODY OF DOCTOR LOST LAST MAY, IS FOUND

PRINCETON, Mass., Nov. 16.—The body of Dr. Charles R. Richardson, of Cleveland, for whom search had been made since May, was found by the side of Mount Wachuset. Persons who knew Dr. Richardson said the identification was established by means of a bank book in the pocket of a coat picked up nearby.

Dr. Richardson disappeared May 22, during a tramp on the mountain in company with his father, William Richardson, from whom he separated to get a drink from a spring a short distance from their path.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S TUCKED SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.

Hand work is one of the features of the handsomest waists of the present season and it always adds a richness that nothing else can replace. Of course, there are very few women who will make tucks by hand in any but a lingerie waist, and indeed in other materials machine work generally looks better, but in the model which we show there is a chance for the needlewoman who is both skilful and well supplied with time.

This is a design which will look exceptionally well on stout women, as the trimming feature, the tucks, is not one which adds to the bulk of the garment. Realizing this fact the designer has carried the model into the extra sizes, so that slender and stout alike may benefit by it.

The closing is in front and at each side of it is a group of tiny tucks running from neck to belt. Further over toward the shoulder is another group of tucks, but these are short and end at the line of the bust, or just above it.

A really novel feature is the treatment of the sleeve, which fits the arm loosely and is inserted with a plain, regular size armhole but at the top is extended in a tab to the edge of the neck. This makes a little shoulder yoke, which is tucked, the tucks running down the outer side of the arm to the wrist or elbow, according to the length adopted for the sleeve.

At the neck is a handsome collar, and cuffs which correspond in style finish the sleeve when short.

In addition to batiste or other lingerie material wash silk, crepe de Chine, pongee and other soft fabrics are liked for these waists, while the collar and cuffs are usually of muslin, organdie or piqué.

The waist pattern, No. 7280, is cut in sizes 34 to 48 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material, with 3 yards of edging.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural colour and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Everybody uses this old, famous recipe, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

German Danger Over Says Russian Staff

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The following statement from a high authority representing the views of the Russian staff regarding the Russian military situation, has been received here from the correspondent of the Times at Russian headquarters:

"From May till October the Russian army has been subjected to uninterrupted blows along a front of 700 miles. The Austro-Germans have applied every possible means, not excepting such as are forbidden by international treaties, in order to increase the pressure against us. Masses of their troops were flung against this front and sent to destruction regardless of losses. Military history does not afford another example of such pressure.

"During three months of continuous and prolonged action the high qualities and the mettle of our troops under the difficulties and arduous conditions of retreat have been demonstrated afresh. Notwithstanding his obstinacy in fighting and his persistency in carrying out manoeuvres the enemy is still confronted by army which full retains its strength and morale and its ability not only to offer staunch and successful resistance but to assume the offensive and inflict blows, which has been demonstrated by the events of recent days.

"This affords the best proof that the Austro-Germans have failed to destroy or even disorganize our army. Seeing that they failed in that effort during five months which were most favourable to them, it would be impossible for them to repeat the Galician and Vistula exploits now that the successes of the Allies in the west have complicated the strategical position.

"The crisis has passed favourably for us. We issued safely from a difficult position in the advanced Vistula theatre, where we were enveloped on three sides, and now stand based on the centre of our empire unexhausted by war. It is true that there is still much fierce, determined fighting ahead; there may be movements rearward, but there certainly will be advance also.

"Our army lives in expectation of a general offensive and looks with full confidence to the armies of its allies. It will march boldly and cheerfully forward conscious that in so doing it is defending the interests of our country and the interests of our allies.

"A stirring struggle with the forces of nature has schooled the Russians to hardships and ingrained in them the instinct to hasten to the succor and relief of a brother in need. Hence an appeal from our allies will always had a warm response from the Russian army."

The correspondent remarks that the closing phrase, referring as it doubtless does to Serbia, typifies the deep seated instinct of the Russian to respond to blood ties.

"CASCARETS" BEST IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS, SICK, CONSTIPATED

Best for Liver and Bowels, Bad Breath, Bad Colds, Sour Stomach

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet, breath right, complexion rosy and your liver and bowels regular for months.

MODERN TROUSERS JUST 100 YEARS OLD

Men have worn various forms of bifurcated nether garments since the beginning of recorded history, but it is asserted upon reliable authority that the first trousers of modern cut were worn by a London tailor in 1815. Aided and abetted by the Duke of Wellington, this enemy of the sex and the human race made the unspeakable garment fashionable and men have been in bondage in trousers ever since.

If there is something the direct opposite of a monument it ought to be erected—or dug—to that London tailor. It is recorded that he was mobbed upon his first appearance in public wearing his diabolical invention. It is difficult to understand the leniency of the Britisher of that day in permitting the fellow to escape with his life. It is even more difficult to understand how the wretched garment was allowed to come into general use.

It is chronicled that the Duke of Wellington himself was refused admittance to a ballroom when he appeared in long trousers. This awakened a suspicion that the pungacious hero of Waterloo thereupon used all his power and prestige to make the men of Europe, which he claimed to have saved, wear the sartorial abomination. The duke, one fancies, was a covert to what is now called "efficiency." He was mad about the saving of time, motion and energy. And the sole appeal in long trousers was in the fact that they enabled a man to dress—or rather to cover himself—in about half the time required to knee breeches and stockings.

But the duke was a poor logician, at that. If the saving of time and energy were the sole desideratum, the kimona has trousers beaten. As a matter of fact there has never been any reasonable excuse for trousers. They offend art and utility. Perhaps the reason for their being is that man despairing of rivaling woman in loveliness, determined to make himself so ugly as to fascinate by the weird horror of his ensemble.

Any man who suggests that the centenary of long trousers be celebrated will, of course, be shot at sunrise. However, in second thought, it is clear that the only adequate way now to punish the inventor of the garment is to represent him by means of a statue of heroic size in the act of wearing trousers. Imagine with what glee any self-respecting, long-suffering and revengeful sculptor would create such a statue of the enemy of man and of the sacred art of Phidias and Michaelangelo.—Chicago News.

THE CAUSE OF ANAEMIA

It is universally known that iron is a very important element of the blood, and lack of it is the direct cause of run-down conditions and anaemia. It may interest our readers to know that Druggists McDermid & Jury, of this town, have in Vinol a reliable, constitutional remedy for such conditions. Vinol supplies iron to the blood in its most soluble state, then there's the nourishing properties of beef peptone and the medicinal curative extractives of fresh cod livers, without oil, all dissolved in a pure native tonic wine. That's what makes Vinol so successful in overcoming run-down and anaemic conditions.

CONCERNING "DRUNKS."

Maiden Judge Defines Three Stages of Inebriety.

Judge Riley has defined the three stages of inebriation as follows:

"A social drunk," said the Judge, "is a man who is simply merry; a staggering drunk is one who is unsteady on his feet; a dead drunk is one who is unable to move."

You see, the Malden Judge defines one more class of inebriates than Judge Emmons did when the latter divided them into men who were too drunk to be permitted to ride on a street car and those who weren't.

Apparently, Judge Emmons's ruling no longer prevails, for it is a common sight on certain divisions nowadays to behold a man too intoxicated to sit upright occupying a car seat while women are standing, or else the offending one is filling the car with howls of maudlin oratory. The progress of the war seems to be in the favorite topic with these street car orators.—Boston Post.

Drug Clerk Tells How To Cure Indigestion

Recommends to Sufferers the Best Stomach Remedy in Peterborough To-day.

"It is a wonder some of us have stomachs left," remarked a well-known drug clerk recently. "While all drug stores sell a score or more of stomach remedies for which there is a wide demand, most of them are just poison pills which aid digestion at the cost that is in the stomach at the present time. They have no curative or strengthening effect on the stomach at all, and of course do not reach or cure the cause. So the sufferer keeps on coming here and buying and using them until they are real chronic dyspeptics. When anyone really asks my advice I swear by and recommend ordinary saturated magnesia, which does not digest the food at all but acts as an antacid and sweetens the sour, fermenting contents of the stomach. That stops the pain, heartburn, sour risings, and bloating, fullness, etc., in just a few minutes, and the stomach digests its food with as little trouble as in the proper way.

"Doctors make mistakes sometimes, too," he continued. "My own aunt had all kinds of trouble with her stomach for years. She bought and used several styles of digestive pills but got worse right along naturally she would. Finally she went to a doctor who nearly scared her to death by telling her that she had cancer of the stomach. She came to me with her prescription and told me what he said. I thought it was nonsense. I sent her to another doctor whom I know very well, and he didn't tell her anything, but just gave her this same thing, bisurated magnesia. She took it two weeks and never has had any stomach trouble since, and that's three years ago. She's my own aunt and I know this for a fact. Yes a lot of bisurated magnesia is sold in Peterborough. All the druggists have it, I suppose, and all you take is a teaspoonful after every meal. It's all right."

An Important Distinction

An instructor of the Allegheny County Teachers' Institute has brought up a question for discussion that should prove of popular interest. He pointed out the difference between scholarship and education. Certainly an understanding of that difference is of the utmost importance to every individual. Here is how the instructor defined it:

"Scholarship deals with what other people have done. It treats of what your parents and grandparents accomplished. Education deals with what you can do; education is what a boy can do with what he knows, and nothing that the boy knows is education unless he can use it. Scholarship boasts and education boosts; scholarship drills and education thrills; intelligence drills and education and knowledge typifies scholarship. Education is the getting of a grip of things."

The word "knowledge" has so many uses that care must be taken in considering it in the clause "knowledge typifies scholarship." Here, returning to the opening sentence of the quotation, knowledge must refer to an accumulation of things 'known' by others and which the scholar too frequently "learns" by rote. But mark the difference when it comes to what the boy "knows." This implies that he has come into an understanding of it and here is a knowledge that is "educational" because it can be applied. Always distinguish between the knowledge that comes to one at first hand, and through understanding, and that which represents what is known by others. Remember also that "learning" is derived at second hand from books or other artificial source. Now read the following a translation from the sayings of the Chinese sage, Lao Tsze, 650-504 B.C., which we regard as an excellent summary on this phase of the topic:

"The knowing are not most learned.

"The most learned do not know.

"For knowledge is grown from thoughts alone.

"While learning from others must grow."

But we are still far from through with the subject. The most learned and even those who know may yet be fools. This brings us to the question of wisdom. "Knowledge is the accumulation of facts; wisdom is the right use of these facts."

Now how is it with you—are you "learned" or educated? How much of what you read do you understand? How much do you see as Helen Keller, the famous blind girl, has to see in her education? If you had to do your reading by touch how much of the contents would you "see?" Have regard for the spirit that maketh alive rather than for the rote of the letter.—Pittsburg Post.

APPLE FINE WEAPON AGAINST DISEASE

Do you know what you are eating when you eat an apple? You are eating gallic acid, one of the most necessary elements in human economy. You are eating sugar in the most assimilable form, combined carbon, hydrogen and oxygen caught and imprisoned from the sunshine. You are eating albumen in its most available state. You are eating a gum allied to the "fragrant medicinal gums of Araby". And you are eating phosphorous in the only form in which it is available as the source of all brain and nerve energy.

In addition to all these, you are drinking the purest of water, and eating the most healthful and desirable fiber for the required "roughness" in food elements. The acids of the apple diminish the acidity of the stomach and prevent and cure dyspepsia. They drive out the obnoxious matters that cause skin eruptions and thus are nature's most glorious complexion makers. They neutralize in the blood the deleterious elements that poison the brain and make it sluggish. The contained phosphorous is not only greater than in any other form of food, but it presents in the shape for immediate use by the brain and nerves where it may flash into great thoughts and great deeds. The ancients assigned the apple as the food for the gods, and its juices the ambrosial nectar to which they resorted to renew their youth. Men are the gods of to-day, and the apple is their royal food, the magic renewer of youth. Eat a rich ripe apple every day and you have disarmed all diseases of half their terror.—Medina Register.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

One Of The Biggest Fights In The Balkans

THE ALLIES ARE NOW ATTACKING STRUMNITZA

Big Battle Is Raging in the Neighbourhood of Strumnitza

Allies Have Captured Height After Height in That Section and Bulgars Are Strengthening Their Defences and Bringing Up Heavy Reinforcements--Frequent Food Riots Are Reported in Berlin.

VON MACKENSEN TO LEAD TURKISH ARMY

SALONIKA, Nov. 17.—A big battle rages about Strumnitza today. Strong Bulgarian forces are engaged with a formidable body of British and French.

The Allies have been inside the South-Western Bulgarian frontier for a week. Strumnitza is their first objective.

Preliminary skirmishing began the moment the Allies crossed the border. For several days only scattering small encounters occurred.

The country, mountainous and cut up by many torrents and ravines, is terribly difficult for military operations.

The Allies had to proceed with much caution. For the most part their forces consist of British infantry and French artillery. With big guns shelling the Bulgars out of their positions in advance of the infantry's movements, the invaders occupied height after height, extending a concave front around Strumnitza, west, south and east.

The Bulgars, evidently determined to prevent the Allies from gaining even a small permanent foothold on their soil, have been strengthening Strumnitza's defences and bringing up heavy reinforcements.

In the past twenty-four hours, the opposing main bodies have come in contact and the skirmishes merged into great general battles, perhaps the fiercest thus far in the Balkan campaign.

ROME, Nov. 17.—Following the reports of heavy cannonading off the Sardinian coast, it is reported here to-day that an Italian torpedo boat flotilla has chased and sunk an Austrian submarine.

ROME, Nov. 17.—A German submarine stopped the Italian steamship Milano in the Mediterranean, but spared the vessel because there were several German Americans on board. The Italian passenger ship Bormida was sunk by a submarine. All on board were reported saved.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—Frequent food riots in Berlin, with threats from the authorities that ringleaders will be shot if disorders continue are reported to-day in Copenhagen despatches.

The smashing of shop windows and the looting by throngs of the needy in the German capital are of daily occurrence, the reports say.

Warnings of punishment have been placarded throughout the city by the Ministry of the Interior. Besides death for the leaders, all participants are advised that they risk ten-year terms of imprisonment.

SALONIKA, Nov. 17.—The whole Serb population of the region about Monastir is fleeing before the coming Bulgarians. Monastir itself is being emptied rapidly. The refugees number thousands.

The wild terror of the Bulgars has spread among them by frightful stories from the country the invaders have already swept. The Prefect at Prilep, twenty-five miles north of Monastir, telegraphed, with the enemy almost in the town's outskirts, that hundreds of girls had taken refuge there from surrounding country districts, after being subjected to violence by the Bulgarian soldiers.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 17.—Spirited Russian tactics on the Riga front have quite reversed the situation in the last few days. The Germans are now on the defensive, and retreating. A week ago they were within five miles of Riga; to-day they are 25 miles away.

The Germans are beginning the active evacuation of Mitau, which for some weeks has been a secure base for them. Mitau is being bombarded by the Russian artillery, and Kemmern has been captured by the Czar's troops.

ATHENS, Nov. 17.—Field Marshall Von Mackensen will take command of the Turks' Dardanelles operations as soon as he arrives in Constantinople, advices from the Turkish capital state to-day.

Marshall Von Mackensen is considered by many military authorities one of the ablest German commanders the war has yet produced.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—Heavy artillery fighting in the vicinity of Fontenoy, in Champagne and about Flirrey, in the Woevre region, are reported in to-day's official communique. Otherwise it has been comparatively quiet on the Allied-German front.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—To enable him to take part in future European conferences, the Pope will practically, though not formally, renounce all claims to temporal power at the next consistory, according to a Rome despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company to-day.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 17.—Capt. E. D. Ponton, who served at the front, and who is a son of Lieut.-Col. Ponton, Belleville, is in the general hospital here, undergoing an operation.

Speaking about the work of Capt. George Richardson, the well known hockey player of this city, he says that he won a V.C. many times. He spent many stirring days with him, and stated he was one of the bravest, coolest men in the fight at Langemarck. He showed really heroic character.

A pathetic incident occurred at the hospital yesterday, when Mrs. Davidson, mother of "Scotty" Davidson, the hockey player and bomb thrower, who met his death, called to get the story of her son's death from Capt. Ponton, who was beside him when he fell. He remarked on the bravery of Davidson.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Anchor liner Tuscania, which ran aground yesterday between Glasgow and Liverpool, refloated to-day and returned to Glasgow for inspection.

PETERBORO' CLUB LIKELY TO ADOPT THE EARLY CLOSING

Matter Will Come Before the Members in the Form of a By-law to Be Submitted the First Week in December—License Commission Approves of Proposed Action

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

"What action has the Peterborough Club taken regarding the request of the License Board that the Club restrict the sale of liquors to members from eight p.m. the same as hotels?" This question was asked of Mr. E. G. Patterson, President of the Club. His reply follows.

"As I intimated to the License Board when here, the Directors of the Club have passed a by-law following their request, which has to be approved by the members of the Club. As the annual meeting will be held on the 2nd of December, this by-law will no doubt be unanimously approved, after which date it will be effective.

"This has been explained to the License Board, and meets with their approbation."

Hunters Had a Grand Outing

The deer hunters have all returned from one of the best seasons in many years. Splendid weather and more than sufficient game held the nimrods until the last day. Mr. Bob. Gibbs liked the woods so well that he had a month of it at the Ketcheeum Hunt Club's lodge. He went back with the fishing party on October 11th, returned home for three days and retraced the road with the deer hunters. Mr. Harry Winch, the patriarch of the Ketcheeum crowd, registered his 51st successive hunt and was as active as ever. The Bottle Lake Club were located near by. Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald said his party got all the deer that were coming ti them. It was a great season for the men, many of whom came home with a new lease on life, and belts out to the last buckle—thanks to the salubrious air and the chefs.

Found Dead In His Home

Mr. Wm. Robinson Passes Away at Stoney Lake

Mr. William Robinson, who formerly resided on Albert street, Peterborough, but who for the last few years had lived in Dummer township near McCracken's Landing, Stoney Lake, was found dead in his cottage on Monday. It is supposed that heart failure was the cause of death, as the deceased had been subject to weak spells. He lived alone in a cottage on the shore, a short distance south of the Landing.

The late William Robinson was seventy-three years of age and was widely known, both here and at Stoney Lake, where for a number of years he has been employed by some of the cottagers, notably by Mr. Cole.

He is survived by his wife residing in Peterborough, one son, H. C. Robinson, market gardener, residing on Lansdowne street, near May's schoolhouse, and two daughters, Mrs. F. C. Impson, Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. John Pritchard, Los Angeles. Three brothers also survive him, Samuel B. of Orillia, James of Youngs Point, and John A. of Parsley, Ont.

DIED.

Funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock from the family residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

LONG TRIP TO ENLIST

Man Who Joined the 33rd Battery Last Night Claims He Has Walked 400 Miles—Has Been Living in Montana

A REMARKABLE STORY

That he had come all the way from a Montana ranch to enlist, and that he had walked the distance from Sault Ste Marie, Ont., to Coldwater Ont., a 400-mile tramp, was the remarkable story told by Harry Windish, a young Englishman, who enlisted with the 33rd Battery, here last night. Windish arrived in town yesterday afternoon with an outfit consisting only of the clothes he was wearing.

To the Examiner, Windish said he was born in England and had had some military training in the Suffolk Yeomanry. For the past seven years he has been a resident of the United States, and has been employed on a ranch in Montana. When he decided to enlist he determined to send his wife back to the Old Country, and this took nearly all the available funds, the young man had saved. He said that he had just enough money left to purchase a ticket to the Canadian border and when he reached Sault Ste. Marie decided to walk to Toronto. According to his story he arrived at Coldwater after a two weeks' tramp, yesterday.

A friendly fraimman happened to inquire where he was heading for and on learning that he was bound for Toronto to enlist, informed him that he could join the Canadian forces at Peterborough and offered him a ride this far. "I think he was the first real Canadian I met," remarked Windish.

The man from Montana, who says he is an expert horseman, had the choice of joining the 93rd Infantry or the 33rd Battery and chose the artillery as the best field for the utilizing of his knowledge of horses.

WANT UNION WAGES STIPULATED IN THE CONTRACT

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—The Provincial executive of the building trades organizations, led by Thomas Moore of Niagara Falls, Ontario, the general organizer of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, waited upon Premier Hearst and Hon. Finlay McDiarmid this morning asking that fair wage clause in the government contract stimulate "union wages" instead of the prevailing rate of wages, and that the fair wage clause be made a part of signed contract instead of being merely contained in specifications.

Premier Hearst thanked the deputation for the clear and judicial manner in which the case for union men had been put and promised careful consideration.

ARE FIGHTING AS ONE NOW

Inter-Allies' War Council is Being Perfected—French and British Leaders Are in Conference To-day

OTHERS WILL JOIN

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, Nov. 17.—The French and British fighting forces are virtually one to-night. Hitherto, though allied, they have fought more or less independently. Henceforward they will be guided from a single source, the inter-allies' war council. Russia and Italy will join the combination as speedily as possible.

The French-British arrangement was perfected to-day. Present at this council to-day were Premier Asquith, Munition Minister Lloyd George, First Lord of Admiralty Balfour, and Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey of England, and Premier Briand, War Minister Gallieni, Minister of Marine Lacaze, and General Joffre of France.

The English group included three of the five members of the British inner war council of the cabinet. The French officials represented as nearly as the ministry's personnel permitted the corresponding French posts, Premier Briand acts as the French Foreign Minister, Premier Asquith as War Minister of England. Grey is not a member of the English council, but was present because questions of foreign affairs were involved.

The Englishmen arrived in Paris Tuesday night accompanied by their diplomatic military and naval advisers.

The conference began early today. This afternoon it was understood that the work was completed so far as co-ordination of the British and French armies' work is concerned. There must be subsequent meetings to deal with fresh situations as they arise, and new policies as they become necessary.

Adjournment was taken subject to call.

The next meeting, it is said, will be to take Russian and Italian representatives into the joint body.

The purpose of the joint war council is to handle all four armies as one, to strike with them combined sledge-hammer blows, with four-fold the force it is possible to strike with them separately.

Lieut. Campbell of Keene Has Recovered From Eight Wounds

Lieut. W. C. Campbell, son of Mr. Wm. Campbell, postmaster at Keene, has returned to the front, after recovering from eight wounds received some time ago. He was in Australia when war broke out and hastened to England, expecting to join the Canadian Contingent. However, he arrived in London earlier than Sir Sam Hughes' boys, but was almost immediately offered a commission in a corps of engineers for which he was specially qualified through his extensive experiences in South African mines. Writing home to his parents he told of several successful mines which he had helped to lay. They had tunnelled to a point under the German lines and could hear the enemy at similar work. Placing their explosives the engineers blew up a section of the German trench with its occupants. "That was one time we got them," Lieut. Campbell wrote. "It may be our turn next." In London he met his brother-in-law, Arthur Cameron of Vancouver, who enlisted with the King Edward Horse. It was their first meeting since he left his sister, Mrs. Cameron (nee Jean Campbell) after a separation of eight years. Mrs. Cameron had crossed to England and has since returned. Lieut. Campbell said that the most pitiful sight he witnessed was the wounded Canadians returning torn and bleeding from Ypres.

PROCEEDS FOR PATRIOTIC FUND

"The Last Judgment," which is to be presented by the choir of the George St. Methodist Church, will be given in the George St. Church on the evening of December 8. The entire proceeds will be turned over to the Peterborough Branch of the Canadian Patriotic Society.

ANOTHER DIVISION WILL BE OFFERED

Canada to Have Three Divisions in the Field and Three in Training in England Besides the Troops in Canada—33rd Battery Taking on Recruits.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

LONDON, Nov. 16.—It is reported here that a proposition is being considered for the offer of a third Canadian division by the Dominion. It is understood that this will be a result of the latest call for 500,000 men recently issued by the Canadian Government.

Confirmed by Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Nov. 16.—In the absence of General Sir Sam Hughes in Halifax, officials of the Militia Department would not comment on the cabled report of the offer of a third division. It is understood, however, that the report is correct and that Canada will shortly make such a proposition to the Imperial Government. It is possible that a full division with its different units will not be offered, but that the full quota of infantry will constitute the proposal. It would take its place on the field beside the first and second Canadian divisions now there and would be maintained up to strength.

If a third division is to be placed in the field it will necessitate largely increased reinforcements. Besides the first and second divisions proper there are now what are known as "corps troops," comprising 10,000 infantry and dismounted cavalry in the field, and these could probably be used, if necessary, as a nucleus of a third division. With two divisions now at the front, the plan has been also to keep two in training in England as a reserve for the supply of reinforcements. If the field strength of Canada's army is to be increased to three divisions therefore it would probably necessitate the maintenance of three divisions in England as well.

"Gassed at Peterborough" might have been a more appropriate heading on a story in a local paper, last evening, instead of "Gassed at Ishen."

The 93rd Battalion marched out to the rifle ranges this afternoon and practiced extended order drill. On Friday it is likely the Battalion will have a route march to Lakefield. The people of Lakefield are preparing to give them a warm reception.

Gunner George Adam of the 33rd Battery, who has been spending the week-end the guest of his uncle Mr. Geo. Elliott, has returned to Ilderton. He enlisted in Hamilton a few months ago.

The 93rd have opened up a company officers in the Armouries in the apartments of the 33rd Prince of Wales Dragoons. The company business of A and B Companies will be transacted there, where the orderly room will also be located. Lt. Col. Johnston's office will continue as before in the office of the Adjutant of the 57th Regiment.

Arrangements are under way to fit the recreation room in the Armouries for the benefit of the men of the 93rd Battalion. It will be in order to have a game in the Armouries where the men can read, write letter and have an occasional sing song.

BATTERY MESS WAS COMPLETELY RUINED BY FIRE

Lieut. Harold Matthews Tells of an Exciting Episode at the Front —Saw German Aeroplane Brought Down By British Machine

REMEMBERED BY KING

The following most interesting letter has been received by Mr. T. F. Matthews from his son, Lieut. Harold Matthews of the 2nd Battery 1st Canadian Artillery Brigade.

Belgium, Oct. 24, 1915.

Dear Father,—Received your letter of October 11th, this afternoon, and was very much interested in them.

We had a slight mishap a few days ago. In the middle of the night we were awakened by what sounded like musketry, but was in reality soda syphon sparklet bulbs exploding and hastily getting up, we found our mess in flames. We were very lucky in that it was a very misty night and the Germans did not shell us. If they had I have no doubt a big bag would have been to their credit. The cooks and servants were sleeping in the billet, and being a thatched cottage with plenty of straw in the attic it made a fine and quick blaze, and the men had little time to get out. The chef of the mess went insane suddenly, owing, no doubt, to the smoke and it took five men to hold him. One of these men was Millar, whom he kicked in the knee during his antics. Two days later Millar was sent to the base with blood poisoning and is now in some hospital. We, that is the officers, lost all our kit excepting sleeping bags and blankets, but some of it may be refunded by the Government. With great glee Jim Swift and I saved a bottle of hair-tonic, but that is all. The loss in instruments belonging to the battery is about $3000, and officers kits, about $4000. The fire was four days ago. Since then we have put up a hut 20 ft. by 14 ft. floors covered with tar-paper and with a brick fire-place inside, so that we are now very comfortable again.

During the last few days a German aeroplane was brought down by one of our fighting machines. It was a very pretty sight—the fight. Our plane seemed to hover about the German one like a bird-hawk, and the German was side-stepping and volplaning until he came down behind our front line trench. The pilot was killed and the observer, a lad of 17, was wounded. Mounted on the plane was a Canadian C.P. machine gun which had been captured from the 3rd Canadian Brigade at Ypres in April. The machine gun was recognized by one of the 3rd Brigade officers, and in addition the observer, when questioned, answered that it was a captured Canadian gun.

The day before on [illegible] second lieutenant [illegible] called to fix the damage done, and the cause of a fire in the tunnel of the 1st Battery Wagon Lines. Cpl. Taylor himself and Driver Lee were of the escort and we sat in a meeting in a comfortable farmhouse and examined witnesses, determined the losses as best we could and laid odd on our backs.

This one, held yesterday, I was a court martial and being president the writing. It was held in a barn and it was rainy and cold. Certainly I have spent some pleasant hours. The cases were quite routine and we did two within four hours, which is good work for that kind of a job.

Yesterday the King reviewed the detachments from every unit of the Canadian Corps. To put it more concretely, he reviewed some of the infantry and the rest of us lined the road and gave him a cheer while he passed down the lines. I had the honour to command the detachment from the 1st Brigade of artillery. We marched back about six miles, gave our horses to horse-holders and sent them to the rear, and then came home. It was a fine show, and came home. It was a fine show, and [illegible]

DO WE REALIZE?

Do we, do our young men eligible for enlisting, realize what Britain, and Canada, and the Allies are fighting for? They may academically admit that we are fighting to prevent the realization of the German programme of world domination. But do they intelligently realize what that means? It would mean if realized, Canada coming under the domination of the German spirit; the spirit of "frightfulness" and force; the spirit of the doctrine that success justifies any and every outrage upon the ideals that humanity holds dear. As an example of the length to which the German spirit would go to win, a German journal, no doubt with the applause of most of its readers, proposes a plan for forcing the Entente Allies to sue for peace. This gentle plan is to deliberately starve the population of Belgium, Poland, Serbia, and those parts of France and Russia temporarily occupied by the Germans. One can hardly conceive that such an atrocity could be seriously proposed; but it is only a slight refinement upon the outrages already practiced by the Teutons to win success, in this respect distancing the savagery and cruelty of the unspeakable Turk, adopted as an ally. It is against these things we are fighting; and is there a Canadian with red blood in his veins who can hesitate in responding to the call of duty to resist an impending evil that without fighting with all our might and till victory comes, will surely come upon Canada and the world?

SAFE BIND; SAFE FIND.

Good old Thomas Tusser, about four hundred years ago in his "Five Hundred Points of Husbandry" may have had in prophetic mind, many of the farmers of to-day when he coined the injunction—"safe bind; safe find." The preventable losses of the farmers—some farmers—that count most, are due to carelessness, to indifference to the spirit and call of the foregoing motto. Enormous sums, in the aggregate, are spent every year by the farmers of Canada for implements which, owing to neglect, last, on the average only half the length of time they would do if given proper care and housing. An authority states that it takes to equip the average farm, with necessary implements and machinery about $1,000; and that implements subjected to the injurious effects of the weather will not do good work for more than five years. In this way there is a necessary, or rather, unnecessary, expenditure of some $2,000 every ten years. The same authority asserts that with protection from the weather, and with timely repairs, implements may be kept in useful condition more than twice the average five-year period. The average farmer would see the importance of these facts if he reflected that neglect to properly house and care for his farm machinery amounts to his putting a thousand dollar mortgage on his farm every ten years. The importance of this matter will also be emphasized when we reflect that neglect of machinery, is an index to a similar negligence in all farming operations — care of buildings, stock, etc. We often see mowers, ploughs, and other things standing the whole winter through in the open fields exposed to the full deteriorating effects of the weather. On such a farm we see, all through, similar evidence of neglect—broken and dilapidated fences, sagging gates, loose boards on buildings, leaking roofs, and stock shivering in the wintry blasts on the lee side of a toppling straw stack. Thus we have the conditions of profitless farming, with a mortgage as a prominent part of the farm equipment.

The same neglect applied to households, even in cities, is a fruitful cause of "hard-upness" and failure to make ends meet. Household furnishings, provisions in store, and clothing, subjected to neglect and deprived of the benefit of a stitch in time, spell failure and discomfort, and inability to make ends meet, even with means upon which the prudent and the careful thrive in great comfort. The amount of an income—its value—is dependent upon the care exercised in its expenditure, and its value is depreciated, and in many cases neutralized, and burdensome debt incurred by a systematic neglect of little things — little precautions — the only systematic things in the lives and practices of some people.

AN "ELECTION DODGE."

The United States in her diplomatic communications has talked strongly—to Germany—and a little more strongly to Great Britain. But there is likely to be nothing more than talk. She is disinclined, if not powerless to act; to implement her demands. There seems to be no disposition to enforce by arms her demands in regard to interference with United States trade as involved in the blockade of German ports. This is shown by the fact that now there is an agitation in the United States to take action in the form of negative trade reprisals. There is said to be a demand that if Britain does not remove the restrictions upon United States trade with Germany, or with neutrals that feed Germany, there is to be placed an embargo upon United States exports to Great Britain, and the allied countries. This would be, of course, a serious matter, since it would mean cutting off the export of munitions of war, of which the United States is making and sending to Britain and the Allies a tremendous quantity. The cutting off of this supply would be a serious matter, for a prominent German authority, to wit, General Von Kluck, asserts that the duration of the war depends upon "how long England is able to fight, and upon American ammunition." Yet it is not probable that there will be any embargo upon United States exports to Britain and her Allies; though such a plan would be popular with the pro-German element as an incidental means of cutting off munition supplies, and thus aiding the German cause. But the United States is too worldly-wise; too anxious for trade, to cut off her nose to spite her face—to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. The trade of Britain and her Allies is, and will be, infinitely more important than the trade of Germany. If a demand for an embargo of United States exports to Great Britain is seriously proposed, it should not be taken seriously. Next to the desire of making money, the United States with a presidential election rising over the political horizon, is anxious to make political capital and the rivalry between the parties to catch the German vote is keen. There seems to be no danger of an embargo upon United States exports to Great Britain and her Allies; that would be too big a price to pay for even the German vote in the next presidential election. A country that in its diplomatic attitude and correspondence places more emphasis upon the injury to its trade than it does upon the wanton and wholesale murder at sea of its citizens, is not likely to sacrifice the tremendous interests involved in trade with Great Britain and her Allies, and her Dominions. The proposed trade embargo, as it is proposed, can very well be classed as an "election dodge."

PRISONERS' "PAY."

When a Canadian soldier is fighting in the trenches he is paid more than one dollar a day. When he is taken prisoner and taken to Germany he receives only 25 cents a day.

From Paris, France, comes the voice of a Londoner calling out that justice must be done the men who are in the enemy's toils. He asks that the prisoners should receive from Canada the same remuneration as the men in the trenches. If it is discrimination to pay Canadians more than the prisoners from the British Isles, it is also discrimination to pay Canadians in the trenches more than those of the British regiments.

The objection has been registered before, but the injustice comes home afresh when a Canadian in France feels impelled to write a long letter to The Advertiser protesting against it.—London Advertiser.

DURING A POLITICAL CALM.

The apotheosis of Mackenzie and Mann has almost, if not completely, culminated. We read, at all events, of the Van Hornes, Strathconas, Mackenzies, Hayses, Hicksons, Manns, Sargents and others, who with indomitable resolution have chested every obstacle and carried railways over mountain tops and rushing torrents. The apotheosis so quickly consummated confirms our belief that when Parliament opens its door in January, it will find the Canadian Northern general and local, with its subsidiaries, bridge, terminal, land, air, water and elevator, on the doorstep. The infant will cry this tune not for succor but for adoption. That is, the country will be asked to assume between 400 and 500 millions of interest bearing obligations and to make a modest return to the generous parents for their care, pains and trouble. The bond guaranteeing Provinces of the West will be on hand to.

"Pluck commiseration of his State
From brassy bosoms and rough hearts of flint."

—Weekly Sun.

ALL VERY FINE; BUT WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO ABOUT IT?

When Boss Tweed, the victorious Tammany chieftain, was detected in his crimes, his question was "What are you going to do about it?" He had no defence to offer, but as he had always been accustomed to have things his own way, he could see no power which was competent to bring him to task.

A similar question is now being put by The New York Tribune which, having in mind the latest American note to Great Britain, asks of the American people, "What Are We Going to do About it?" The Tribune does not expect anything to be done, because, as it contends, American diplomacy is at fault. The Washington government is unwilling to take action in any matter unless it has a mandate from the American people, and to this end keeps a listening ear to the ground. As a result it usually hears confusing sounds, and, as in the case of the Lusitania outrage, nothing is done. Says The Tribune:

There is no disposition to justify the British offending. Great Britain is now violating international law, under which we would live, because she desires to strike Germany. Not only Germany, but the United States suffers. For this there is no defence, no excuse, no explanation but the German "law of necessity."

On the other hand, when Germany followed the same course we did nothing but write notes, and Germany was able to carry on her illegal operations until the British mastered the German submarine campaign and put an end to it. Our dispute with Germany, in fact, was settled, not by American diplomacy, but British naval power. Mr. Wilson's "victory" was won in British waters by British sailors.

Now the situation in the case of Great Britain is wholly different. Her blockade, legal or illegal, and he believe it to be illegal, is growing more and more fatal to German hopes. Every despatch from Berlin testifies to the suffering or inconvenience incident to failing food supply. If Germany had mastered British sea power as Britain mastered the German submarine campaign, Great Britain could afford to follow the German example and present Mr. Wilson with another great diplomatic "triumph." But the fact is quite the opposite.

We Americans must make up our minds that, law or no law, Great Britain will not now relax her grip on the German throat. Rightly or wrongly, she believes that Germany is approaching exhaustion. She believes that a few more months of blockade will win the war. Not even the inconvenience of the embargo would overweight the advantage of the blockade. We must face the fact that Great Britain intends to go on her course, illegal and immoral as it seems to us.

Should Great Britain take this course, the United States cannot fight her because the Bryan peace treaties stand in the way. Arbitration must be resorted to, and before this can be made effective the war will probably be over. The Tribune continues:

Our note to Great Britain is good law and good sense. It is firm, where we are justified in speaking firmly, but it is just no more case of words, because we have deliberately elected to employ only words in our foreign disagreements, and in the case of Great Britain signed a treaty compelling us to go no further. England may seize our ships, restrict our lawful trade, do whatever she chooses to hinder our business, and our only redress is arbitration in the distant future, with the promise of some repayment to the grandchildren of the losers.

Mr. Wilson's present communication is one more document worthy of note in any court of law and deserving the attention of British jurists and international arbitrators. But it won't persuade the British to let our commerce alone, because it is backed by no force. Even an embargo ordered in January, 1916, would be relatively harmless to the British, whose own industries will be mobilized for munition manufacture by that time.

In the existing situation we are helpless and have accepted the helpless role without protest. We have not only declared ourselves too proud to fight" in the case of our dead, murdered by Germany, but we have bound ourselves over to keep the peace, at our own expense, with the British.

And Uncle Sam ought to keep the peace, and not needlessly embarrass a country which is keeping the seas open for American as well as British trade, is bringing prosperity to the United States, and is fighting a battle for freedom in which the entire civilized world has a deep interest. Technically, in pursuing her campaign against a most unscrupulous foe, Great Britain may be occasionally at fault, but she is at least fighting in a manly way, and is paying due regard to the lives, and so far as possible to the property, of all neutrals.—Brantford Expositor.

WHY THE ALLIES WILL WIN THE GREAT CONFLICT

The three determining factors, of this war are men, money, and shells. Certain facts are of such common knowledge that they can be disputed. The available man power still remaining as a potential reserve is much greater with the Allies than with the Teutons. The total loss of men to Germany is somewhat greater than to the Allies, though not so immensely greater as is stated in some quarters. Obviously, the available man power is enormously in favour of the Allies.

Again the Allies have unquestionable financial superiority. British commerce is practically unmolested. More than 92 per cent. of the British and French inbound and outbound boats reach their destination. Germany's commerce is totally destroyed. Everything that she buys abroad (and she is unquestionably getting some things through neutral ports) must be paid for, not in exchange of merchandise, but in cash, and she must in addition for the supplies produced at home with cash drawn entirely from the internal resources.

As the shells and munitions, Germany from the outset has had a great superiority. She has stored up great quantities for years, and equipped herself in every possible way for their rapid production. But she can not hope, herself, to cope with the continuous prodution of all other important countries combined, and such a combination is practically pitted against her. Through British control of the seas, the Allies have the markets and factories of the world at their command, and these factories are pouring in a continuous stream of munitions and supplies. Germany will be as successful in steming such a tide as the old woman was in sweeping back the ocean with her broom.

Just one instance will be cited to show the difference made by the increased supply of shell. Last winter the Allies began a determined offensive in Artois and in the Champagne. At Artois the fighting was particularly desperate for possession of Loos with the surrounding hills which dominate both the city of Lens and the approaches to it. This offence to take positions of imminense importance continued for several months, but was unsuccessful, finally died out. Nine months later, at the same points, the Allies succeeded, and they succeeded in three days where two months' continuous fighting before had failed. Why? Because nine months later they were superior to the German in shell, artillery, and the like.

And in Russia as soon as the supplies were equal the German advance stopped. Time after time the Russian army barely escaped, but they were always compelled to fall back for lack of shells. Now it is reversed, and Germany is falling back.

Already the Allies are far superior in available man power, and money power. To-day they are equal to, or even a lightly superior, at some points, to the German forces, in shell power. They are steadily and regularly gaining in shell power.

Daily Germany is weakening in all three of these vital powers, and daily the Allies are growing stronger in at least two of them. Germany and her allies are doomed beyond doubt. The only question is, how long will the rest of the world hove to wait. It does not seem as though it could be so very long.

GRAND TRUNK APPOINTMENTS ARE ANNOUNCED

Two important appointments in the Passenger Traffic Department of the Grand Trunk Railway System were made today.

Mr. W. S. Cookson is appointed General Passenger Agent, and Mr. C. W. Johnston, Assistant General Passenger Agent.

The appointments were announced in a circular issued by Mr. G. T. Bell, Passenger Traffic Manager, with the approval of Mr. J. E. Dalrymple, Traffic Vice-President, and are effective to-day.

The positions of Assistant Passenger Traffic Manager and Assistant to Passenger Traffic Manager, are abolished.

Wallace Spencer Cookson is, as his name indicates of Scotch parentage, and has been with the Grand Trunk interests for the past twenty five years. He was born in 1871 and is therefore in his prime, and is one of the most popular of the company's officials. He was appointed Assistant General Passenger Agent of the Grand Trunk Railway System at Chicago in 1909, and transferred to Montreal in the same capacity in 1910. Mr. Cookson has taken a notable part in the standardization of railway tickets and was for a long time a member of the Standard Ticket Committee of the American Lines.

Mr. C. W. Johnston, the new Assistant General Passenger Agent, was born at Actonvale, Que., thirty six years ago, and entered the Grand Trunk Service in 1897 at Richmond, Que. After early experience as operator, freight clerk, ticket clerk and agent at various points on the line, he was appointed Travelling Passenger Agent in 1902. From 1906 to 1907 he was in the General Passenger Department at Montreal, and after further experience in the office of the District Passenger Agent at Montreal was transferred to Winnipeg as chief clerk of the Grand Trunk Pacific Passenger Department. In 1912 Mr. Johnston returned to the Passenger Traffic Department of the Grand Trunk Railway System at Montreal, and since February, 1914, has been Assistant to the Passenger Traffic Manager.

REPUBLICAN PRESIDENTIAL TIMBER

Less than eight months from now the candidates for the next Presidency of the United States will have been nominated less than four months from now the primaries which will determine the candidate will have begun and some of the delegates will have been elected. At the present moment it is possible to say that the most aggressive candidacy for the Republican nomination is that of Senator John W. Weeks of Massachusetts. Ex-senator Root is not really available. Justice Hughes is, as always, the Republicans one best chance, but his disinclination to permit the use of his name has not been diminished. In the judgment of the closest and most careful observers he is likely to remain firm in refusing to permit the use of his name in the race. Senator Burton of Ohio is the third conservative who shows strength and commands a good deal of public confidence. Among the more progressive possibilities of the Republican party, Cummins and Borah are the only persons who have enough following to be considered. With the layout as it stands here is the Republican party likely to make much of a showing in the next national election.

DEMONSTRATION IN GREECE AGAINST THE KING

SALONICA, Nov. 17.—Anti-dynastic demonstrations are reported on good authority to have occurred at Patras, one of the strongholds of ex-Premier Venizelos, and also the former home of former Premier Gounaris, who now represents it in the Chamber of Deputies.

While the intentions of King Constantine and the Government with respect to the Balkan situation have not been defined, rumours have been current that the Entente Allies troops may be requested to quit Greek soil. A significant feature of the tense situation is the material increase recently in the number of allied warships in the harbour of Salonica, and more are expected to arrive daily.

The organ of ex-Premier Venizelos at Salonica says:

"Martial law and an oligarchy are in unlawful possession of the power. There will be no demobolization; yet elections will be held. Fifty Venizelist deputies who were mobilised, requested the postponement of the date for their enrolment to enable them to conduct their electoral campaign.

"The Ministry for War refused the request. This unhappy preamble says much for the intentions of the Skouloudis Cabinet. The new chamber will represent anything but the nation."

MAN IS PAID $10 FOR LOSS OF HIS MOUSTACHE.

CARTERVILLE, Mo., Nov. 17.—For the loss of the right side of his moustache, which he had cultivated for nearly fifteen years, and which it is said, was long enough to be wrapped around his ear, William Mitchell has been compensated by Sherman Smith, in whose saloon the hirsute adornment was bisected.

Mitchell had been in the saloon only a few minutes when a loiterer clipped one-half the moustache. Mitchell threatened the arrest of the saloonkeeper, but Smith's counsel consulted Mitchell and learned the monetary value at which he held the lost half of his moustache, which was $10. This amount was paid to him and he withdrew the charge.

The loss of one-half of the moustache has not weighed sufficiently with Mitchell to prompt him to accept the loss of the other half, and he still is wearing what has been left to him of the adornment.

WEAKNESS OF ALLIES' DIPLOMACY

This is not the time to tell the full history of allied diplomacy in southeastern Europe since the beginning of the war, but the suggestion made by some of Sir Edward Grey's critics that all the errors were made by our own foreign office and that our allies have nothing to approach themselves with is so remote from the truth that it must be exposed. The truth of the failure of the diplomacy of the allies is that in the three great problems which have faced them during the war—Turkey, the Balkans and (before she intervened) Italy—they were not at one, and they pursued not a single policy but several diverse policies. In all these critical questions the view taken by our own foreign office was wiser than that of our allies.—Manchester Guardian.

Plain Horse Sense.

If a merchant or a manufacturer is willing to spend good money for advertising, to ask you to try his store or his product, it stands to reason that he must have something worth offering. Otherwise you would not go back, or you would not again purchase the product, and the first sale would be the last. In that case advertising would NOT pay. It only pays when it brings continuous patronage, and to do that there must be real value given. That is the reason advertised stores or products are almost invariably good. It will pay you to patronize the advertisers.

Seventeenth Annual Conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterboro'

Is Being Held in Lindsay Yesterday and To-day—Local Clergymen in Attendance—Ven. Archdeacon Warren Presiding

The seventeenth annual conference of the Archdeaconry of Peterborough, was in session yesterday and to-day in St. Paul's church Sunday school room. It met in Lindsay four years ago, but since then has been held at various other points, till Lindsay's turn came again.

Venerable Archdeacon Warren, M.A., presided.

The opening session took place on Monday evening in the form of divine service held in the church at eight o'clock. The Right Rev. James Fielding Sweeny, D.D., Lord Bishop of Toronto, officiated, preaching a highly interesting, uplifting and instructive sermon. He took as his text, "The Course of the World," second Ephesians and second verse.

Tuesday morning at nine o'clock Holy Communion was celebrated by the Bishop of Toronto, after which Venerable Archdeacon Warren, M.A., in his charge laid before the conference many matters of interest, laying stress on certain matters under discussion and outlining plans for the future. His subject was a weighty one embracing the future of the church, and he was given great respect and attention. He spoke of improvements to be made to the churches at Omemee, All Saints, Peterborough Young's Point, Manvers, Cardiff, and Monmouth and Haliburton.

About 11 o'clock the election of officers took place. The council is as follows:

Elected by the Archdeacon, Rural Deans Allen, Woodsworth and de Lom.

Elected by the Council, for Northumberland and Peterborough, Rev. R. S. Grobb, of Peterborough, and Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., of Peterborough, for Durham, Rev. James Kidd, of Blackstock, and Mr. William Stephenson of Omemee; for Haliburton, Rev. L. G. Robinson.

Secretary-Treasurer: Rev Charles Carpenter, of Campbellford.

At the conclusion of the elections at 1 o'clock, an appetizing luncheon was served in the basement by the ladies of the church, the time was devoted to addresses under the main heading of "The Clergyman in his Parish," dealing with important phases of his relationship and means of influence upon those with whom he comes in contact.

Rev. Rural Dean de Lom, F.R.G.S., dealt with "His Personal, Home and Public influence," while Rev. Thomas McKim took as his subject, "His Relation to Burgl Organizations." Both addresses were excellent ones and a broad plane of thought calculated to win the clergyman's way into closer relationship with the everyday needs of his parishioners.

The following is the programme for the balance of the day and evening. The conference continued to-day until one o'clock in the afternoon:

His Relation to the Indifferent—Rev Chas. Carpenter

Discussion

Luncheon.

Papers: The Church—Educational.

The Need for Catechism Teaching Rev E. H. James.

The adaptation of the Church to Rural Needs: 1, Liturgically; 2, Socially. Rev. Wm. Burn.

Enemy Is Making Another Effort To Reach Riga

LONDON, November 17.—The Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Chronicle telegraphs:

The Germans are evidently still fired with the hope of finding Winter quarters in Riga. Recent Russian successes in this region have clearly shown the enemy that any delay on his part would merely allow the Russians to concentrate their forces and hurl him back once and for all from the prize that he so often has thought within his grasp. Action on the enemy's part was thus imperative, and it has taken the form of operations near Dalen Island, an island seven miles long and two miles broad.

In Volhynia, the Austro-Germans have massed their forces for an endeavour to clear the line they no longer hope to break. They have at last brought up their heavy artillery along the Yovelsarny railway and brought it into play in the Chartorysk, where so much fighting has taken place.

Chartorysk is only a few miles south of the railway to the SIyr. The line of battle is almost the same as before west of Chartorysk, but north west of that town it has been moved east from Podgatye to the SIyr. The Russians are still on the left bank defending the bridgehead. Very heavy fighting continues along the whole of this front. Now that short period operations are the rule, the fate of the enemy attacks on Riga and at Chartorysk should be decided within the next few days.

The Morning Post's Berne, Switerland, correspondent says that it is reported there that Field Marshal von Hindenburg has left the eastern for the western front.

An interesting illustration of the impairment of the human resources of Germany was found near Drinsk where a number of deaf mutes were captured on the firing line.

Germany's silence concerning developments on its northern front in the Riga and Drinsk regions, in the face of Russian claims of important gains, led to the opinion here that Marshal von Hindenburg faces a decidedly serious situation. All the available accounts agree that the Russians are pushing a strong offensive, and that the Germans are slowly falling back. The best judgment here is that Hindenburg's forces have been depleted by the withdrawals of men to the other fighting zones.

AN IMMENSE OUTLAY.

When the Duma opens its next session the Minister of Finance will introduce the budget for 1916, calling for an expenditure estimated at 5,175,000,000 roubles (a rouble is about 51 cents), while the revenue is estimated at 2,914,000,000 roubles. The war has already necessitated two foreign and two internal loans and the exchange value of roubles has dropped 50 per cent.

Brooding Over War Causes Couple to Go Insane While Attending Church

Fight Members of Congregation as Women Run Screaming From Building—Grieved For the Cause of Germany

YONKERS, N.Y., Nov. 17.—Brooding over the lack of sympathy in this country for the cause of the Teutone allies, Willy G. Holldorff, until recently chief chemist for the Spreckels Sugar Refinery, and his wife, Frieda, both went violently insane here while attending service in St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Amid the screams of terror of the women members of the congregation, who climbed unto pews or fled through doorways, the couple finally were overpowered after Mrs. Holldorff had torn off most of her clothes. She cried aloud that she was commissioned by God to end all wars, and made repeated attempts to reach the pulpit that she might preach. Her husband's utterances were unintelligible, but he fought violently and it took half a dozen men to hold him until Louis Spreckles arrived at the church and claimed him.

To-night Mr. Holldorff, intermittently violent, is in a padded cell in the jail, and Mrs. Holldorff is in the observation ward at St. Joseph's Hospital. Mr. Holldorff begs to be released with his wife so they may go home together and die.

The sudden outbreak of the couple, which brought frightened throngs crowding about the church to learn the cause of the shrieks and shouts within and the sudden outpouring of screaming women from the church, is the climax of a series of tragedies which began last June.

Dismissed Last June.

Mr. Holldorff and his wife came to Yonkers from Pomerania, Germany. As head chemist of the Spreckels Sugar Refinery he occupied a position of great responsibility, until last June. Then, his mind affected by constantly brooding over the war and ineffectual efforts to convince his associates of the justness of Germany's cause, he began to have delusions.

His chief delusion, which resulted in his dismissal from the refinery and ultimately his arrest and short confinement in an insane asylum, was that Claud Spreckels, of San Francisco, was attempting to murder him by wireless rays. There are numerous wireless apparatus in the vicinity of No. 12 Morris avenue, South Yonkers, where the Holldorffs then lived, and Mr. Holldorff prowled about them day and night, voicing his plaint and his determination to protect himself.

Finally in June Louis Spreckels, fearing violence from Mr. Holldorff, complained to Dr. W. S. Coons, health officer of Yonkers, and Mr. Holldorff was arrested, examined for his sanity and sent to the insane asylum at Poughkeepsie. He had been confined there only a short time when John J. Stall, an attorney, presenting a pledge from members of the congregation of St. John's church, obtained his release on the promise of the congregation to see that Mr. Holldorff was sent to a sanitarium.

This agreement, it was said yesterday was not kept. Mr. Holldorff, however, remained in retirement until Saturday, when he approached Louis Spreckle's seeking his position as chief chemist once more. His request was refused.

Ran Down the Aisle.

Sunday morning Mr. and Mrs. Holldorff occupied their usual seat in the church, in which they were among the most prominent members. The pastor, the Rev. Alexander von Schlichten, was about to mount the pulpit to preach when suddenly Mrs. Holldorff leaped from her seat and rushed into the aisle. She flung her hat from her head and tore at her waist and skirt. The skirt fell from her and she ran down the aisle, screaming that she had a mission to preach peace throughout the world.

Her husband sat in his seat watching her for a moment, as men in the congregation rushed toward her. They were crowding about her, attempting to hold her without injury, when suddenly Mr. Holldorff began to shout unintelligibly and leaped into the aisle. He rushed toward his wife, and as frightened shouts and cries added themselves to those of himself and wife other men hastened to him and attempted to subdue him.

He shook them off and again started for his wife. The two groups, one attempting to hold Mr. Holldorff and one his wife, struggle back and forth in the church aisles. Policeman who were summoned advised the summoning of Mr. Spreckels, and this the Rev. von Schlichten did.

Mr. Spreckels finally prevailed on Mr. Holldorff and his wife to go to the parsonage next door. From there they were taken to the hospital and jail. The couple will be examined before Judge Beall to-morrow in the County Court by Dr. W. S. Coon and other physicians, and they will probably be sent to institutions.

For he last few months the couple have been living at No. 83 Maple street, Yonkers.

TAX ON CHECKS TO RAISE $10,000,000

Proposed Method to Finance the Increases in the Army and Navy. Navy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Stamps on bank cheques are being considered by administration officials as a means of raising revenue to finance the increases proposed in the army and navy. The belief is that approximately $10,000,000 could be raised annually from this source with a tax of two cents on every cheque.

William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, is said to have received a recommendation that he suggests to Congress, in his revenue raising scheme, the bank cheque tax. Whether he will adopt the proposal or not, of course is impossible to say at this time.

Experts of the Treasury Department who are attached to the Bureau of International Revenue have prepared figures regarding the proposed tax on cheques. They estimated that by the 100,000,000 citizens of the United States there are issued 1,500,000 cheques, or three cheques by every two hundred persons every day. The scheme is to have the stamps printed on the cheques, which would be put up in book form by the banks and sold.

The argument is advanced in certain quarters that a tax on cheques would not be a hardship on the public since the persons who have bank accounts are those who are best able to stand the tax. The tax on cheques was adopted at the time of the civil war and continued for about twenty years afterwards; cheques also were taxed at the time of the Spanish-American War.

The chief objection to the cheque tax is the fact that it is levied on so many items. The theory of taxation held by some of he administration officials is that better results can be obtained by a larger tax on fewer articles. The question is viewed from the political side, and there is a fear that a tax on cheques would be more unpopular with a great number of persons than another tax would be. Then, too, it is argued, a stamp on cheques would be a constant reminder of the taxation whereas on some articles, where the tax was levied at the source, as on gasolene, there would be less "advertisement" about it.

NINE-YEAR-OLD BOY TRAVERSES WAR ZONE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 17.—As the gangplank of the liner Kronland slid down to the pier, a bareheaded, sunburned boy of nine, with happy tears running down his cheeks, rushed into the arms of an equally happy man. For this moment, little Francis Steiner had crossed the war zone alone from Johannesburg, South Africa.

Joseph Steiner, a wealthy insurance man of Modesto, was on the wharf to meet him. Francis had been taken to Johannesburg with his five-year-old brother. There his mother died and he was taken to England to live with his grandparents, while the father came to America.

Francis had never seen his father since that day. The boy sailed from London for New York on a British freighter. Twice the vessel was stopped by submarines but allowed to continue. He made the trip from New York to San Francisco alone.

local boy, has enlisted with the 2nd Pioneer Battalion at Guelph Peterborough has a good representive in the Pioneers, the list including Sergt. Massie Cooke, Pte. C. Kylie, Pte. Alex. Gillespie, Pte. Guerin, Pte. J. Irwin and Pte. Quinlan.

Norman Saxby, 352 Smith Street, enlisted with the 93rd Battalion last night. He is the third son of Mr. Wm. Saxby to enlist with the Canadian forces. Pte. Saxby, who is over six feet tall, is one of the biggest men in the 93rd. He is a member of Kill Kare Kamp, all the members of which, with the exception of one, who failed to pass the medical examination, are in the Canadian overseas forces.

The 93rd Regimental canteen was opened for the first time Monday and will doubtless be well patronized by the men of the battalion. The canteen is located in No. 3 company room and is stocked with cigarettes, tobacco, candies, gum, soft drinks, etc., while writing paper and other necessities will be added at once. Sergt. Jas. Mackin of B company, who has been on duty in the quartermaster stores, will be in charge of the canteen. Sergt. Mackin is a former member of the Scots Guards. He will have as his assistant in the canteen, Pte. Arthur Edwards of No. 1 platoon.

The band of the 93rd "did the honours" handsomely Monday on the occasion of the marriage of one of their members, Pte. J. Blaker. The latter's intention to enter the ranks of the benedicts was not known to his fellow bandsmen until that afternoon. He was off on leave and it was not until a trusty scout whispered something about wedding bells that Bandmaster Hughes and his men got wise that something out of the ordinary was taking place. The scout located Pte. Blaker at the George street Methodist parsonage, and while the ceremony was going on the band formed up outside. As the blushing bride and the equally blushing bridegroom left the personage the band struck into the strains of "My Little Girl," and Bandsman Blaker and his bride were escorted in triumph to the armouries, where Sergt.-Major Miller on behalf of the members of the band, presented them with a beautiful clock. The bride and groom both expressed their sincere thanks for the handsome gift and the event was brought to a close with three hearty cheers for Pte. and Mrs. Blaker. The groom, who is an Indian, and who comes from Rice Lake, is most popular with his fellow musicians, who unite in wishing him all possible success.

Capt. J. E. R. Munro of the 93rd Battalion, returned to duty this morning after six days' leave of absence, which he spent at his home in Perth. Capt. Munro also visited Kingston during his absence.

Five recruits passed the medical examination at the armouries yesterday, three for the 93rd Battalion and two for the 33rd Battery. The names of recruits were as follows:

Norman Saxby, Smith street, city.
Geo. Harris, Warsaw.
L. D. Palmer, Smith township.

His Worship Mayor Buller has received a telegram to the effect that Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is representing the city's interests in the matter of Peterborough raising a whole battalion instead of two companies as was formerly intended. It will be remembered that some days ago, Mayor Buller despatched a message to the authorities requesting permission to raise a battalion in Peterborough city and county. No reply has yet been received, but there is little reason to believe but what the city's offer will be accepted.

To Organize Battalion.

BRANTFORD, Nov. 16.—Major S. B. Scobell, junior Major of the 84th Battalion here, has been offered and has accepted the post of commander and organizer of the county battalion of Durham county. He has been in the militia for twelve years, being with the 10th Regiment, St. Catharines, and since the war has been on active service, first on the border at Niagara Falls power plants and bridges, and latterly with the 84th Battalion. His new appointment takes effect immediately. Major Scobell is well known in Peterborough.

The Kingston Standard says: A splendid movement, which originated from E. E. Snider, principal of Port Hope High school, is on foot to establish in Ontario a battalion of infantry composed of the ex-Cadets of the Corps of School Cadets.

Mr. Snider's idea is to have the battalion composed of young men from the ages of 18 to 23 inclusive and that it should be officered mainly from the Corps of School Cadet Instructors. Should this movement become a reality, there would be formed one of the best battalions of the service. All the young men who would join would be well versed in military discipline and manoeuvres and in short time they would be a crack unit.

It is understood that Col. Hemming is entirely in sympathy with the movement and Major Geo. Gillespie, Inspector and Organizer of Cadet Corps in this Division, approves of it. The feeling that predominates in the city is that there are a number of ex-Cadets who are in a position to join the new battalion. These young men are all of exceptionally good character and it is felt that the young men in the other parts of the Province are of the same calibre.

It is understood that with the forming of the battalion the command will be given to Maj. Gillespie, who has done so much towards making the Cadet movement a success. He is well liked by the Cadets and ex-Cadets and, in taking over the command of the battalion, he would occupy a popular position.

Principal Snider, who started the movement, has sent a circular letter to all the principals of schools where there are Cadet Corps. He has also forwarded copies to the officer commanding the division and Cadet Corps. Mr. Snider is an enthusiastic Cadet Corps officer and holds the rank of captain. He is very anxious that the movement should go through and it seems that it will.

Lieut. Huycke had secured five recruits up to noon to-day for the 33rd Battery, and expects to have a large draft to take back with him by the end of the week. Pte. Arthur Horsfield, of the 93rd Battalion, who desired to join the battery, is being transferred to the 33rd in exchange for Gunner Bird of the battery, who wants to transfer to the 93rd. Lieut. Huycke will be at the Armouries at 11 a.m., 4 p.m., and 8 p.m., daily, for the rest of the week, and will be found in the Signallers' room. One of the recruits who joined the battery to-day is an Australian.

Capt. R. P. Watt and Sergt.-Major Miller have returned from Port Hope and Cobourg, where they were on business in connection with the 93rd Battalion.

Bandsman Leedham, of the Salvation Army Band, Hamilton, reported for duty with the 93rd Band this morning, and was on parade this afternoon.

Pte. Charles Mongour, son of Mrs. A. Mongour, 414 Dublin Street, of the second Battalion, who was wounded at the Battle of St. Julien, has been invalided home. He left England on the 11th of November.

TRANSPORT OFFICER CENSORED DONKEY

"We brought the guns out of action at dead of night quietly and without a hitch, says a British artilleryman. The six little green beauties were quietly withdrawn, one by one, until all were hooked into their teams, and the battery crept away. As quietly another battery took our places. We marched away to a rest camp, where for a few days we enjoyed peace. But soon our call came again; rest was over and we were wanted. A night's sleep in a barn, and next morning off to a railway station. Here the usual scene of bustle that invariably accompanies the entraining of a battery.

"Everything moved like clockwork, and we found time to snatch a hasty meal. We managed to smuggle most of the battery pets aboard, three goats and a motley collection of dogs and cats. We had to bid a long farewell to a donkey and some ducks. The Railway Transport Officer censored these animals. He said, "What do you fellows reckon this is, a blanketty menagerie? I've been blind to a truckload of goats and dogs, but your long-eared brother yonder don't go." So we had a hasty consultation, and finally sold one donkey and three ducks to a French soldier on railway guard for four cups of coffee.

"We travelled for hours. At last we pulled up at a decent-sized station, spotted a refreshment stall, and the boys made tracks for it. One chap, eager to show his newly-acquired command of the French language, said to the lady attendant "Avezvous la cafe, Mademoiselle, s'il vous plait?" She answered, "Yes, Sonny, in two ticks." The supposed French lady was one of the English ladies who have volunteered to run these wayside buffets."

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Cheese Production in This District Brought Farmers Over $350,000 in Past Season

Heaviest Make of Cheese Since 1912 and Completely Successful Year —Review of the Peterboro' Boards' Operations and Conditions Which Affected the Business.

SEASON WAS IDEAL

CHEESE BOARD SALES.

1915	24,062 boxes
1914	18,465
1913	21,191
1912	27,062
1908	41,400

Increase over last year—5,597 boxes

Average price, 1915	14.30 cents
Average price, 1914	13.38 cents
Estimated sales off board,	5,000
Approximate total production for 1915	29,000 boxes

The value of the cheese sold on the Peterborough Cheese Board during the past season is represented by the sum of $292,473.61.

As indicated by the above figures, 24,062 boxes were sold on the board. Using 85 lbs. as the weight of the average cheese, this gives a total of 2,045,270 lbs., which, at the average price of 14.3 cents, gives the aggregate cheese value at $292,473.61, which is an approximately correct summary of the 1915 work.

To this should be added an estimated production of 5,000 boxes of cheese, or 425,000 lbs. from the factories in this district, which were not represented on the Peterborough Board. Employing the local average price this gives an additional revenue of $60,775.00, and a grand total of $353,248.61.

Boon to Patrons.

In other words, the value of the cheese branch of the dairy industry in the Peterborough District during the past year is well over $350,000.00. It's a tidy little sum to apply to the farmers' bank accounts, especially the factory patrons who were prepared to take advantage of the higher prices offered by the buyers this year. Added to the returns from a plentiful harvest and generally satisfactory market conditions there should be no prospects of the wolf's shadow on the farmer's threshold this winter. In fact, if the dairy branch may be considered as a criterion of farm revenues for 1915, many of the farmers should be in a good condition to buy new coon coats, lightning rods or join the retired colony resident in Peterborough

Increased Production.

The records for the past year reveal a decidedly satisfactory increase in cheese production. The total is the largest since 1912. Fortunately the weather man played into the hands of the dairymen. There was no dry spell to mar any period of the past season. Pasturage was rich from the opening of Spring until the last cheese was made. This favorable condition accounts, to a large extent, for the increased production of cheese.

Prices Were High.

Added to this was the keen demand for export, which, if it did weaken in August, brought rich results in the opening and closing months of the season.

The top price was 18 3-8 cents, paid at the first sale. The highest price last year was 15 1-8 cents, on October 7th, reflecting at that time the influences of disrupted shipments. In 1908 prices ranged from 10 to 13 cents, and in the intervening years, held around 12 and 13 cents.

Significant Increase.

Under the impulse of higher prices the dairy farmers responded to the promise of increased business and, aided by ideal pasturage, have made a step, temporary though it may be, toward placing the manufacture of cheese on its former basis. The disruption of regular trade gave Canada an exceptional opportunity of more extensive admittance to the British cheese markets, and there is little doubt that, not only in quantity but also in quality, the Canadian factories have excelled themselves. It may be that a greater demand, for Canadian cheese may be felt next year, thereby producing future, as well as immediate, financial returns.

Prices Satisfactory.

Compared with other Boards in this district Peterborough can show particularly satisfactory prices. An attempt last Spring to divide the local Board between Peterborough and Norwood appeared ill-timed, and unadvisable. It was only a suggestion, but it bore evident indications of short-sighted consideration, and lacked a sound knowledge of cheese board operations. The more numerous the factories selling here, the more unity shown by the salesmen, the greater the advantage to the individual factories. "In unity there is strength" applies just as pertinently to dairymen as to any other group.

Patriotic Giving.

It would be unfair, even in this hasty review of the past season, to remain silent regarding the spontaneous gift of a day's make of cheese for patriotic purposes. Salesmen reported from their patrons unanimous support to this suggestion and some factories made splendid responses. If any farmers withheld their day's milk supply for the "patriotic cheese" their "gain" will be, after all, of greatest loss to themselves.

It may not be amiss to remark upon the efficiency of Mr. Robt. Duff, salesman for Selwyn factory, who presided over the Board's affairs this year, succeeding Mr. W. C. Switzer; also to recognize the work of the Secretary, Mr. E. Hawthorne, of Warsaw, and lastly the satisfaction and co-operation rendered by the buyers. By the way, Mr. G. A. Gillespie was, by a great deal, the heaviest buyer of the year, securing about half the cheese offered on the Board.

Record of Sales.

The following shows the number of cheese sold, and at the top price at each sale

SEEK SUSPECT IN FATAL SHOOTING

Paving Company Employee Dies in Hospital, Result of Bullet Wound Received During Argument.

BUFFALO, Nov. 17.—Giuseppe Rao, 28 years old, who boarded at 99 Commercial street with several other men, employees of paving companies, died in the Homeopathic hospital from a bullet wound. The police are looking for Angelo Pertusello, 25 years old, another boarder at the place. Pertusello and another man, whose first name in Anthony, but whose last name is unknown to the police, disappeared shortly after the shooting.

Engage in Argument.

According to statements made to the police at headquarters, Roa slept in one room with six other men, and Pertusello slept in a room in back of that room with two other men. It seems Pertusello and Salvator Bennici, another boarder, returned home late Saturday night. They knocked on the door until they finally woke up Anthony, and he let them in. Witnesses say Pertusello and Rao engaged in an argument, but went to bed shortly after.

When the men awakened the argument was continued, and witnesses say that while Rao was bending over Pertusello's bed, the latter pulled a revolver from beneath his pillow and fired. The bullet entered Rao's mouth, severed the windpipe and came out the lower part of the back of the neck.

Detectives Murphy, Ryan, and smaldino found Rao lying on the floor in the middle of the room. They sent him to the hospital. Witnesses told the detectives that Pertanello dressed hurriedly and ran toward the foot of Commercial street. Several of Rao's and Pertusello's friends are being held as witnesses.

ST. VITUS' DANCE

Hamilton, Ont.—"While I have not had occasion to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, I have observed its good effects. My brother used it for St. Vitus' Dance. A neighbour recommended it and brother began taking it at the age of ten. He had tried different remedies, but they did not help him permanently. We used 'Golden Medical Discovery' for about three months and he had no return for his trouble. He is nineteen and has been well since."—Miss Margaret Haddow, 227 Murray Street Hamilton, Ont.

A HUMAN MATCH FACTORY

The body contains phosphorous sufficient to make 833,000 matches. Phosphorous is one of the fourteen elements composing the body—divided among bones, flesh, nervous system and other organs. The perfect health of body requires a perfect balance of the elements. These elements come from the food we eat—the stomach extracts and distributes them.

But if the stomach is deranged—the balance of health is destroyed and the blood does not carry the proper elements to the different organs and there is blood trouble—nerve trouble — rheumatism — gout — heart trouble. Pain is the hungry cry of starved organs. Put the liver, stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition into condition of health. This is just what is done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which has been so favourably known for nearly 50 years. It is now put up in tablet form, as well as liquid, and can be obtained of medicine dealers everywhere or by mail by sending 50 cents in 1c. stamps for trial box—address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo N.Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the original little liver pills first put up nearly 50 years ago. They regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Much imitated but never equalled. Sugar-coated and easy to take as candy.

COUNT TELLS WIFE TO STRUGGLE ALONG ON $7,500 A YEAR

Petition of Mrs. Frelinghuysen to Draw More from Her Personal Income is Denied by Surrogate.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Mrs. Mai Watson Frelinghuysen will have to live on a personal allowance of $7,500 a year in addition to her husband's income.

Surrogate Fowler declined to allow her to draw more than that sum from her individual income, although she and her husband said the money is much needed by her. She has an income of from $15,000 to $20,000 from the estate of Annie Duncan Watson, her mother.

Miss Watson married Frederick T. Frelinghuysen on October 8, 1914, when she was eighteen. On January 12, 1915, Frelinghuysen was appointed her guardian and obtained permission from the court to spend $7,500 a year from her income. He petitioned yesterday for the right to spend $10,000 yearly, explaining that the war in Europe has reduced his own income.

"While I am willing and able to furnish my wife with the necessities of life," he said, "my own personal income is not sufficient to provide her in the way in which she was accustomed to live before her marriage. She needs wearing apparel and personal effects. The maintenance of a motor car for her personal use; a house in the country; an apartment in town, and a liberal amount of spending money are necessary to enable her to continue the mode of life she enjoyed when your petitioner married her."

The Frelinghuysen live at No. 410 Park avenue in the Winter and at Westbury, L. I., in the Summer.

POULTRY NOTES

This is the season of the year to put in a stock of dusting material for the hens to use during the winter. Dust is a necessary luxury for hens. By its use they are enabled to rid themselves of mites and to remove all scales and dirt from the skin. Lice and mites do their greatest injury to the fowls at night while on the roost. Instinctively they look for a place to dust in the morning. Do not force your hens to dust in the dropping or feed litter. Nail an old grocery box in one corner of the house. Elevate it above the floor so that it will not be filled with straw or litter and put in six or eight inches of dusting material. To be effective the dusting material must be very light and dry, and fine enough to fill the breathing pores of the mite and lice. A good dusting material is composed of equal parts of fine sand, road dust and sifted coal ashes. A cupful of kerosene, and a handful of sulphur, thoroughly mixed with the dust will make the dust bath still more effective.

The Alberta Department of Agriculture will conduct a second egg laying competition for poultry breeders of that province during the coming year. The next competition commences November 15th, 1915.

To finish turkeys for market, feed shorts with skim milk in the morning, give the birds free range during the day, and at night give a good feed of wheat with plenty of skim milk to drink.

Do not use narrow roosts—1 x 4 inch pieces placed wide side up are best—till all are accustomed to the roosts.

Straw is the best litter that we have ever found for use in the laying houses. Some say to store up leaves for litter, but they are almost sure to become damp and mouldy, and we wish to avoid all moulded material. Straw should be plentiful on the farm so let us use it for the best results.

Wry necks are often induced by having the roosts too close to the rear wall. Give the birds plenty of room as well as plenty of fresh air.

Arts and Crafts Column

In this column, conducted by Mr. Hepburn Johnstone, painter and decorator, 240 College Street, will be answered on Wednesdays — questions of the kind given below, for the benefit of those who, in this period of stringency and enforced and suggested economy, might like doing their own work. Questions relating to painting, sign-writing, paperhanging, furniture polishing, and decorating may be sent to the Examiner, and will receive attention in due course.

Mrs. J. C. R., Peterborough—I have been an interested reader of your "column," and would very much like to know why it is impossible to buy white paint that will not go yellow. I had my painter do some white painting, and he put blue in the white, saying that would prevent it from turning, but it did not. So you see I have never had real white. At first it was a very pale blue, and now it is almost cream. If you can throw any light on this subject I am sure it will be appreciated by many, as it seems to be a universal complaint.

Ans.—On September the 15th last I dealt with this subject in the following words: "There are many kinds of white paint. There are also many causes of discolouration, such as coal gas, sulphur fumes, tobacco fumes, excess of oil, inferior vehicle, or perhaps pure vehicle and inferior pigment. It is, and always has been, one of the paint problems that the manufacturers and painters have been trying to solve. But thanks to scientific investigation, actual tests and constant observation on the part of interested men, we to-day can make a white paint that will not turn yellow for a considerable time at least. I could hardly set forth here a formula to make white paint that will stay white, unless I know the conditions under which it was to be used. White paint suitable for exterior would be unfit for interior, and vice versa. Painters use white lead in place of zinc white very often, when the latter should be used, and vice versa. The immediate undercoat, exact proportions of ingredients and atmospheric conditions, are all important factors which an up-to-date painter must be familiar with, or become a back number." If you paid for good work and did not get it, then your painter is either ignorant or dishonest. If you let me know the exact conditions and enclose a stamped addressed envelope I will gladly give you a formula to make white paint that will stay white. With reference to the blue, I may say most painters make the mistake of using dry or ground ultramarine blue in white lead. It is cheap but very fugitive.

A Constant Reader, Peterborough, Ont.—Is there any such thing as a paste form drier for light colour paints, and how is it made?

Ans.—Yes there is, what is known at "patent drier," and is used extensively by high-class painters. It is composed principally of sugar of lead, finely ground.

Polly X, City.—I have a little pattern on some wall-paper which I thought would make a pretty little stencil. Could you, through your "Arts and Crafts" column, tell me how I could transfer this pattern so as to make a stencil?

Ans.—I presume by your question that you know how to make a stencil So I will not interfere. As the pattern is "little," procure a sheet of note paper or foolscap, pour on it some gasoline or benzine, and while still wet and transparent, trace your pattern with a lead pencil. If it dries and becomes opaque, apply more liquid with a soft brush or rag and continue. After which cut our your stencil in the usual way, leaving sufficient tabs or bars to hold the plate. Then give your stencil a couple of coats of shellac. If the pattern was a large one, heavier paper would be necessary, and another process adopted.

Mrs. W. J., East City.—You answered my question satisfactorily last week, and I made my windows look like real ground glass. Since then I have seen others I like better though. They have bare lines crossed near the corners running through them. How is that done?

Ans.—Those lines are done with a small stick while the paint is wet. Your paint, however, must be hard by now, and it is more difficult as a consequence. You might manage by using a very narrow chisel or a small sewing machine screw driver, and with a perfectly straight stick as a guide, scratch a line the width of your chisel.

Eleanor, Peterborough, Ont.—Would you please let me know through your helpful "Arts and Crafts" column how I can clean old solid brass handles and trimmings that have turned dark with age?

Ans.—This question varies somewhat from the kind usually treated in this colun. Nevertheless here is a recipe I have, but have never tried. First remove the handles, etc., and wash them with liquor pottassae 1 fluid oz.; water, 20 fluid oz.; or this 1 oz.; of oxalic acid, 6 oz.; rotton stone, ½ oz.; gum arabic all in powder, 1 oz. Sweet oil and enough water to make a paste; polish with this. Now here is my own suggestion. Do not attempt to clean out the crevices at all. Simply wash them well with water to which some ammonia has been added, and with sweet oil and rotton stone polish the high lights, cleaning out the oil thoroughly when finished. In this way I think they will look richer than if all polished. Let me know the result as I am interested.

THE FUNERAL OF MRS. LUDGATE

The funeral of Mrs. John Ludgate was held yesterday afternoon to Little Lake cemetery and was largely attended. Rev. Canon Davidson was the officiating clergyman and he was assisted by Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's church. The pallbearers were Messrs. J. D. Collins, Adam Hull, Alex Gibson, Robt. Fair, W. H. Hill and W. G. Ferguson.

Music & Drama

Another large audience witnessed the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation," which was given in the Grand Opera house last night. Those who have not yet seen this wonderful production will have one more opportunity this evening. The story epitomizes the events leading up to the Civil War, and the events that followed, including the assassination of Abraham Lincoln then President of the United States. The battle scenes represent one of the most thrilling spectacles of its kind. This portion of the work was produced at an enormous cost and necessitated the employment of thousands of men. Shells costing eighty dollars apiece contributed to the realistic effects of the scene. The events subsequent to the surrender of General Lee are equally as interesting if not more so, than the picture of war itself.

The rioting that followed the civil war and the frequent bloody clashes between the blacks and the whites all tell a powerful story. The organization of the Ku Klux Clan and their success in ridding the south of political adventurers and carpet baggers brings the audience nearer to the climax which leaves the once turbulent South in a state of tranquility.

The big symphony orchestra is a feature of the performance.

TORONTO, Nov. 17. — Word that Lieut. Chester Hughes, son of Dr. James L. Hughes, and a nephew of Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, has been killed in action at the front, was received in a private cable to the Militia Department yesterday afternoon. Lieut. Hughes was attached to No. 6 Company, Canadian Field Engineers, and prior to enlistment for overseas was an engineer, engaged on railway work in New Brunswick.

Lieut. Hughes was born in Toronto, and was the only son of Dr. James L. Hughes. He received his education in the Public schools and the University of Toronto, being a graduate of the School of Practical Science. His last position was with the C.P.R. in the Toronto division. Lieut. Hughes was 27 years of age. No details as to his death have as yet been received.

Missionary Work Among Shantymen

Rev. Thos. Joplin is in the city for a few days in the interests of the work of the Shantymen's Christian Association. This organization is designed to do missionary work of both the moral and practical kind, in lumber, mining and railway construction camps, which have a total population in this province of some 350,000, mostly foreigners, who may, many if no all of them, become permanent citizens of the country. The need of bringing these people under influences that will improve the character of their citizenship is most obvious. The fifth annual report, while giving interesting details of the excellent work done by the association and a moving indication of the needs of the work, states that the receipts in behalf of its fund founded, in voluntary offerings alone, to $3,252, of which $78 was contributed by Peterborough citizens as follows:

Mrs. E. H. Campbell	$ 2.00
John Crane	2.00
A. A. Goodfellow	2.00
R. W. Reid	2.00
Mrs. M. G. Wood	10.00
Miss M. Dickson	15.00
Miss C. Dickson	15.00
Mrs. T. G. Hazlett	15.00

Rev. Mr. Joplin will be in the city for a few days and the interests of the works he represents are heartily commended to the attention of our citizens.

GERMAN AEROPLANE CARRIED CAPTURED CANADIAN GUN

Mr. Charles Duggan has received from Private Patrick Duncan of the 14th Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 1st Canadian Division, the following interesting letter.

Dear Charlie:— A line to let you know I am well, hoping this letter will find you the same. Things are the same as usual here, quiet. There was a little excitment around here yesterday.

Our anti-air craft guns brought down an enemy aeroplane just behind our lines. The pilot was hit above the left eye with a piece of shrapnel. He was quite a young fellow, too, only seventeen. The observer was killed. This is what I call a marvellous coincidence. When the machine guns were dismantled from the German aeroplane, which is one of Germany's latest type and carried four guns, one of them turned out to be our (14th Batt.) number one machine gun which fell into the enemy's hands at Langemarck last April. One could hardly believe it but it is true.

SUCCESSFUL MEETING WAS HELD AT MANVERS

In connection with the patriotic campaign for the raising of funds for patriotic and Red Cross work in the township of Manvers a most successful meeting was held last night at the Orange Hall, Manver Station.

The chair was ably occupied by Mr. J. J. Preston, M.P.P. for East Durham. Mr. Preston in opening the meeting emphasized the need of every citizen doing his duty at the present hour, and expressed his sincere belief that the residents of the township of Manvers would not be found wanting in a hearty response to the patriotic and Red Cross cause. On behalf of the audience and the residents of the township he cordially welcomed the visiting speakers.

Eloquent and inspiring addresses were delivered by Lieut.-Col. Stevenson, D. O'Connell and F. D. Kerr of Peterborough, who were sent out by the Speakers' Patriotic League. The addresses were received with marked attention and sympathy by the audience, and at the conclusion of the evening the thanks of the audience was presented to the speakers by Mr. Preston. The meeting was closed by a hearty singing of the National Anthem.

From the interest displayed there is no doubt that the township of Manvers will respond splendidly to the campaign that is being undertaken in the township to raise $5,000 for patriotic and Red Cross purposes. From the speakers' standpoint a pleasant feature of the evening was the hospitable entertainment of the speakers by Mr. and Mrs. J. Johnston, which was much appreciated.

WOMEN SUFFER MOST FROM AERIAL ATTACKS

MILAN, via Paris, Nov. 17. Travellers arriving from Vienna, where an Austrian air raid resulted in the death of thirty persons and the injury of more than double that number, describe the raid in interviews in the Corriere della Sera as having been favoured by a foggy morning which allowed the hostile air craft to approach close to the city before they were noticed. They flew as low as 4,500 feet, and each threw from five to six bombs according to the travellers' accounts, flying off when they were attacked by Italian aeroplanes.

A bomb dropped in the Piazza Erbe found women as its victims for the most part, a group of them having taken shelter under the portico of the Chamber of Commerce. This bomb is said also to have killed a second lieutenant of infantry, the only member of the military forces who lost his life, it is asserted. One of the best known physicians in a leading hospital of the city was killed by another bomb.

No damage was done to military buildings or to railway property.

Women will be allowed to ride astride at the coming New York horse show.

Missouri has 21 woman lawyers and 50 female physicians and surgeons.

Improvements Will Be Made To Street Lighting System

Matter Was Discussed at Last Night's Meeting of the Fire, Water and Light Committee—Utilities Commission is Willing to Make Minor Changes Until Such Times as New System is Installed.

The Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council and the Utilities Commission met last evening for the purpose of discussing a number of proposed changes in the present street lighting system. Mr. T. F. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission, was unable to be present owing to the illness of his father in Lindsay.

Ald. J. J. Duffus, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, submitted a statement concerning a number of changes in the street lighting system that were approved of by the Council. He was of the opinion that incandescent lamps could be substituted for some fourteen arc lights, and a much larger area lighted as a result.

Minor Changes.

Mr. H. O. Fisk of the Utilities Commission, intimated that as soon as the new sub-station was completed which would be some time next year it was the intention of the Commission to instal a modern street lighting system. The Commission, at the present time, was not anxious to incur any capital expense in the way of changes until the new system is ready for installation, but would be willing to make a reasonable number of minor changes, such as was outlined by the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

The proposed changes include a magnetite arc light on Water Street, between Hunter and Simcoe Streets; also one on Hunter Street, between the Bell Telephone Company and Aylmer Street.

It was suggested that Engineer Jamieson of the Fire Department, who has been acting assistant chief for some time, with the regular fireman's pay, should be made Acting Assistant Chief, with pay according to rank. The Committee approved of the suggestion.

Street Crossings.

City Clerk Armstrong was instructed to notify the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, also the C.P.R. and G.T.R., that they must give the city at least twenty-four hours' notice before tearing up any of their street crossings.

APPEALS DEALT WITH BY THE COURT OF REVISION

List of Appeals Respecting the Special Assessment Made to Pay the Cost of Constructing Pavements on Parts of Charlotte, Simcoe, Aylmer, Water and Brock Streets —A Number Were Laid Over Until the Next Sitting of the Court.

The Court of Revision met last evening and dealt with the following appeals respecting the special assessment made to pay the cost of constructing pavements on parts of Charlotte, Simcoe, Aylmer, Water and Brock streets as local improvements.

The following appeals were heard:

Bennett and Goodwill — That the lane on Water street, assessed to Bennett and Goodwill, the Bank of Montreal, St. Alphonsus' Lyceum and W. H. Hamilton, was a public lane and should be charged to the city.

The appeal was allowed by the court and Bennett and Goodwill's assessment reduced from 19 feet 4 inches to 16 feet 10 inches and 2 feet 6 inches charged to the others mentioned for the lane was struck off, and the lane charged to the city.

Was Laid Over.

W. H. Hamilton claimed that he was charged for 26 feet instead of 25 feet on the north side of Simcoe street. The matter was laid over until November 23rd. The Toronto Savings and Loan Company will be notified.

Mrs. S. Jinks alleged that she was assessed for 93 feet instead of 38 feet 1 inch at 346 Charlotte street. The appeal was laid over until the next sitting of the court. Similar action was taken in the case of Dr. M. McCulloch who asserted that he was assessed for 52 feet instead of 40 feet at 312 Charlotte street.

W. H. Bradburn claimed that he was charged with 59 feet 2 inches in part lot 2 on north side Simcoe street, west of George street, instead of 56 feet, also that he was charged with 96 feet 2 inches at 167 Brock street instead of 95 feet. Both appeals were laid over.

T. McQuillan stated that he was charged with 30 feet 9 inches at 215 Simcoe street instead of 28 feet 6 inches. The matter was laid over.

T. B. McGrath claimed that he was overcharged on property at 200 Aylmer street. Judgment: Appellant's assessment for 340 Aylmer street be reduced by six feet and six feet charged to the Halpin estate for a lane struck off and 12 feet charged to the city.

J. A. Wearing asserted that Mrs. E. Paterson was charged on Brock street, north Brock, for 115 feet 6 inches instead of 53 feet. The matter was laid over.

Question of a Lane.

J. Nugent said that he was overcharged at 205 Brock street. Judgment: Mr. Nugent's assessment be reduced by 5 feet and Miss Caldwell's assessment reduced by 5 feet to a lane, and 10 feet charged to the city.

J. W. Butcher claimed that he was overcharged one foot for 134 and 136 Brock street. The matter was laid over.

C. Westlake said that he was charged with 38 feet 10 inches at 149 Brock street, instead of 25 feet. The matter was laid over until the next sitting of the court, which will be held on Tuesday, November 23rd.

CANCER ON INCREASE DESPITE MANY "CURES."

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 17 — The many "cures" for cancer announced within the last year and a half have not decreased the dread disease in the United States. Cancer, rather, is increasing.

The ailment claimed 80,000 victims last year, according to Dr. Curtis E. Lakeman, of New York, executive secretary of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. That's an increase of 5,000 over the year before.

Dr. Lakeman made the statement in a paper read by him in the public health section of the Southern Medical Association, in convention here.

Christmas Boxes to St. James' Church Boys From the Ladies' Aid

The men of St. James' Methodist Church, who are at the front will get a pleasant surprise when they open the Christmas boxes which have been made up and forwarded to them by their Ladies' Aid Society. Many activities connected with the church work have received the warmest support of the members of the Ladies' Aid, but in preparing Christmas remembrances for their boys in khaki they added a personal solicitude that should be greatly appreciated by the men overseas. Each box included one pound of Christmas cake, cookies, Chiclets, Oxo cubes, candles, home-made maple cream, butter Scotch, acid drops, raisins and loaf sugar.

On top of each package was a pressed maple leaf and a Christmas greeting card from the pastor, Rev. Benj. Greatrix, bearing his photograph and this inscription, "The Lord bless thee, and keep thee; the Lord make His face shine upon thee; the Lord lift up His countenance upon thee, and give thee peace."

Perfectly Satisfied.

Pessimist: You haven't half all that you wanted in life, have you?

Optimist: No; but I haven't had all that I didn't want, either.

OBITUARY

THE LATE MRS. HAULTAIN.

The intelligence announced in last night's Examiner of the death at Montreal of Mrs. F. W. Haultain, will arouse in many minds, especially those of the older citizens, recollections of a most estimable lady, at one time a prominent resident of Peterborough. She was the relict of the late Col. F. W. Haultain, himself a citizen of no usual prominence, in that he was the first Liberal to be elected to the House of Commons from Peterborough, and later registrar of deeds, and in all ways a public-spirited and highly respected citizen. Mrs. Haultain resided here several years after the death of her husband in 1882, removing later to Montreal, where she died. While living in Peterborough Mrs. Haultain won hosts of friends and the highest respect for her beautiful character. She was unobtrusively foremost in good works, especially those of a charitable nature. She was a member of St. Paul's congregation. She was the mother of four sons and three daughters, most of whom are, as far as known, are still living. One of the sons is Hon. W. F. G. Haultain, at present Chief Justice of Saskatchewan. He was formerly Premier of the Northwest Territories. Interment of Mrs. Haultain's remains will be in Peterborough. The funeral will on the arrival of the 5.48 p.m. C.P.R. express, to-morrow, proceed from the station to Little Lake cemetery, Rev. Canon Davidson officiating.

A CHANCE FOR CIVIC ECONOMY

Scheme Will Be Unfolded at To-night's Meeting of the City Council

At least five hundred dollars may be saved by the city if the scheme proposed by Sanitary Inspector Spence, is adopted at to-night's meeting of the City Council. At least that is the opinion of a number of aldermen who were present at a meeting of the Property Committee when the scheme was first unfolded. At present the city is paying a rental of three hundred dollars a year for a dumping ground, whereon is deposited the night soil collected throughout the city, while the individual ratepayers pay anywhere from one dollar to five dollars to have such places cleaned out at certain periods throughout the year.

Fifty-four a Day.

The Sanitary Inspector estimates the number of such places at fourteen hundred, which if cleaned out regularly would mean that fifty-four would have to be cleaned out each day. The Inspector proposes to tax each household fifteen cents a month for such work. This would amount to one dollar and eighty cents a year. This will bring in a revenue of approximately twenty-five hundred dollars a year. The capital outlay for a garbage waggon and one team of horses, also two men, would be well within the above figure, and should leave the city a substantial balance. The two men who would be willing to do this work would agree to provide a dumping ground. Their wages would amount to three dollars a day for the teamster and two dollars and a half for the assistant. Besides this the city would be saved the cost of a dumping ground.

HER WORK HAS BEEN APPRECIATED

Miss Lillian Massey Treble's Death Regretted at Newcastle

NEWCASTLE, Nov. 17. — The news of the death of Mrs. Lillian Massey Treble was learned here in her native town with deep regret. A resolution of regret and sympathy was passed by the Methodist congregation of Newcastle, circuit on motion of A. A. Coldwell, Recording Steward, seconded by E. C. Beman. This village was the place of her home up to young womanhood, and this church her place of worship during the same period, and Mrs. Treble gave very substantial assistance towards the remodeling of the church a few years ago and the erection of the new parsonage here.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

A special meeting of the City Council will be called this evening to consider the matter of caring for returning soldiers and also of purchasing the Exhibition grounds.

Civic Economy.

If Sanitary Inspector Spence's scheme for taking care of the night soil is adopted by the Council, the city will save the rental cost of a dumping ground which at present amounts to three hundred dollars a year.

Quiet in Police Circles.

This week has been an unusually quiet week in police circles. Thursday morning there was a clean sheet while yesterday's docket was represented by one case, consisting of a breach of the traffic by-law, which netted the city two dollars and costs.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES.

Chatham City Council has decided to give $2.00 a month for a year to the Canadian Patriotic Fund. The monthly contributions will start next month. In addition, it is planned to raise $25,000 for the fund by public contribution during the year.

FINGERPRINTS OF RECKLESS DRIVERS

Police Commissioner Woods Takes up New Scheme with Chief Magistrate McAdoo.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17. Suggestions on the advisability of taking finger prints of automobile owners or chauffeurs arrested for offences which indicate recklessness and disregard of human life are contained in a letter sent to William McAdoo, Chief City Magistrate, by Arthur Woods, Commissioner of Police.

Mr. Woods calls attention to the difficulty which magistrates and the police find in proving the offenders arrested and tried have been guilty of previous offences. He cites numerous cases where automobile owners and drivers have succeeded in deceiving the court concerning previous arrests, and also shows that the Secretary of State has revoked automobile licenses where the character and number of offences warranted such action under the law.

Among the persons whose offences have made them liable to the loss of their licenses the Police Commissioner names John J. Murphy, James McGrath, Yale Kurtzman and Harry Kircher. McGrath is serving a sentence of six months for driving an automobile while intoxicated, and the others have been arrested and convicted more than once of speeding and of reckless driving, he asserts.

"I know that you feel that it would help in the enforcement of the law," he writes, "if the finger prints should be taken of chauffeurs in order that the intent of the law should be carried out and that the penalty might be graduated according to the number of the offences committed."

FORMER POLICEMAN FOUND DEAD UNDER VIADUCT.

BUFFALO, Nov. 17. Daniel J. Loftus, a former city policeman whose home was at 148 Mackinaw Street, was found dead on the Lehigh Valley Railroad tracks at the cross-over bridge in West Seneca.

Medical Examiner Stocker, who examined the body, said Loftus was not killed by a train, but that it was possible that he fell off the bridge. His skull was fractured and his legs and arms broken. He was a brother of James F. Loftus, auditor of the Excise Department. The body was identified by Thomas O'Connor, a nephew, and Andrew Forest, a brother-in-law.

Hearing What Allies Have to Offer For Greek Co-operation

Denys Cochin, French Cabinet Member Interviewing King Constantine To-day—Allies Insist on Strict Non-interference by Greece With Balkan Operations.

ATHENS, Nov. 18. King Constantine is hearing definitely from Denys Cochin to-day what the Allies have to offer for passive Greek co-operation in their Balkan campaign, how much more they are prepared to give for active aid and how they will retaliate if Greece joins hands with the Germanic powers.

Cochin is a French Cabinet member without portfolio. He conferred Wednesday with Premier Skouloudis and ex-Premier Venizelos. His audience of the King was arranged for to-day. After finishing his talk with His Majesty, it was said he probably will go to Salonika to look at the war situation from a shorter range.

The least the Allies insist on its the strict non-interference by Greece with their Balkan operations. Assurances have been made that there will be no demand for the withdrawal of their troops from Greek territory near the Serb, Bulgar and Turkish frontiers, and guarantees that no attempt will be made to intern any British, French or Serb soldiers who may be driven temporarily across the Greek frontier.

There is still a probability that the Northern Serbian army may slip through Austro-German fingers into Montenegro. The Southern army stands a better chance of getting into Albania. The Northern forces will be welcomed by the Montenegrins, however, if they succeed in joining them The Southern troops may meet a hostile reception by the Albanians.

CONTRABAND MADE OVER

Fats and Oils Reach Germany as Margarine and Soap.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 16. The Dutch newspapers have recently been turning a searchlight on the frontier traffic which is alleged to be furnishing Germany with many commodities which she needs. According to The Telegraaf, there is little violation of the letter of the Dutch regulations regarding contraband, but there is a great deal of skilful evasion which is proving very profitable to the Dutch trader.

Fats and oils are contraband, and therefore offer difficulties to the smuggler, but "margarine" and "soap" are on the list of allowed exports A cartoon in The Telegraaf shows an endless train of waggons winding along a country road towards the frontier, each waggon loaded with cases labelled "Margarine" and "Soap," and a note underneath the picture reads "Fats and oils are contraband, but margarine and soap are all right, so let us go."

Platform Littered.

A correspondent writing from Bergen-op-Zoom, which is one of the most convenient points for export to Germany, says: "Each freight train which comes in seems to contain a greater or smaller number of cases of so-called margarine. The platform is littered with them, the storeroom is piled almost to the ceiling. Outside the station yard is thronged with vehicles. I counted 30 carts, five handcarts, several dogcarts, and 90 men with bicycles. The entire troop is commonly referred to by residents of Bergen as 'the smugglers.'

"As readily as possible the cases are hustled out from the station and immediately the procession starts for the frontier. There are three roads from Bergen across the frontier, but the leniency of the customs officials seems to vary considerably at the three points, and one road is followed by the majority of the margarine-laden wagons.

Unprecedented Prosperity.

"I am told that an average of about 20,000 pounds of margarine and 2,000 pounds of soap is sent over the frontier from Bergen-op-Zoom daily. It is commonly believed that the so-called margarine is uneatable, and that the "soap" is useless for washing. The soap, it is said, is a composition of linseed oil, for which there is a great demand in Germany, while the 'margarine' is said to be composed of certain elements needful for lubrication."

It was at Bergen just a year ago that the heaviest influx of Belgian refugees reached Holland. The town to-day is reaping the reward for the warm-hearted welcome with which it received and fed the refugees, for Bergen to-day out of the heavy profits of its trade with Germany, is experiencing an unprecedented prosperity.

And her principle centre of trade with Germany, according to the Dutch newspapers, is the point where the Rhine passes from Germany into Holland, where, for some distance the frontier runs down the middle of the stream.

GERMAN NAVY BROUGHT WAR, SAYS PROFESSOR.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Nov 17. "The most potential cause of the European War was the rapid increase of the German navy," according to Professor George H. Allen of Berlin, who is visiting his parents here.

Professor Allen has just completed the first volume of a treatise on the present war. Former President Taft wrote the introduction

"The ratio of British and German sea power had always been as 16 to 10. German navalists worked for a navy large enough to cope with any, aroused the British to a higher pitch of national frenzy," says Professor Allen

"Germany did not require a navy as large as that of Great Britain from a commercial standpoint. Britain's commerce is overseas, while fully one-half of Germany's customers can be reached by land routes."

Mackensen At Gallipoli

Teuton Commander of Serbian Invasion Said to Have Been Rushed to New Front

ROME, Nov 18.—Efforts of the Allies to win a victory on Gallipoli Peninsula will bring two master warriors -Lord Kitchener of England and Field-Marshal Von Mackensen of Germany, into conflict, according to reports received here to-day.

Von Mackensen is said to have arrived at Constantinople on Sunday, and left on Tuesday to assume command of the Turco-German forces on Gallipoli, while Kitchener is reported from Athens to have sailed on a warship from Mudros, Island of Lemnos, for the Dardanelles front

Germany's decision to send Von Mackensen to Turkey is said to have been reached as soon as the Kaiser learned that Kitchener has gone to the Levant

KAISER'S GREEK CASTLE IS SAFE

BERLIN, (by wireless to Sayville, L.I.), Nov 18—Amongst the items given out to-day for publication by the Overseas News Agency was the following:

"There have been no riots on the island of Corfu and the German Emperor's Castle, the Achilleion, has not been damaged. All the foreign reports asserting that part of the castle had been destroyed and that the trouble ceased only through the intervention of prominent citizens of Corfu were purely inventions, as can be stated upon authoritative source."

The above despatch contains the first intimation that rioting had taken place on the island of Corfu and that the Villa Achilleion had been damaged. The villa was erected in 1891 for the Empress Elizabeth of Austria, who died in 1898. It was purchased in 1907 by Emperor William who frequently went there for rest and recreation.

Kaiser at the Golden Horn Will Direct Armies in Great Near East Campaign

"War Lord" Hastens to Constantinople Where London Hears He Will Assume Supreme Command of All his Allied Forces and Combat Lord Kitchener's Influence.

LONDON, Nov. 18. The Kaiser, according to reports from Amsterdam, scenting grave peril in Lord Kitchener's presence in the Near East, is abandoning the tottering idol, Field Marshal Von Hindenburg, who is making a desperate effort to capture Dvinsk, and is hurrying to the Balkan theatre of war where, as a result of his peremptory orders, the Austro-Germans and Bulgarians, reinforced by Turks, have begun a great effort to crush the Serbians and destroy the Franco-British forces before the latter's numbers are augmented by the troops landing daily at Salonika. The Bulgarians have driven a wedge between the Serbs and the Franco-British forces after a series of sanguinary battles near Tetovo, and the Serbians, forced out of strong positions by overwhelming numbers, are retiring on Prilep and Monastir, the latter town being the objective of the invaders.

The Kaiser's presence in the Balkans is designed to offset the influence exerted by Lord Kitchener in Athens and Bucharest, and I am informed that his programme is to establish a Supreme War Council in Constantinople, where, treating the Sultan as he has treated the aged Emperor Francis Joseph, as a negligible quantity, the "All Highest" will direct the operations.

In view of the renewed great Russian offensive, the effect of the capture of Warsaw and the retreat of the Tsar's armies has been lost, and the "war lord" shrewdly counts on regaining his lost prestige and the support of Greece and Roumania, as his recent ultimatum shows, when he is firmly established in Constantinople directing all the movements of the troops of the Central Empires as well as those of Bulgaria and Turkey. The only way to foil his grandiose scheme, according to the military experts, is to continue hurling reinforcements into the Balkans and to bring the Allied sea power into action in the Aegean Sea. But time is a great factor now, and the situation, with Greece trembling in the balance, will not be helped by the disquieting shrieks of the "whimpering press" that "all is lost."

A special despatch to the Daily Telegraph from Salonika, after reporting Lord Kitchener's arrival at Mudros, on the Isle of Lemnos, says he is expected soon to reach Salonika, whence he will leave for Athens. There, acting as the spokesman for the Powers of the Quadruple Entente, with full authority to pledge any support which he deems advisable, he is expected to demand from King Constantine guarantees which, if they do not insure Greece's active participation in the war on the side of the Allies, will end forever the intrigues of the Germanophiles, who with German gold jingling in their pockets, are responsible for the present disgraceful situation and for the threats of Mr. Gounaris and other usurping Ministers that Greece may be forced, in case the Allies and the Serbians retreat to Greek territory, to attempt to disarm and intern them.

I am informed Lord Kitchener, who understands the peculiar Byzantine character better than any other Briton, is determined that King Constantine must pledge himself to the nations that have protected Greece and aided her to become great or the War Minister will force matters to a definite issue. His words will have potency due to the fact that the Allied arms in Serbia is growing daily and that the Anglo-French fleet is within striking distance and ready to strike hard if it is proved that, in addition to betraying Serbia, the men who have destroyed popular government in Greece have a pact with Bulgaria and are ready to cast in their lot with the Austro-Germans and their hereditary foe, the Turk.

There is no disguising the fact that with the increasing gravity, from the Allies' viewpoint, of the military situation in Serbia, the attitude of Greece toward the armies of the Entente has become a matter of the deepest concern. It is certain the presence at Salonika of the Anglo-French warships and transports has made some impression on King Constantine and his advisers. But with so much at stake, nothing short of a positive guarantee of the safety of the French, British and Serbian troops, should they be compelled by circumstances to retire into Greece, will satisfy London and Paris, the Ministers of which capitals are being strongly supported by the Russian and Italian representatives.

Don't Merely "Stop" a Cough

Stop the Thing that Causes it and the Cough will Stop Itself

A cough is really one of our best friends. It warns us that there is inflammation or obstruction in a dangerous place. Therefore, when you get a bad cough don't proceed to dose yourself with a lot of drugs that merely "stop" the cough temporarily by deadening the throat nerves. Treat the cause—heal the inflamed membranes. Here is a home-made remedy that gets right at the cause and will make an obstinate cough vanish more quickly than you ever thought possible.

Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you 16 ounces of the most pleasant and effective remedy you ever used, at a cost of only 54 cents. No bother to prepare. Full directions with Pinex.

It heals the inflamed membranes promptly and promptly that you wonder how it does it. Also loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough and stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol, and is famous the world over for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex," and don't accept anything else. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Soldier of Fortune ——— by Randall Parrish

Copyright, 1912, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

I crouched back to the wall, pistol in hand, and it seemed as though the blood in my veins had turned to ice. How could the candle have vanished so completely? There was but one way to account for this occurrence—some human, aware of my presence, had removed the candle, had stolen through the pitch darkness silently and as swiftly disappeared. I was locked in, trapped, and not alone!

I confess for an instant I was panic stricken, shrinking back from the horror of the black unknown which enveloped me. I could see and hear nothing, yet I seemed to feel a ghastly presence skulking behind that impenetrable veil. My first inclination was to creep back to the door and escape into the outer passage. Yet pride restrained me, while quickly supplemented by a return of courage I straightened up and advanced slowly, testing the wall with my hand, every muscle strained for action, listening for the slightest sound. I encountered nothing, heard nothing, until my groping fingers found the upper plank of a sleeping berth. I explored this cautiously, lifting the edge of a coarse blanket and reaching up to make sure the one above was also unoccupied. Satisfied that both were empty, I worked my way totally along to the second tier. As I reached into the lower of the two bunks my finger came in contact with some substance that left the impression of a human body beneath the blanket. I jerked away, startled, expecting my light touch would arouse the occupant. There was no movement, however, nor could I distinguish any sound of breathing.

Convinced I had been mistaken, I reached in once more to assure myself of the truth, and my hand touched cold, clammy flesh. The shock of discovery sent me reeling backward. It was not the dead body so much as the black gloom which robbed me of manhood. I could not see where to go, how to escape. At whatever cost I must procure light. Shaking as with palsy, yet with teeth clinched, I reached forward, groping my way back to the side of the bunk. I touched the edge of the blanket and thrust it away, feeling the body. The man was fully dressed, lying upon his back, and I experienced no difficulty in attaining the pockets of his coat. In the third I found what I sought—a box of matches.

I struck one and as the phosphorus head burst into flame stared about the vacant room and then down into the dead face within the bunk. The man had been killed by the stroke of a hatchet and was almost unrecognizable. Not until the blazing match had burned to my finger tips was I sure of his identity. Then, to my added horror, I recognized Coombs. I grasped the full significance of the man's death, the probable reason for his being stricken down. Whoever had been hidden behind that picture, crouching in the passage, had overheard his confession to me. This was vengeance wreaked upon a traitor, the executed death sentence of desperate men. And it had just been carried out—within the hour. The murderers might be even now lurking within the shadows watching my every motion.

Again a slender match flared into tiny flame, casting about a dim radius of light, partially reassuring me that I was alone. Before it flickered out into darkness my eyes made two discoveries—the opening of a dark passage to the left of the bunks and a ghastly hand protruding from the upper berth.

Above the murdered Coombs, hidden beneath blankets, was the body of the strange man shot in the upper room. The place was a charnel house, a spot accursed. I crept back from that ghastly scene of death as though invisible hands gripped my throat. I fairly choked with the unutterable horror which overcame me. And yet I knew I must act, must go on to the end. Even as I crouched there, trembling and unmanned, seeing visions in the darkness, hearing imaginary sounds, my thoughts leaped back to the girl upstairs. I could feel the courage returning, the leap of hot blood through my veins as I straightened up.

I risked one more match to make certain of the opening through the wall, dimly glimpsed beyond the berths. My eyes were not deceived. Here was a second wood supported passage, unblocked so far I could perceive, but black as pitch. I held the flaming splinter aloft, anxiously scanning the few feet thus revealed, but as it sputtered out, the red ash dropping to the floor, I felt renewed confidence that I was alone, unobserved. Whoever those assassins might be, they had departed, leaving only the helpless dead behind. No doubt they would come again to remove the bodies, to seek refuge in this hidden hole. But for the moment I was there undiscovered and must utilize each precious instant for discoveries and escape. Wild recklessness, a desire to break away from those grewsome surroundings, overcame all caution. Swiftly as I dared in the dense blackness I crept forward, feeling the smooth wall with eager fingers, my right hand still nervously gripping the pistol butt. Then I came to the door, similar to the other, although no groping about would reveal the catch or enable me to force it open.

Again I struck a match, guarding the infant flame with both hands against a slight draft which threatened its extinction. I caught a glimpse of a shadow on the wall and made one swift, automatic effort to leap aside, dropping the fatal match. The movement was too late. Something descended crashing upon my head, and I pitched forward into unconsciousness.

It must be I lay there practically dead for some time. I had no knowledge of being approached or handled, and yet every pocket was rifled, the pistol jerked from my hand and my coat ripped from my body. Like so much carrion the fellows had flung me back against the wall so as to make room for the swinging open of the door. Little by little, silently, comprehending now what had occurred and warned by the sound of voices not far away, I changed posture slightly, straightening out cramped and aching limbs and so turning my head as to enable me to see along the passage, where a ray of light streamed.

I lay twenty feet from the entrance to this habitation underground, thrust into the black shadow behind the door, which stood partially ajar. My position precluded any possibility of learning what was beyond that wooden barrier, but I could plainly view the entire north portion of the interior, although the only light radiated from a flickering candle. One edge of the table came within my vision, a man sitting beside it, his back turned toward me. He was smoking a short stemmed pipe and contented himself with a growling, indistinct utterance when addressed. Opposite, however, was a man of a different type, slender and active, his hair very dark and inclined to curl, a rather long face, slightly olive hued, with a small mustache waxed at the ends. His black, sparkling eyes attracted me first, and then his long, shapely hands. These grasped a sheet of paper, and I noticed others, including several unopened envelopes, lying before him on the table. He laughed a bit unpleasantly, a row of white teeth visible beneath the dark mustache.

"It's just as I thought, Herman," he said genially. "The fellow is a mere adventurer. There will be no one to take his disappearance seriously."

"But some one knows he come here."

"Only the two who sent him, and they'll never dare tell, and the woman. She is safe enough. Nigger Pete drove them out here, and we can close his mouth easily enough. It's been easy, Herman, and now with these two settled it leaves me a clear field."

"Maybe so—yes. But vat you think it all mean? I would know how set vas dey come."

The younger man shuffled the papers restlessly, his eyes on the face of the other.

"I confess there are some details missing, Herman," he said slowly, "but, in the main, it is clear enough. I take it this man Neale is a rascal. He went north to find the heir, discovered that he was either dead or had disappeared, ran into some scamp of the same kidney as himself and, between them, determined to cop the coin. That's my guess. Then they picked up this penniless soldier, who, by the way, resembles the missing son a bit, and sent him down here to play the part."

"Vell, maybe so. But vat about the shtick here?"

"Some one they picked off the streets. He's told to do it in this letter. They thought it best to prove their man married and so had to procure a woman. We won't have any trouble with her."

"Vat you do to be sure?"

"Turn her loose in New Orleans with a few dollars," carelessly. "All she knows about the affair can't hurt us if she does squeal. There are plenty of ways to shut her mouth. I'll know better how to handle her case right when I see her. Broussard is a long time at his job."

"Perhaps she fight beem—hey?"

"The worse for her—that creole is a wildcat. But I wish he would hurry, so we can get through the Gut on the flood time; that boat draws more water than is comfortable in this lagoon."

"You need not worry," said the German, placidly looking at his watch. "I take opt through safe. She'd goud sea boat, an' where I come in I can go out. Ach, 'tis the fellow come now!"

CHAPTER X.

Taken Prisoner.

THE newcomer passed so close beside me I could feel his foot touch mine. The door remained ajar and, if escape was possible, now was the time. With head reeling dizzily, I crept through the opening, yet held the latch, fascinated by the first spoken words within.

"Well, Broussard, what is it?"

"All seen to, sir."

"The bodies are planted, then?"

"The men attend to that."

"And the woman?"

"On her way; there was no trouble. Sallie had her doped, sir."

"I expected she would. Then that finishes our job here, Herman, and the quicker we are off the better. We got the fellow after you left, Broussard; hit him a bit too hard, it seems, but no one will ever investigate, so it's just as well. Adventurer named Craig, just discharged from the army."

"Where is he?"

"Lying there in the passage behind the door. Have Peters and Sam bury him along with the others and then join us. We'll go aboard."

I shut the door and started down the passage. For a dozen steps it was black as night. Then there was a sharp swerve to the right and a gleam of daylight in the far distance. Already they were at the barrier, and I ran forward recklessly, eager to escape into the open. The way was clear, the floor rising slightly, yet without obstructions. I could hear voices, the pounding of feet behind, and I made desperate effort to outdistance my pursuers. That they were merciless I knew, and my only hope lay in attaining some hiding place in the woods before they could emerge into the daylight. I thought of nothing else. But as I burst, straining and breathless, into the open hands gripped me from both sides. An instant I struggled to break free, fighting with a mad ferocity, which nearly accomplished the purpose. But they were too many for me. So Broussard's belt was strapped tightly, binding my hands helplessly to my sides, and I was hurled over so that I stared up blindly into the face of the fellow in command. His black eyes were sneering, while the unpleasant smile revealed a row of white teeth.

"Great God, man!" he exclaimed. "You must have the skull of an elephant. Are you actually alive?"

"Very much so," I gasped, defiant still.

"Maybe I finish beem monsieur," questioned Broussard, with knee still planted on my chest. "Then he not talk, hey?"

The leader laughed, with a wave of the hand.

"You take the fellow far too seriously. Let him up. I'll find a way to close his mouth if it ever be necessary. Besides, he knows nothing to do any harm."

Out of the depth of despair and defeat there had come an animating ray of hope—they were going to take me with them. Even as a prisoner I should be near her, would yet be able to dig out the truth.

WOMEN FROM 45 to 55 TESTIFY

To the Merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life.

Westbrook, Me.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and had pains in my back and side and was so weak I could hardly do my housework. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has done me a lot of good. I will recommend your medicine to my friends and give you permission to publish my testimonial."—Mrs. LAWRENCE MARTIN, 12 King St., Westbrook, Maine.

Marston, Wis.—"At the Change of Life I suffered with pains in my back and loins until I could not stand. I also had night-sweats so that the sheets would be wet. I tried other medicine but got no relief. After taking one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use for six months. The pains left me, the night-sweats and hot flashes grew less, and in one year I was a different woman. I know I have to thank you for my continued good health ever since."—Mrs. M. J. BROWNELL, Marston, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled in such cases.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Glass of Salts if Your Back Hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

THE DEACON'S DAY.

By M. QUAD.
(Copyrighted, by Associated Literary Press.)

Deacon Hardstone of Riverton was a good man. He was a man of years and dignity. He was a man always to be found on the side of law and order and charity. The only thing in this world that troubled him and his good wife was the fact that they had a nephew over at Saltville who was a loud young man. Money had been left him by an aunt, and he sported. He not only sported at home, despite the protests of his widowed mother, but he came over to Riverton and sported there. The deacon struggled and struggled with him, but it did no good. He would drink cocktails, and he would speed his auto around the town and on the highways, and finally he was ordered out of the deacon's house and told never to return. Then the sporty youth began to study how to get even.

Now, the deacon had a weakness for sweet cider, though he didn't go telling it around. When cider making time came he carted apples to the mill and had one barrel of cider made—never more. The cider would retain its sweetness for about a month. When it began to get an edge on it, it was provided with "mother" and rolled aside to become vinegar.

Of course this little one barreled affair was known to the nephew, and after a little thought he saw his way clear. When the apples and the barrel had been taken to the mill he was ready with his plot. Perhaps he had the aid of the owner of the mill, but that has never been satisfactorily settled. There are thirty-two gallons of cider in the average barrel. How many gallons of something else went into the barrel has not yet been solved by Sherlock Holmes. It was sufficient, no matter what the number.

When the deacon went after his barrel it was ready for him, and never did a cider barrel look more innocent. It was rolled down cellar to cool and was not tapped until the afternoon of the next day. Then the deacon's wife went out to visit a neighbor, and he put a spigot in the barrel and drew a glass to drink. He had been drinking cider for twenty-three years, but never did cider taste like that before. It had a peculiar taste. It had an agreeable taste. The palate just cried out for more. The deacon gave it more. He was a little bit frightened when he found himself laughing, for he had not laughed for sixteen years by the almanac, but he drew another glass and slowly sipped it and figured that he must have mixed a lot of Seek No Further apples in with the pippins. At any rate, he wasn't going to seek any further for a good thing. Who can tell just how many glasses of sweet cider a man will drink under favorable conditions? You can't even guess at it.

When Deacon Hardstone ascended from the cellar his eyes were shining and his hair curling. He put on his hat and walked out to the gate, wondering why his heels were so springy, and down by the postoffice he saw an auto. It was the one belonging to his sporty nephew. He walked down there to give the young man a blast; but, not finding him, he was seized with a sudden desire to take a ride all by his lonesome. He had been shown how to start and stop the machine. Before leaping in he whooped. He didn't mean to whoop, but the whoop sorter whooped itself. Then he whooped again as he started off.

The town of Riverton will never forget that day. In fact, it is observed as a sort of holiday under the name of "deacon's day." He put that auto at its fastest clip and went up and down the four or five streets. He drove everybody within doors. He immolated twenty different runaways. He whooped at the corners, and he whooped in the middle of the blocks. Sometimes he whooped and swung his hat at the same time.

When this happened the machine el-

HAD WEAK HEART
HAD TO STAY IN BED

Many women are kept in a state of fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable, and are unable to attend to their household, social or business duties, on account of the unnatural action of the heart.

To all such sufferers Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will give prompt and permanent relief. They do this by their calming, strengthening and invigorating action on the heart, causing it to beat regularly and naturally, and in addition to this they tone up the whole nerve system.

Mrs. J. Day, 234 John St. South, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I was so run down with a weak heart that I could not even sweep the floor, nor could I sleep at night. I was so awfully sick sometimes I had to stay in bed all day as I was so weak. I used three and a half boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am a cured woman to-day, and as strong as anyone could be, and am doing my own housework, even my own washing.

"I doctored for over two years, but got no help until I used your pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25. They can be had at all druggists or dealers, or will be mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The weekly food cost rose 8 cents last month, according to a report from the Labour Department, Ottawa. Advances occurred in grains, dairy products, fruits, vegetables and cotton. Canada's Harvest.

Canada has been blessed with a bountiful harvest. Tillers of the soil have not sown in vain. The wheat crop has been over 336 million bushels, an increase of over 174 million bushels, or a yield of over 72 per cent. in excess of the annual average.

Wheat is pouring through Winnipeg at the rate of 3 million bushels every 24 hours.

The first shipment of grain from the Northwest to Great Britain was made Oct. 17th, 1877, and went via the United States.

Oats are firmer and going higher in price. This is a good omen for winter trade. There will be a big surplus of oats to sell; the fall feeding in the fields has been good; there is a heavy crop of corn; and, with prices for live stock ruling as they do, there would seem to be more money to be made from feeding oats than from selling them.

Flour is up 10 cents on the outside market.

Fruit and Vegetables.

Apples, per bbl.	75c to $1.00
Potatoes, per bag	$1.40 to $1.45
Onions, peck	25c to 30c.

Vegetables Have Suffered This Year.

Continued wet weather from July 1st to the end of August caused considerable losses in many parts of the Province. Also there have been more insects which damage vegetables than have been known in the past twenty-five years.

Potatoes have suffered severely from blight and wet weather. Cauliflowers were practically destroyed by wet. Onions have been blighted more than has ever been known. Carrots, beets and parsnips suffered from green aphis in many sections.

Western Potatoes for the East.

A dispatch from Edmonton states that wholesalers are gathering potatoes to place in the eastern cities to cover the shortage there.

The event of the week in the grocery line was the advance of 25 cents in the wholesale price of sugar.

Jams, pickles and sauces, etc., are going up, as well as chocolate and cocoa, due to difficulties of shipment and such large quantities being requisitioned for war purposes.

ther grazed a tree or took to the sidewalk and cleared off the kerosene barrels in front of the groceries. Of course it was plain that something was wrong, and a hundred people would have extended help if they could, but the trouble was they couldn't.

But they stopped the deacon at last. They piled dry goods boxes on the street and ran him into a millinery store and captured him. He was still whooping, but he didn't fight back when they carried him home and put him to bed. Of course there was something done about it. No deacon can perform that way after so many years of probity without a bit of scandal following. He had to toe the mark before his church. He was dimly conscious that he had drunk too much cider, and he intended to own up like a man and ask that the contents of the barrel be investigated. He was saved from this, however. A brother deacon suggested that he submit his head for medical examination, and the suggestion was followed. A doctor felt of his bumps, asked him a lot of questions and then made a medical report to the effect.

"This is to certify that I have carefully examined into the mental condition of Deacon Hardstone, and I find that his late performance was begot, superinduced, encouraged and finally developed by what is known to scientists as a brainstorm. I don't think he'll be dangerous again for several years to come."

And after the charges against the deacon had been dropped he went home and said to his wife:

"Should our nephew Henry call and ask to be forgiven for drinking cocktails I think we'll try and do it, and tomorrow I'll knock the bung out of that barrel and let it begin to sour."

Italian Refugee Finds a Friend

Violinist Who Asks for Food Meets Chef who Knew Him in Happier Days.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Bowed with misfortunes caused by the war in Europe, Pasquale Camatti, an Italian violinist, entered the Felix-Portland Hotel, in West Forty-seventh street, and asked for something to eat, saying he had no money to buy food. Charles P. Fleming, the proprietor, told him to go downstairs to the chef and get some food. Oreste Vacari, the chef, at once recognized the violinist as an old friend from Goritz, and there was an affectionate greeting.

Camatti told his friend that his two sons had been killed in the war and that he had lost all of his little fortune. Being too old to join the colors, the violinist came to America in the expectation of rehabilitating himself. Unable to obtain work, he had been reduced almost to beggary, when his luck suddenly changed.

Learning of the situation, Mr. Fleming offered to find work for the musician who, meanwhile, is enjoying the hospitality of his friend the chef.

Seized With Paralysis Could Not Walk

Most Extraordinary Cure Effected by the Use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

To have the nervous system paralyzed, to be unable to walk and scarcely able to talk, and then to be completely cured, is not a usual experience, but Mr. Hyatt tells in this letter what he passed through. Doctors told him that his case was hopeless, and when they gave up he turned to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and obtained complete cure.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, blacksmith, St. Anns, Lincoln Co., Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything that I would say. Being only a young man I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured. I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmon J. Hodgkins, J.P.

No ailment is more dreaded than paralysis. And yet how few people realize that paralysis of the nerves is only the natural result of neglected nervous troubles.

At first you do not sleep well, have nervous headaches or indigestion, find yourself easily irritated and annoyed, can hear noises which in good health you would never notice. You do not consider yourself sick, and yet you lack the usual energy and vigour and feel out of sorts.

Six to Ten Inches of Water in the Trenches But the Boys Are Happy

Norwood Boy in Letter From the Front Tells of Excessive Rains and the Mud of the Trenches—News of Norwood

NORWOOD Nov 17.—The following extracts are from a letter from one of the boys at the front:

I must certainly say that I know what life in the trenches is like, especially at this time, for it has rained steadily for two days, and I cannot find words to express the conditions. There is at least 6 to inches of water and I am encased in mud. Still we are happy and in good part, and that's saying a good deal. At present I am wearing sand-bags for socks. But the I.O.D.E. has come to our assistances at a very good time with gifts We are on our third week in the trenches and hope to go to billets this time. Then for a good clean up.

What would I give to be at the fowl supper! I think I would give my socks to get hold of a chicken leg after the bully beef and biscuits.

The recent German atrocity (the murder of Miss Cavell) has caused a stir throughout the whole world and the boys are more determined than ever. We are just waiting for the word to get at them, there will be no holding us.

News from home and kind friends in Canada help to keep us in good spirits, for there is nothing more anxiously looked for than the daily mail bag.

Witnessed an aeroplane fight last night, in which the German was brought down between the lines. The Germans, to prevent it getting into our hands, opened fire upon it, but we learned enough to know that they were using one of our machine guns captured from the 1st contingent.

Shower For Soldiers.

The Christmas shower in the armouries for soldiers at the front was held on Friday afternoon and evening and was a great success, so many being enthusiastic about bringing cheer to the boys who are bearing such hardships for their king and country.

There are already nineteen boys at the front, who enlisted here and several more are on the way.

Each will be remembered by receiving a large box filled with a variety of delicacies, which will be a change from the bully beef and biscuits. Besides these, socks, candles, etc., were in the parcel, also specials from private individuals. Parcels were also sent to Major Beattie, chaplain for the 21st Battalion, and Lieut. Gertrude Squire, who is nursing in one of the base hospitals in France.

A consignment of socks and other necessaries were forwarded to Major Beattie for distribution.

MOTHER! YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH FROM CONSTIPATION

If Tongue is Coated, Breath Bad, Stomach Sour, Clean Liver and Bowels

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

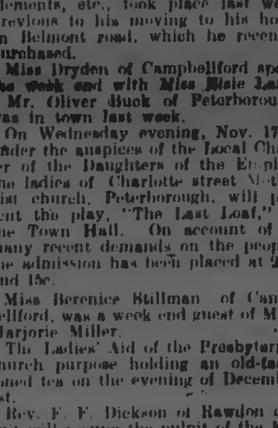
Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative," because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs"; then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company"

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S SHIRT WAIST.

By Anabel Worthington.



The use of smocking is of recent introduction and it seems to have caught popular fancy to an immense extent. It is seen on waists, skirts, children's dresses and even on the evening frocks of women and young girls. In the waist shown in the accompanying illustration the fulness which comes from the gathered front at the shoulder seam is caught in with smocking in a very pretty manner. Of course the plain gathers may be used instead if preferred.

The neck of this waist is quite open and there is a handsome collar as a finish. This is shallow across the back. The edges of the centre front closing are scalloped, but may be made straight and plain if desired. The sleeves may be full length or shorter. If long they have a band cuff and if short a more ornamental shaped cuff ending in a button at the outer side of the arm.

This waist is quite regulation and the fancy touches can be varied considerably. The edges of the scallops might be bound with a heavy cord or with ribbon and the buttons chosen among those of contrasting color. There is a strong liking for light yellow this season and gold buttons and light yellow collar and cuffs on white voile would be very pretty.

Some of the cotton fabrics also show colored dots and other designs; these are all pretty for waists and may be trimmed with whatever color is used in the figure of the material. White crochet buttons will go well with any color selected for trimming.

The waist pattern, No. 7295, is cut in sizes 34 to 44 inches bust measure. Medium size requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material and ⅝ yard of 36-inch contrasting goods.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

Hot Curling Iron Goes No More Broken Hair!

(Beauty's Mirror)

Every woman knows that continual use of the hot curling iron means brittle, blistered, parched, dead looking hair with burnt, uneven ends. There's no need for anyone using that instrument of torture now that we know what can be accomplished by the occasional application of ordinary liquid silmerine. This is not only more effective, giving the hair a fluffier and prettier curl, but tends to promote its growth, lustre and beauty. Any druggist can supply silmerine in a liquid form, and a few ounces will last many weeks, so it is quite economical to use.

The approved way is to part the hair in several strands and with a clean tooth brush apply the liquid the full length of each strand. The over-night transformation is agreeably surprising to one who has never tried this simple and harmless method

HAVE TAKEN ABOUT 50,000 PRISONERS

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The Russians continue their offensive west of Riga and are making an effort to secure control of the railway which connects Mitau with Windau. Farther south they have attacked the Germans near Smorgen, on the railway running eastward from. This attack was probably undertaken to prevent the Germans from sending reinforcements to the Riga sector. The Germans claim to have driven the Russians back across the Styr River, and to have checked the Russian attack near Smorgen with heavy losses. No claim is made to prisoners.

The German claims as to successes on the Styr are seemingly tacitly admitted in the Russian report, which says "the enemy advanced in the region of Podgacie," and "the battle before the Styr crossings continues." Petrograd apparently regards this as of little moment, for its report to-night is otherwise decidedly optimistic. It says in part:

"During the past month our troops on the western (Russian) front took Austro-German prisoners to the number of 874 officers and 49,200 men, and captured 21 guns. Its machine guns, 18 bomb throwers and three searchlights.

"On the Riga front, north of Lake Kanger, we pressed the Germans back another five or six versts (three to four miles). On the Dvina above Riga many advance-guard engagements have taken part in the region of Dalen Island.

"Near Illoukst our troops successfully surmounted the zone of artificial obstacles and occupied a portion of the cemetery in the town. The town of Dregwiaty has been bombarded by German heavy artillery.

Zeppelin Destroyed.

The Central News correspondent at The Hague says information has been received there from Frankfort that a Zeppelin has landed near Grodno, Russia, after being damaged badly by Russian artillery. The message says the dirigible was destroyed in greater part by fire, but the crew was rescued.

She Followed Orders

The lady who sat in the physician's consulting room was certainly stout. Her reason for seeing him was that he might prescribe some course of treatment which would reduce her too solid flesh, and after some consideration the doctor threw up a dietary for her, ordering her strictly to follow it and report to him in a month. At the end of that time she came back looking stouter than ever. The physician was aghast.

"Are you quite sure you ate what I ordered?" he asked.

"Everything," answered the patient. His brow wrinkled in perplexity. "And nothing else?"

"Nothing whatever, doctor, except of course, my regular meals."

Berlin Says That a Surprise Attack Failed

The Canadians May Have Been Engaged

ALLIES ON OFFENSIVE AT DARDANELLES

700 YARDS OF TRENCHES CAPTURED

News is Officially Confirmed in Despatches From Gallipoli to London---General Munro is Now in Command---Further Successes Reported From Macedonia---Germans Claim a Surprise Attack on Their Position Ended in Failure--Canadians Are Supposed to Be at That Point

ITALIANS CAPTURE IMPORTANT POSITION

PARIS, Nov. 18.—(French Official).—A concentrated French bombardment of the German trenches in the Somme region, in the vicinity of the Hebecourt Quarries, and in the Aisne district, about Autreches, was reported in to-day's official communication. A violent artillery duel is progressing also in the Bois, Givenschi and in the Artois.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—An affidavit from Dr. Cecile L. Greil, the only known American survivor of the Italian steamer Ancona, was received at the State Department to-day.

Dr. Greil gave some of the details of the submarine attack on the Ancona, but did not clear up entirely the question of the vessel's alleged flight.

Dr. Greil's affidavit described the panic on the Ancona, and asserted that shells were fired by an Austrian submarine while the passengers were disembarking. Protests to Austria regarding the sinking of the Ancona will be made by the United States as a result of Dr. Greil's affidavit.

BERLIN, Via Wireless, Nov. 18.—The loss of a trench in the Argonne was admitted officially to-day, with the explanation that the Germans evacuated it because they discovered that the French had undermined it, and were about to blow them into the air.

The British were reported foiled in an attempt at a surprise attack on the German positions on the Messines-Armentieres road.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—There was a big crowd at the station to see Major Winston Churchill, former First Lord of the Admiralty, off to the front. His popularity, from all indications, is completely restored, for he received not only an enthusiastic but an affectionate greeting when he appeared on the platform, clad in the regulation army khaki.

The Minister looked physically extremely fit, and was in high spirits.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Discussing the loss of the hospital ship Anglia, the Daily Mail says: "The mine may have been laid by one of the German submarines or by some suborned neutral vessel. It was no doubt to prepared the world for such an episode that last Friday the German wireless published a report that British hospital ships were being used for the conveyance of troops and munitions of war. The tale was entirely false, but the circulation of such a falsehood usually indicates a German intention to attempt a new variety of foul play."

LONDON, Nov. 18.—Successes are reported by the Exchange Telegraph Company for the Allied forces, which are driving northeastwards from the south of Serbia towards Strumnitza. It says the French have occupied Kosturino, in Bulgaria, which the Bulgars were said yesterday to be evacuating.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—A German official statement declares that the British troops between Armentieries and Messines attempted a surprise attack, which failed. In this the Canadians are interested, for forty thousand of our troops occupied that six-mile stretch of line for months, and were there when their position was last clearly located. The First Contingent moved into the trenches midway between Messines and Armentieres about the first of July, and two months ago were joined by the Second Division. It is probable that the Canadians were represented in the attack.

The Allied surprise attack north of Armentieres may have been more of a demonstration than a genuine attempt to take the German trenches. The Germans boasted that they had repulsed the Allies in this region the day the Allies smashed his line at other points two months ago.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—An aerial bombardment of the Italian town of Belluna, north of Venice, is reported from Rome to-day. Only a few persons were slightly wounded, and little other harm was done.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 18.—That all money subscribed for machine guns will be spent for that purpose was the assertion made this morning by Sir Sam. Hughes, Minister of Militia. "Over one thousand guns were ordered last summer," said the Minister, "on the strength of these subscriptions."

Delivery is about to commence, and in a short time we expect to get a considerable number for distribution.

The announcement was made to-day by the Minister of Militia that a number of Canadian officers now at the front and in England would be brought to Canada for instructional purposes during the war.

Fifty per cent. of the officers and non-commissioned officers serving in the permanent forces of the Dominion and on garrison duty will be given an opportunity to serve at the front.

Up to the present time the practice has been to keep these officers in Canada as instructors.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The capture by Italians of an important Austrian position on the heights overlooking Goritz from the north-west was reported officially from Rome to-day. The Austrians fought desperately and lost heavily in killed and wounded. Ineffective Austrian attacks have been made all along the Italian Isonzo and Carso fronts.

BIG DELEGATION OF FARMERS TO COUNTY COUNCIL

Announced That They Will Urge Their Representatives to Increase Peterboro' County's Patriotic Contribution—Will Assemble From All the Townships

MEETING TUESDAY NOV. 30

When the County Council meets on Tuesday, November 30th for the final sessions of the year a big deputation of farmers is expected to be present to urge a larger patriotic contribution from Peterborough County. It is learned that farmers from all sections of the county will be present, and one result will be a full discussion of what Peterborough as a county has been doing, what obligations it should assume and in other respects a complete consideration of the present demands and how they should be met. If the rural sections have been comparatively slow in recognizing the crisis confronting the whole county, it has been mainly due to a lack of general knowledge of the possible results of the war and a lack of leadership. However, the announcement of this delegation indicates that the necessary initiative has been given to a movement which will bring the rural parts of Peterborough together and will enable the farmers to express themselves before their representatives. This will likely be the feature topic of the approaching meeting of the County Council.

PATRIOTIC LEAGUE OF ASHBURNHAM HOLD ENJOYABLE TEA

The ladies of the Ashburnham Patriotic League held a very enjoyable afternoon tea in the kindergarten of the King George School yesterday. A large number of people were present, as a result of which the funds of the Society have been materially increased. During the afternoon, a short programme was given. Mrs. R. H. Parsons, president, occupied the chair, and a paper on the Balkan situation, which proved very interesting and instructive, was read by Mrs. Huycke. Addresses were given by Messrs. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., and O. M. Steer, principal of the King George School. Miss Meta Richardson rendered a vocal solo that received well merited applause, while Miss Lizzie Scott gave an instrumental number in her usual capable manner. Master Percy Luther was present and delighted all present with his recitation and song.

At the conclusion dainty refreshments were served.

ROUMANIA READY TO JUMP.

Decree Authorizes Minister of War to Requisition Supplies.

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 17.—A despatch from Bucharest to the Corriere Della Serra says that the official journal there has published a decree authorizing the Minister of War to requisition immediately all things and materials necessary to the national defence, the articles enumerated comprising metals, wearing apparel, medicines, cloth, machines for military supply factories, craft of all kinds for river traffic, railway material, and combustibles. Tradesmen are required to declare what they possess of these things and also of other prime necessities.

This is taken, says the newspaper, as an indication that Roumania sees the impossibility of maintaining her neutrality much longer.

It is the mind that makes the body rich; and as the sun breaks through the darkest clouds, so honour peereth in the meanest habit.—Shakespeare

The men of the 93rd Battalion are all excitement over the fact that the long-expected route march to Lakefield is to take place to-morrow. The outing has been looked forward to for some weeks, and all ranks are anxious to try the tramp, which represents a round trip distance of twenty miles. The march will be under active service conditions to some extent as Sergt. Cook Wride and his assistants will accompany the Battalion, and will prepare the mid-day meal for them at Lakefield. Mechanical transport, in the form of a couple of motor cars, is being provided, and the necessary supplies will be carried with the Battalion.

Sergt. Cook Wride and his assistants, and Pioneer Sergeant Baumer, and a staff of pioneers, will go out to Lakefield in advance of the battalion, and the Army Service Corps detachment here will supply a convoy.

Sergt. Geo. Grange, of the 57th Regiment Band, and caretaker of the Armouries, has received permission from Divisional Headquarters to enlist, and reported for duty this morning. Sergt. Grange will be appointed Armourer Sergeant of the 93rd, and will leave in a few days to take the necessary course at the Ross Rifle Factory. His services will be available for the 93rd Band when not engaged in armourer's work, and he will be a most valuable addition to that organization. Sergt. Grange intends to apply for a transfer of his son, Pte. Preston Grange, from the 59th Band to the 93rd, which will give the local band another splendid clarionet player.

It is interesting to note that Peterborough has already supplied 48 bandsmen for active service, the number not including members of the bugle band. Of the 35 members of the 93rd Band, 28 are residents of Peterborough, while 20 members of the 59th Band and two members of the 39th Band hail from this city. The list includes two bandmasters, Bandmaster Peryer, of the 59th, and Bandmaster Hughes, of the 93rd.

Sergt. Grange has been a member of the 57th Regiment Band for twenty five years. He is widely known as a marksman.

Lieut. F. D. Huycke has received orders from Kingston to report to the 33rd Battery to-morrow instead of on Monday, and to-night will therefore be the last opportunity for local men who want to join the battery to get in. Lieut. Huycke has already secured seven recruits in Peterborough for the battery. Three or four more recruits are expected to join to-day.

One thing that is noticeable in the 93rd Battalion is the splendid harmony and esprit de corps that is shown among all ranks and the mutual respect and liking that is displayed between the non coms. and the men. This has been evidenced in many ways, and the latest incident occurred after the march out yesterday, when the men of No. 5 Platoon presented Sergt. Wm. Jones, their platoon sergeant, with a magnificent gold-headed cane, suitably inscribed. No. 5 is composed of the latest additions to the ranks of the 93rd, and they evidently appreciate the treatment they are receiving, judging by yesterday's presentation.

"Kill Kare Camp," one of the many clubs who have spent the summers down the Otonabee River, have set a recruiting record that will keep any city organization going to equal, let alone surpass. In the three years the club has been in existence, thirteen young men have been regular members. Every man of the thirteen has volunteered for active service, and twelve were accepted, the other failing to pass the medical examination. Here is the honour roll of Kill Kare Camp:

Corp. King, 4th Battery, C.F.A. Killed in action.

Pte. Harold French, 2nd Battalion, on duty in London.

Lance-Corp. W. Batley, 21st Battalion, in France.

Pte. W. Saxby, 21st Battalion, in France.

Pte. W. McKim, 21st Battalion, in France.

Pte. Alan Harper, 21st Battalion, in France.

Sergt. Alvin Morrow, 39th Battalion in England.

Bandsman Vic Dalbia, 93rd Band

Pte. Norman Saxby, 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Ernest Parker, 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Sidney Ecobichon, 93rd Battalion.

Pte. Jim Gibson, 93rd Highlanders, C.E.F.

Bandmaster Hughes keeps the men of the 93rd well supplied with marching songs. "Do Your Bit," "Take me Back to Canada," and "When Jack Comes Back" are this week's additions. Singing while on route marches is being encouraged everywhere in the training of recruits, especially by officers who have returned from the front. It keeps the men in good spirits and makes a long march easier.

The men of the 93rd greatly enjoyed the tramp out to the rifle ranges yesterday. Extended order and skirmishing was practised by the different platoons, the large area giving a splendid opportunity for this kind of work. The battalion returned to the city by way of the Lift Lock.

The following recruits passed the medical examination for the 93rd Battalion, yesterday:

Patrick Tucker, Norwood.

Chas. Harris, Indian River.

Thos. Cassidy, R. R. No. 1, Omemee.

James Buckingham, 551 Roger Street.

The strength of the 93rd Battalion is steadily increasing. No 5 Platoon is now over strength, while Sergt. Clarke had thirteen men in the recruit class this morning. No. 6 Platoon will be organized in a few days.

The following recruiting song for the 33rd Battery was written by 12-year-old Jack Hardill of Peterborough, a brother of Gunner M. K. Hardill of the 33rd:

33rd Battery Recruiting Song.

The 33rd Battery are gathering its men
From hill-top and mountain,
From Valley and glen;
Cold water's our beverage—
We're hearty and strong,
Then come, join the 33rd and march right along.

Chorus—

Marching along, we are marching along;
Come, join the 33rd, and march right along;
Fresh air and hard drilling will make you strong;
Then come, join the 33rd and march right along.

The Kaiser's army is mustering in might;
Then get behind the guns men and join in the fight.
With revenge in our war cry and ruin our shell;
Come join the 33rd and march to Berlin

Chorus—

The Germans may outnumber us many a score,
But the gunners are valiant and ne'er will give o'er.
Our guns are the best, we'll triumph o'er the wrong
Then come, join the 33rd and march right along.

Chorus—

A new supply of uniforms, greatcoats and boots for the 93rd are expected immediately. The last shipment of clothing is again completely exhausted.

Capt. Warren of Lindsay paid a friendly visit to Lt.-Col. Johnston at the Armouries last evening.

The total strength of the 93rd Battalion, including the Lindsay and Cobourg companies, is 626 men, 350 of these being in Peterborough.

The Sergeants of the 93rd Battalion will have most comfortable mess quarters in the Armouries. The apartments formerly used as the garrison sergeants' mess will be used by the 93rd and a fine assortment of dishes and other necessities have been purchased.

A few weeks ago Dr. Robinson placed his theatre at the disposal of

SERIOUS PROBLEM BEFORE THE CITY COUNCIL

Matter of Devising Ways and Means of Caring for Peterboro's War Heroes Has Been Placed in the Hands of a Special Committee With Instructions to Report Back at an Early Date.

CIVIC RECEPTIONS

A special committee to deal with the reception and care of returning soldiers was appointed at last night's meeting of the City Council. The committee which comprises Aldermen Edgar, Dobbin, Duffus, Green, Weir and Stratton was authorized to formulate a plan whereby men returning from the front in a partial or complete state of disablement may be provided for. Mayor Buller in calling the attention of the Council to the matter said that every man returning from the front should be given a fitting reception and in addition such assistance, whether financial or otherwise, as he may require to place him on his feet. "It is one of the most serious problems that we have ever been called upon to deal with," said His Worship.

"Soldiers returning from the front will represent three classes, said Ald. Dobbin. There will be the man who will return with his health impaired, the partially disabled man, and the totally disabled man. The close of the war will see the fiercest kind of industrial competition the world has ever known. Germans are now endeavoring to regain a part of the trade they have lost. I hope, said Ald. Dobbin, that they will build a tariff wall around Canada so high that any Zeppelin will be unable to pass over it. I would suggest that the committee appointed by this Council co-operate with the Relief Association in formulating a plan for the proper disbursement of such funds as may be at the disposal of the committee. Ald. Dobbin pointed out that there was about ten thousand dollars in the treasury of the Relief Association, a portion of which could be placed at the disposal of the committee. A man who was unable to earn a maximum wage would receive a supplementary allowance.

A Reception.

Ald. Green concurred in the remarks of Mayor Buller and Ald. Dobbin. He thought that some defined plan of action should be established so that all soldiers returning from the front would be assured of a fitting welcome. These receptions would be held say every two or three weeks. Ald. Green was also of the opinion that the minister representing the church to which the soldier belonged, should be notified of his arrival and endeavour if possible to greet him at the station.

Ald. Duffus would have the Reception committee of the City Council arrange to meet all trains and also call a meeting of employers of labour and discuss the prospects of providing work for returning soldiers.

Ald. Dobbin—"Why shouldn't two disabled soldiers direct traffic on our street corners instead of two policemen?"

Ald. Edgar was in favour of a reception once a month.

Mayor Buller informed the Council that he had notified the station officials at both the C.P.R. and G.T.R. stations to be on the lookout for returning soldiers and if necessary summon an ambulance or a cab for their use and have the cost charged to the city.

The Council decided to leave the matter of providing a suitable reception for returning soldiers in the hands of the Reception committee, which is composed of Ald. F. H. Dobbin (chairman), Ald. Edgar, Ald. Stratton and Ad. Saunders.

GOOD WORK OF CHAPTER

The 57th Chapter, I.O.D.E. have packed 183 boxes of Christmas cheer for the soldiers who have left Peterborough. Nine prisoners of war in Germany were each sent a box containing socks, Christmas cake, apples, chocolate and gum. Boxes were also sent to aviators, transport men, remounts and all officers. An order has been sent for four boxes of apples to be shipped to the 4th Battery in France and five barrels to be shipped to the Mounted Rifles and Infantry in England.

The Chapter desire to thank Mr. W. J. Oke for a barrel of apples, Mrs Donald Shook for chocolate, Ald. Edgar for paper and twine and Mrs. George Burnham and Mrs. Soden for paper, and merchants who gave boxes for packing.

ROCK LAKE HUNT CLUB WERE NEAR INTERNMENT CAMP

The Rock Lake Hunt Club were within four miles of the Government's internment camp for enemy aliens near the Canadian Northern line in the Parry Sound district. Already the foreigners detained there have built five or six miles of permanent high way. The hunters had excellent weather and obtained a full complement of deer. There were many other parties located near them, but the deer were plentiful enough for everybody. The members of Rock Lake Club were R. A. Elliott, C. S. McClelland, Jas. Storey, Ken. McClelland, R. J. Soden, H. B. Taylor, Tom Mitchell of Cobourg, Geo. Mitchell of Toronto, Malcolm Cook of Stirling, Robt. McCamus of Keene, H. S. Barnard of Hamilton and Charlie Cheverill.

NOTHING SACRED.

A despatch received this morning stated that Austrian aeroplanes dropped bombs on Rome near the Vatican. This shows that the Teutons hold nothing sacred—nor Pope, nor priest, nor nurse, nor woman, nor child, nor hospital, nor anything human, not even the most sacred. They do the works of the devil with a sang froid and thoroughness that their infernal mentor and master might envy. It is difficult to conceive that anything bearing the form of humanity can become so diabolically denatured. The instruments of the spirit behind all this outrage must be crushed, and the call comes to everybody to lend a hand; some in the battle line, and everybody else in his or her own form of capacity of contribution of service towards drawing the teeth of the dragon and ending the reign of organized inhumanity and brutality.

PATRIOTIC DIRT.

Even the fertile soil of the Canadian West is patriotic and gives liberally to the cause. A year ago every member of the Grain Growers' Association of Saskatchewan promised the yield of one acre of ground to the Patriotic Acre Fund. As a result of this pledge, and its only partial fulfillment, these farmers hav already donated 120,000 bushels of wheat. This, ground into flour, will amount to nearly five million pounds, or 24,000 barrels of flour For this year, with only a portion of the members heard from, 4,000 acres have ben subscribed. At a yield of 25 bushels of wheat to the acre—mere child's play for a northwest acre—the yield for next year available for patriotic funds, will amount to 100,000 bushels with a large number of "Grain Growers" to be yet heard from After all, this is easy giving—one acre out of wheat fields running from 100 up to 500, and even as high as 2,000 acres of wheat, is a very small proportion of the total crop. While the Grain Growers are to be credited with doing a great deal for the strengthening of patriotic funds, they have not, by a long shot, reached the point of sacrifice, which many who give less, but with less means, are reaching every day in every part of Canada.

LESSENING AND GROWING RESOURCES.

There are two things that give us encouragement in continuing to wage war; one is the steady weakening of the forces, material and moral, of the Teutonic allies; the other is the steadily growing powers, not only of resistance but of assault, of the Entente Allies. Right Hon. C. F. Masterman, late secretary of the British Treasury, after quoting figures and facts to sustain his conclusions, says:
